THE LIBRARY is open Friday evenings. Friday night is traditionally a night devoted to social activities after a week of class work. Sunday is a night when students begin to return to work after a restful weekend. Faculty members begin to prepare for the week's classes Sunday evenings.

If a choice is necessary, we would prefer Sunday evenings to Friday evenings.

Our fall editorial fell on deaf ears.

THE IDEA OF letting our three story library containing more than 500,000 volumes stand dark and still in the quiet Sunday evening, is not in step with the idea of a progressive, first-rate university.

We note that a new head librarian was recently appointed. We welcome Mr. N. O. Rush to Florida State and his new post. We hope that he will find it possible to formulate a more liberal policy in regard to giving students and faculty the opportunity of studying on Sunday evening.

Pianist Reveals Bach's Spark

By MIKE HIPPS

We spent a most enjoyable Sunday afternoon in Longmire Lounge at Phi Mu Alpha's monthly Coffee Concert. This particular concert was under the joint sponsorship of Phi Mu Alpha and M.T.N.A., and in every way maintained the high standard set by the previous programs of this series.

THE PROGRAM was opened with the first of Joseph Haydn's London Trios, performed by Carol Terpening, flute, Dorsey Stuart, oboe; and Bob Canealousi, 'cello. This is charming, refined music, and it was played in just that manner. Miss Terpening and Mr. Stuart turned in a well-conceived, well-controlled performance, and always stayed within the bounds of the music.

We felt that the 'cello, while it provided the rhythmic vitality which was at times missing in the flute and oboe was a little too "ever-present." The performance was marked by a fine feeling for ensemble and some really beautiful sounds. We felt that Miss Terpening's second movement was her finest flute playing to date.

AFTER THE customary "coffee break," Miss Phylis Rappeport played the Bach Goldberg Variations. This is a piece of monumental proportions and a test for any pianist's musicianship, technic and sheer stamina. Miss Rappeport demonstrated beyond a shadow of a doubt that she was capable of meeting this challenge.

This reviewer has never before seen an audience quite so caught up in the music, so intent on what was happening at the keyboard. It were as if (and I do hope this doesn't sound trite) Sebastian Bach, the craftsman were showing us his handiwork, leading us through each cadence; helping us grasp each hidden nuance.

MEN HAVE ALWAYS felt that mere language is miserably insufficient to express the most noble thoughts and feelings of the human race. That is why art came into being. Sebastian Bach was capable of expressing that little spark of Nobility and Aspiration which is in us all. We thank Miss Rappeport for revealing that spark to us for a few moments.

Story Of Streets Is Revealed

By LAWRENCE PERKINS

Greetings!

NOW THAT OUR streets have oames, the story can be told.

Not that I saw it happeo — it is ooe of the sorrows of my life that I didn't — but some of the details are obvious to aoyone. I leave the rest as a subject for a doctoral dissertation.

Take the checkerboard system of parking space which appeared on the Student Center lot over the Thanksgiving holidays, and gives us the only parking lot on earth where you can park either zigged or zagged and still be inside the white lines. Obviously a foreman took his crew of painters to work early one morning and eouldn't decide where to start working.

HE DITHERED around until the painters — losing six dollars an hour plus overtime — lost all patience. "Nuts, I'm starting!" said an Irish painter named Zebuwitz. "Paint the lines zigged, this way," said the foreman. "Nuts," said Zebuwitz "a guy like you wouldn't know which way they go," so he started doing them zagged, that way. Some of the other painted lines like the foreman said, and some of them followed Zebuwitz because, after all, he was secretary of the union.

LIKE I SAY, some of these things ean be figured out almost at once. Others are more difficult, and I have had to interpolate a few details here and there. For instance, let's suppose that the fellows who laid out the lot behind West Hall were named Smith aod Jones. It seems that none of the lot-layers-out had any measuring tools, so they just used what eame handy. Smith aod Jones were actually a pair of hard up truck drivers, and they brought their trucks along to measure the spaces. Smith started on the building side of the lot, and Jones began working on the far side.

Jones had a clogged carburetor on his truck, and that made him take a little longer. Smith finished his side, and started working back on the other side toward Jones. When Jones painted his last line, they saw that there wasn't room for another Mack truck between his line and Jooes' last line. They stood scratching their heads a minute. "Ah, it don't matter," growled Smith. "They don't nobody got this many Mack trucks nohow." So they left it just that way, and sure enough, nobody ever has filled the lot with Mack trucks.

IN THE MEANTIME, an impoverished student named Elmer Thorple was laying out the spaces on Seminole Laoe, the cafeteria, and the library. He was too poor to own his own car, so he had borrowed the Cadillac station wagon of his rich uncle Ignatius Elmer was a little nearsighted, so just to be safe he left a couple of feet between the front bumper and the next line.

While Thorple was happily painting and singing, a pair of graduating seniors were working out their cap and gown fees by painting the spaces on University Circle. An Arts and Sciences major named Brown worked up from the Old Library, and an Education major (naturally) named Johnson worked from the gate arouod by the Education building. Brown had a porsche, and Johnson used a Topolino.

JUST AS JOHNSON got to about the third lamp past the Education building, there was a dreadful catastrophe. Smith and Jones had finished their job behind West Hall and came dashing up to the business office to get paid. That carburetor was giving Jones trouble again, so Smith was out in froot. He raced past Longmire and — stranger to the eampus that he was — made an illegal left turn into University Circle.

The speeding Mack truck smashed squarely into poor Johnson's Topolino just as Johnson was ready to mark out another space. His little car was crushed like an accordion, and Johnson himself sustained a nasty concussion. In his dazed condition, before anybody could stop him, he leapt out and painted a space to suit the new size of his car, and then somehow managed to move the wreck down a length and paint another space before Jones arrived to help Smith get Johnson under control and take him away. Those two square parking spaces remain as a monument to poor Johnson's misfortune.

Music Events Come Fast And Furious

By DIXON REDDITT

AT THIS time each year musical events happen fast and furiously with recitals and major concerts practically every night. This presents an obvious problem: every event eannot have extended coverage.

While this situation takes its toll among reviewers and those reviewed, sometimes it is just better this way. We do our beat.

The first concert that attracts our attention is the recent Women's Glee Club concert. This presentation, which featured more worthwhile musie than we have ever heard this group program, also showed a marked improvement over the performance level of previous concerts.

PERHAPS PEOPLE in both choral and instrumental groups give more of themselves in performance of music which they consider in some way superior. At any rate the "sound" was tremendous.

We enjoyed everything except Debussy. "The Blessed Damozel," which despite skillful dancing by Nancy Smith and a general three-ring circus set-up, remained for us rather dull; we weren't really thrown into fits of ecstasy by George Roth's arrangemeots of "Stormy Weather" and "Wunderbar" although we thought that Thomas Wright's "Symphony" was good writing in the prevalent Hollywood manner.

THERE IS NOT much point in mentioning the performance of Jennie Tourel in her recent eoncert. She is a truly musicianly singer as has been noted by critics in London and New York, etc.

We might point out however that Miss Tourel's voice is no longer young. As fas as "having heart to spare" as we read in her advance publicity, at the Phi Mu Alpha-Sigma Alpha Iota reception after the concert, she didn't strike us as being Miss Personality of 1958 (and we didn't expect her to be effusive).

But then perhaps her tiredness and the failure of some of her School of Music colleagues to present themselves at the reception are mitigating factors.

student in piano, gava a program which while not note perfect, was warmly received by the typically small erowd in attendanee. There were many reasons for this reaction.

Miss Counts had a thorough grasp of all her musical materials, although she did a distinctly superior job on the three delightful preludes by John Boda, and the major work, Schumann, Kreisleriana, Op. 16. She had a pleasantly healthy sound at the keyboard while playing medium loud to loud.

We should have liked to hear her extend her dynamie range in both directions, although we definitely prefer a medium loud to the pianississimo we have heard several pianists attempt lately.

LITTLE MAN ON CAMPUS By Dick Bibler

Students Defend FSU Journalism School

TO THE EDITOR:

In writing this letter to the Flambeau, I sincerely bope that copies of this paper occasionally do come ioto the hands of the members of the Board of Control, as they should, if those gentlemen are to make any pretense at keeping their fingers oo the pulse of student opinion in the state universities which they administer.

LAST FRIDAY'S decisioo by the Board to abolish the School of Journalism at Florida State University is one which I find most shocking.

I came to this campus a year ago after being attracted here by the reputation of the school, its faculty and the opportunities it offered.

NOW ALL of those things, as a result of the Board's action, will soon be gone.

If the School of Music or the football team were suddenly done away with there would be immediate loud cries from the students and their spokesman, the student newspaper.

But Friday, unfortunately, there were none.

ASIDE FROM the fact that is going to be somewhat embarrassing—to say the least—for journalism graduates of this university to give as a reference a school no longer in existence, it is also disturbing to me the light in which the decisioo was made.

From all facts available, it would seem the Board already had its mind made up on the matter, and calling in the evaluating committee was only a token gesture.

ASIDE FROM the fact that the state will bave to bear the expense of expanding journalism facilities at the University of Florida, it seems to be that the Board also committed one other basic fallacy in their decisioo: that of underestimating the tremendous growth of education—in all phases—both in this state and throughout the nation.

Abolishing the school here now will only mean that they will probably come ereeping back in a few years and sheepishly institute another program in its place. In their apparent zeal to eut corners and economize it would seem that they lost sight of the forest for the trees.

WITH THE continuing g[...] of education in Florida, it [...] seem that it is soon going t[...] come impossible for any [...] given university to cater ex[...]sively to one particular fie[...] learning. Board Made Wrong Decision On School

TO THE EDITOR:

The State Board of Control this morning (Friday) beard a proposal to abolish the School of Journalism at Florida State University, or rather to "consolidate" it with the School of Journalism at the University of Florida.

THE PROPOSAL is that of a three-man committee which made a hurried investigation of the two schools recently. The proposal is based principally on the fact that there is unnecessary duplication in maintaining journalism facilities at both the University of Florida and FSU. And since the better physical facilities exist at the Gainesville school, they maintain the school should be continued there.

This reasoning is logical, but superficially so. First of all, duplication may not be right, but what about the duplication of music and other facilities at the two schools? Also, the facilities at the U. of F. are not such that they could take care of the entire state. They are reasonably up to date, but small. Rather than try to expand them, the more practical method would be be to build new journalism facilities from the ground up, from a unified plan.

THE FACT ALSO remains that the committee did not make a thorougb investigation of the setup at FSU. They [...] attention only to physical fa[...]ties. While these are impor[...] there should have also [...] some attempt at evaluatio[...] techniques and teaching m[...]ods. The committee didn't [...] to any students, practi[...] avoided many of the profes[...] declined to examine textbo[...] and made only token visits [...] few classroom sessions.

The Board of Control sh[...] look deeper before taking [...] actioo on the committee's p[...]posal.

FOR ONE THING, the [...]centration of state gove[...] in Tallahassee is a definite [...] in advantage to journa[...] study. The school has made [...]tensive use of this as a [...] aspect which has been in[...]porated into many of the [...]nalism courses, and is the [...]ject of another entire cours[...]

Also, more warning should [...] given before just wiping ou[...] entire FSU operation. It w[...] mean that approximately [...] journalism students would [...] it necessary to transfer to [...] U. of F. or elsewhere. And [...]fessors who have given as m[...] as ten years to building up [...] FSU school would suddenly [...] themselves unwanted, [...]ured and unemployed.

Policemen Park Too?

TO THE EDITOR:

Are the parking regulations on this campus to be enforced just to students with the faculty and campus policemen exempt from all such regulations? If not—why then are policemen allowed to park all day in a two hour blue sticker parking zone. It seems to me also [...] this is just one instance w[...] regulations and laws on [...] campus are to be applied o[...] to some while others are [...] empt from the rules and re[...]lations for some reason.

It's About Time

Needless to say it's about time Florida State had an athletic director and put all intercollegiate sports under a single head.

The 13 month interim since Dr. Howard Danforth resigned until Friday morning when Tom Nugent was named the new A. D. has left Florida State standing still.

And, of course, no progress was made.

Progress is a must in any phase of life, be it a single person, college or university, or a business organization. Without it brings decadence, a retarding or at best just standing still.

It's an unhealthy sign.

The move, according to assistant athletic director Don Veller has put FSU on an even keel with other schools. You must have bosses regardless of the organization."

Nugent and Veller will officially take office May 1.

RESPONSIBLE FOR EVERYTHING

Coach Nugent will be the head man and responsible for everything in the athletic program. There are some who may say that the other sports (excluding football) will be left out in the cold But I'm sure that won't be the case.

I haven't had the opportunity to speak with Coach Nugent since his appointment. Under the old set-up, every coach was in charge of his own particular sport and answered to the athletic committee.

Now they have a director and an assistant to aid them in their problems.

Nugent must now be ready to answer for all sports—not only football

"There are a lot of things to be worked out" said Veller, "and it'll take a little time."

VELLER EXCELLENT CHOICE

Everyone seems to be of the opinion that Florida State couldn't have found a better man for assistant A. D. than Dr. Veller There is no doubt that the former football and golf coach has the respect of all who work with him, or come in contact with him.

A star halfback from Indiana, and a full professor of the physical education department, Veller will continue teaching classes, both undergraduate and graduate levels in addition to his new duties.

The administration has taken a step forward—and in the right direction.

SEMINOLE SLANTS. Before Friday night's game with Miami I asked pitcher Frank Slusser to pitch rather quickly and not drag out the game. When I saw him Saturday at Seminole Field he said it wasn't his fault the game lasted almost three hours. The blame belonged on the rest of the team for scoring 18 runs. After all he had done his share by not allowing a hit . . . Jack ... seems to have been having his share of tough luck. Two of his losses are the result of errors and the other by a questionable call by the umpire in the first Florida game. . . . He still has the second best ERA on the club. Slusser heads the pitchers. . . . Outfielder Mike Copps appears to have broken out of his slump in the recent Miami series. Copps collected three hits in each game. His first home run of the season Friday night was really ... Gerry Philp leads the Seminoles in circuit clouts with three, two coming with the bases full . . . For an oddity how about Miami pinch-hitter Maury Guttman collecting two hits in the ... inning of Saturday's game. . . . Miami left fielder Skip Bertman was a teammate of FSU halfback Lenny Levy at Miami Beach High School. Levy was a shortstop. Bertman the catcher. . . . Miami Coach Whitey Campbell hasn't changed his starting line-up since the season started. . . . May 1 will be the last time for FSU track fans to see the thinclads in action here in Tallahassee. It'll be the final appearance for Mike Conley, Jack Terwilliger and Jerry Henderson. The meet is at night with Miami the opposition. . . . Managing Editor Alan Whitmarsh and I were answering to the name of "scoop" Friday and Saturday by virtue of the Flambean's breaking the story on the appointment of Nugent as athletic director.

Had To Change My Style-Slusser

By BEN BALSER
Assistant Sports Editor

Frank Slusser, who has perhaps logged more pitching hours during his lifetime than any other collegiate hurler in the nation, became the proud owner of the first no-hit, no-run game in FSU history, Friday night against the Miami Hurricanes.

In the victory, his third of the season, Slusser allowed four walks and struck out eight men including the final three batters in the ninth inning.

The bespectacled righthander has allowed only three runs in 29 innings for a classy 0.93 earned run average.

Slusser, who will graduate in June, said that he realized the 'Canes were hitless by the fifth inning, but that the Miami club did not start to pressure him until the seventh.

"They were trying their best to get a hit, so I had to change my style the last three innings," claimed Slusser.

"The batters were starting to crowd the plate, so I began to waste my first pitch to move them back or keep them loose. I suppose I came a little too close a couple of times." (Slusser hit two men in a row in the eighth.)

FELT STRONG

The senior righthander asserted that he felt strong in the ninth inning and could still throw his fast one by the batters. As far as lucky charms go, Slusser claimed his only charm was his fiancee, Sissy Abbott, who was in the stands and attends every game.

"Although this may sound trite," said Slusser, "I could have never done it unless I had eight good men backing me up.

"Bill Westendick caught a good game and the fielding was tremendous." Westendick, a soph catcher behind John Sheppard, has caught all three of Slusser's wins this year.

Slusser pitched his first game in organized baseball at the age of 13. His father, who was the manager and catcher of a semi-pro team in his hometown, Nescopeck, Pa., gave Frank his first chance.

The elder Slusser caught Frank for five years until Frank left for FSU. As far back as Slusser was able to remember, his father had him playing catch.

Mr. Slusser comes down from Pennsylvania every year to see Frank pitch.

Slusser played on the high school varsity for four years and was named the Athelte of the Senior Class. During his senior year he hurled two no-hitters, but he never expected to pitch one in college.

5-1 FROSH RECORD

As a pitcher for the FSU frosh, he notched a 5-1 record. His sophomore year was a slow one and he had no record Last season he had a 2-1 mark.

Every summer Frank has played on some amateur baseball team. Last summer he played in a top flight league in Canada and finished with a 6-4 record.

The Pennsylvanian says that Rudy Eigle, another senior righthander for the Seminoles, has helped him develop a good curve ball. Besides the curve and a live fast ball, Slusser has also been working with a palm ball.

As for the future, Slusser plans to get married after graduation, and then might return to school for his masters degree. He will graduate with a bachelors degree in physical education.

Although he has not signed with any major league club, Frank has been approached by many teams including the Chicago White Sox, Cleveland Indians and the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Baseballers Split Series

Florida State's up and down base... team split a weekend series with the University of M...mi Hurricanes winning Friday night's affair, 18-0 beh..d the no-hit pitching of Frank Slusser, and dropping the Saturday game, 12-7 despite out-hitting their opponents 14-13.

The Seminoles were at their best when Slusser, a senior righthander mowed down Hurricane after Hurricane to chalk up the first no-hitter in Florida State history.

While Slusser was keeping the Hurricanes in check the Seminole batters were having a heyday rapping out 14 hits including seven extra base blows.

COPPS HOMERS

Mike Copps, Seminole rightfielder, led the ... parade with a towering hom..., a double and a single in four trips to the plate.

Also smashing out a long home run was third baseman Dale Koch. Koch's drive carried about 360 feet in left-center field.

In the RBI department Copps chalked up four while Charlie Rogers, Ernie Lanford and Koch each had two

ERRORS COSTLY

Saturday's game was a complete reversal of form for the Seminoles as they committed three costly errors, two of them in the ninth inning

Trailing by two runs in the ninth inning, the Hurricanes scored seven runs, six of them unearned, to gain a split in the two game series.

Leading the FSU attack was Gerry Philp and Copps with three hits apiece. Rogers and Dick Howser each drove in two runs.

Hiles Paces Frosh Tankers To 44-42 Win Over Bolles

Bucky Hiles freshman swimmer from Atlanta won two events Friday night in Jacksonville as the Florida State frosh downed Bolles Academy, 44-42.

The victory came to the Seminoles as they won the last event of the meet, the freestyle relay The relay team was composed of Gregg Smith, Gordon Sussman, Tom Sharkey and Bill W...

Paxton Briley, another standout for the FSU frosh, finished third in the 200 yd individual medley and won the 100 yd. breaststroke.

Hiles is rated by Frosh coach Alf King and varsity coach Bim Stults as one of the most promising swimmers they have had for a long time

Earlier this year in the Florida AAU meet, Hiles won the 200 and 400 yd. freestyle events.

Both times he beat Dave Calkin, the SEC champ and record holder in these events.

Tennis Team Meets Georgia

Florida State's tennis team opens a three-match road trip Thursday against the University of Georgia at Athens.

The Seminoles will be looking for victory number nine, and their second straight over the Bulldogs this season. FSU defeated Georgia, 5-4, in their opening match.

Tech's Yellow Jackets had little difficulty blanking the netters, 9-0, in Tallahassee while Mercer fell 9-0, to the Seminoles.

Saturday the netmen drubbed Stetson, 8-1, in their final home appearance. The Seminoles swept all six singles events to clinch the match early.

It gave the netters an 8-4 record on the home courts and assured FSU of at least breaking even for the season.

Show Explains Modern Dance Techniques

The "why's" of modern dance will be clarified for audiences when the Theater Dance Group presents "An Evening of Dance in the Studio" tonight, tomorrow, and Thursday at 8:15 p.m.

An informal dance program in which the techniques of modern dance are explained and the audience encouraged to ask questions, "An Evening of Dance in the Studio" will enable those attending to view future programs with more understanding, according to Nellie Bond Dickinson, director.

FORMAL NEXT YEAR

"Since we did the dances for Amahl and the Night Visitors and "Oklahoma!" last semester, we've decided to present an informal program instead of our usual formal one this time," said Miss Dickinson, explaining that the formal "Evening of Dance" will again be presented next year.

She feels this year's program, "for which there is a great need," will fulfill the dual purpose of explaining dance techniques and providing entertainment.

Scene of the program will be in the dance studio of the Women's Gymnasium. It will be repeated on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons for the benefit of modern dance students.

"We encourage everyone to get their tickets (which are free) at the Westcott ticket office," continued Miss Dickinson, explaining that audiences are being purposely limited to 200 for each performance, in order that "people will feel free to ask questions."

Assistant director for the production is Nancy Smith; Lester Bruce is musical director. Demonstrations and dances will be done by members of the Theater Dance Group.

The program will be divided into three parts, the first two explaining techniques and composition of the modern dance. The third section will feature an analysis of a completed dance entitled "Jazz," choreographed and explained by Nancy Smith.

'AN EVENING OF DANCE' is the title of the presentation by the Theater Dance Group, to be offered tonight, tomorrow and Thursday night.

recommended that the names of poll workers and committee members should be posted on the student government bulletin board. It also urged that the Secretary of Elections personally impress all poll workers with the importance of performing their duties.

The hearing, which began shortly after 9 p.m., lasted until after midnight. A crowd of nearly 50 heard Moore and Hutchins argue for an hour and forty-five minutes. Despite the women's closing hours, there was still a large audience to hear the court decision after over an hour of deliberation.

Political observers noted that this was the first time in the history of student government that the presidential election had ever been subjected to Honor Court investigation. Moore pointed out to the court that their decision will probably be studied in similar cases in the years to come.

Prize-Winning Chemist Speaks Twice Thursday

Nobel prize winner and distinguished nuclear chemist Dr. Harold Urey will give two lectures here this week.

At 8:15 Thursday evening he will speak in Westcott Auditorium. The public is invited to this talk, which will be geared to the layman.

He will also speak to the members of the Society of Sigma Xi at 4 p.m. that same day in the Library Lecture Hall.

A personal friend of President Strozier, Dr. Urey will be a guest in the Strozier home.

Dr. Urey was awarded the Nobel Prize in chemistry in 1934 for his discovery of the heavy isotopes of hydrogen called deuterium.

HIGHEST HONOR

That same year, he received the highest honor in American science, the Willard Gibbs medal.

Because of his work in the nuclear field, Dr. Urey was selected to head one of the three main projects in the Manhattan Project, which was responsible for the development of the atomic bomb.

The Martin A. Ryerson Distinguished Service Professor of chemistry in the University of Chicago's Institute for Nuclear Studies, Urey is continuing his research, developing techniques for estimating variations in the earth's climates through the geological ages, and theories to explain the chemical nature of the origin of the universe.

Born in Walkerton, Indiana, in 1893, he graduated from the University of Montana in 1917, with a major in zoology.

The following year he spent as a research chemist in industry before returning to the University of Montana as an instructor in chemistry. He proceeded with graduate studies in chemistry, receiving his PhD from the University of California in 1923.

ATOMS IN DENMARK

In 1923 and 1924, Urey studied atomic physics under Niels Bohr in Copenhagen. He spent the next five years as an instructor in Johns Hopkins University, then joined the department of chemistry at Columbia.

At Columbia, Urey began developing the techniques which led to the discovery of new heavy isotopes of such elements as hydrogen, oxygen, nitrogen, carbon and sulfur. It was for this work that Urey later was given the Nobel Prize and the Willard Gibbs medal.

Dr. Urey is now recognized as a distinguished nuclear chemist in European countries as well as in the United States.

He has been cited and awarded by numerous European scientific societies, among them the Royal Society of London, which awarded him the Davey medal in 1940.

HONORARIES

He is a member of the Royal Society of Sweden, the Royal Academy of Sciences, Literature and the Fine Arts of Belgium, the French Chemical Society, and of the Royal Irish Society.

After World War II Dr. Urey joined the University of Chicago Institute for Nuclear Studies and has spent much of his time working with other nuclear scientists who were attempting to find some international political means for peaceful settlement of differences.

Speaking and writing with missionary fervor, he has declared that there is only one defense against the atomic bomb—a political defense.

At the same time, he has advocated that the development of the use of atomic energy be furthered.

RESEARCH

Dr. Urey is continuing his research on isotopes and at the same time has joined his scientific colleagues in developing theories about the original chemical elements and the way in which they united to form the present solar system.

As a teacher, Urey is noted for his interest in his graduate students, his close association with their work, and his concern for recognition of their abilities and achievements.

Younger scientists, working under his direction, have been able to create amino acids, the primary materials of proteins, in the laboratory, under conditions similar to those postulated to have existed when life emerged some three billion years ago on the earth. Others have measured the changing temperatures of the Pacific Ocean.

Dr. Urey married Frieda Daum in 1926 and has four children, three girls and one boy.

ELECTION CANDIDATES MUST FILE BY TODAY

Candidates for campus political offices must file declarations by 5 p.m. today in order to run for class and court offices to be elected in the May 6 primary, according to Sandra Rosenberg, acting secretary of elections.

Expense estimates must be filed by next Tuesday at 5 p.m. Names of prospective candidates who have not submitted this estimate to the elections secretary will be omitted from the official ballot, Miss Rosenberg emphasized.

Campaigning begins that day at 5 p.m. As stated in the Election Regulations, election placards are to be placed only on designated bulletin boards, and only one poster is to be placed on each side of the board. Posters are limited in size to 15 by 17 inches.

Polling places for the primary will be Westcott, Bryan bus stop, Seminole Club, Student Center, and library. These will be open for voting from 9 a. m. until 5 p. m., while the West Hall poll will be open only from 9 a. m until 2 p. m. Sophomore Council members will man the polls.

The elections committee members, who are responsible for opening and closing polls and collecting ballots, are: Betty Fernandez, Cathy Stevens, Evie Morris, Grace Taylor, Nora Nell Hardy, Steve Dunlap, Dave Morris, Allen Howell, and Tom Willard.

The Chief Justice of the Honor Court is present during tabulation of the votes, Miss Rosenberg pointed out.

Students Offered Case Worker Jobs

For the first time undergraduate students are being offered jobs as case workers with the Florida Department of Public Welfare.

Twelve students who are presently completing their junior year are to be selected from Florida colleges for an eight week summer program with the State Department, according to Dr. William L. Leap of the School of Social Welfare.

"These jobs are intended to give students experience with actual cases and offer future job inducements. The student, however, is not obligated to work with the state upon graduation," he said.

Students working for the department will receive $200 per month but must furnish automobiles. A reimbursement of ten cents per mile will be given.

Areas of placement have not been determined but will be announced at a later date, according to the student's home residence and possible work area.

Other requirements include a "C" average or above, in addition to good health.

Applications and further information may be obtained from Dr. William L. Leap, 112 Social Welfare Building. The deadline for application is May 1.

Three Convicted On Theft Charges

Three students were found guilty of thefts by the Honor Court trials during the past two weeks.

In the first case a male student was convicted of stealing books from the University Bookstore. The Honor Court's recommendation for immediate suspension was passed and approved by the faculty review board.

The second case involved a woman student who was observed wearing stolen items on campus. Other articles were found in her room. She admitted guilt and was suspended immediately.

In the final case, money planted by the Tallahassee police in the Men's Gym was found in the possession of a male student. For the act of petty larceny the student was fined $50 by the city police and was turned over to the University for further action. The case was referred to the Honor Court by the Dean of Men and the student was suspended.

Ten Schools May Attend SUSGA Meet

Florida State University will be host school for the Southern University Student Government Association's fifth annual conference Friday and Saturday.

The two-day meet of campus leaders from "larger Southern schools" will participate in "an exchange of ideas on student government," according to Moore, president-elect of the FSU student body and president of SUSGA.

Among the schools invited to send delegates are Vanderbilt, North Carolina, Miami, U of F, Tennessee, Alabama, Auburn, Mississippi Southern, Georgia Tech and Emory.

The reason for the inclusion of only larger institutions, Moore explained, is that their student government associations have a measure of similarity, and thus experience many of the same problems.

Registration of delegates begins Friday at 4 in the Longmire Lobby and continues till 8. Arrangements have been made for all the attending students to stay in sorority or fraternity houses.

The first general session Friday night will welcome delegates to the campus and explain the purpose of the meet.

The main work of the conference will be done in four subcommissions meeting on Saturday. Attending universities have been asked to send at least one delegate to serve in each of these groups, discussing publications, judicial branch, executive and legislative branches.

Group leaders will be Bucky Canon, editor-elect of the Flambeau; Buck Bryan, new Chief Justice of the Honor Court; Jim Apthorp, men's vice president elect; and Moore.

At the concluding general session Saturday, the order of business includes election of new officers of the organization and consideration of new member schools.

A program of entertainment plus the chance to participate in campus activities will be afforded the conference-goers.

Starlight Serenade Slated Tomorrow

The first of the annual spring Starlight Serenades, an old tradition on the Florida State University campus, will be held tomorrow evening, in the open amphitheater, starting at 8:15.

In previous years, the weekly serenades have lured large audiences of students and townspeople to the ampitheater as strains of stirring marches, swingy ballads, and familiar light classics flooded over the campus.

Helping to continue the concerts are four student guest conductors, winners of competitive tryouts for this honor, according to Manley Whitcomb, Symphonic Band conductor. They are Robert Baden, Fred Grumley, Phillip Posey and Merriman Hipps.

Negative Aspects Of Life Featured In Literature—Flory

Trends in most publicized literature have exploited the negative aspects of life, Dr. C[illegible] Flory, professor of English, told 18 Phi Beta Kappa members at their initiation yesterday a[illegible] noon in the Longmire Lounge.

Literature themes contain feelings of frustration, despondency, and neuroticism, and Dr. F[illegible] pointed out that the trend is making life worse instead of better.

Dr. Flory who spoke on, "The Green Towers of Affirmation," feels that we need more "hope and courage," and must be more positive.

LABELED VITAL

"The alarming thing is not that the exploitation of these things (frustration and despondency) constitutes the fashion in literature, but that the exploitation is so often so mistakenly labeled vital and virtuous," the professor continued.

There is a sympathy for those defying authority, such as juvenile delinquents, but Dr. Flory feels that this "misconceived sympathy with the negative is treacherous and destructive."

The 16 honor students were told that three-fourths of all freshmen are neurotic and frustrated, and are that way because they "think it fashionable."

An explanation for this feeling is that people expect life to be easier than it is. The Phi Beta Kappa members did not expect life to be easy, and their membership in the national honorary fraternity shows that they are not taking the easy way out, Dr. Flory said.

EXPECT DANGER

Dr. Flory told the students to expect danger and difficulty and disappointment" but "to lift up your eyes unto the hills; to set your gaze and pathway toward the green towers of affirmity."

During the initiation the Faculty Trio from the School of Music played "Rondo Movement" from the Trio in E Flat by Beethoven.

New members initiated into Phi Beta Kappa included 12 seniors: Rita Ann Bailey, Glenda Louise Briscoe, Patricia Jane Dolores Cale, Edward Myer Dolan, Sallye Delle Caney, Marie Matilde Hume, Barbara Jane Johnson, Joan Jones, Janice M. Kaminis, Mary Katherine McKeown, Robert Sawyer Meigs, and Joe Neggers.

Also initiated were one junior, Thomas Peter Bennett, and Dianne Carrow Rowe and Loretta Joan Bryan, from the classes of 1957 and 1955.

Sidney G. Kennedy was initiated for Gamma of Georgia, Emory University.

Dr. J. Russell Reaver, president of Alpha of Florida, was in charge of the initiation.

According to Valda Mock [illegible] tary of Alpha, all the stude[illegible] initiated are majoring or hav[illegible] jored in various departmen[illegible] the College of Arts and Sci[illegible] and have maintained a hig[illegible] dard of scholastic achieve[illegible]

Student Honor Poll Results Show Praise For System

Journalism School Goes

Collins Refuses To Ask Reversal Of Board Move

By CHARLET POITEVINT
Flambeau Editor

Attempts of students in the School of Journalism to save the school for Tallahassee failed this week when Governor LeRoy Collins refused to ask the Board of Control to reverse its decision.

The students intend to carry their protest to the Board.

The Board ruled last week that Florida should have one journalism school to be located in Gainesville. The FSU School of Journalism will function until 1959.

Governor Collins told approximately 50 students wearing black arm bands in protest of the Board's action that consolidation of the two average schools of journalism would enable the one to become better.

OTHERS CONSIDERED

Collins said that other duplication in the universities was being considered by the Board for consolidation, but refused to name the schools. "It would not be fair to the Board of Control to name the ones under study," he said.

On behalf of the group, Bob Wolfenbarger, junior, presented a petition attacking the three-member committee hired by the Board for the investigation.

The petition criticized the validity of the report. "We believe that the study was based more on physical facilities alone than on teaching techniques, design plans, and student interest," it charged.

Dr Laurence Campbell, dean of the school, made the same accusations last week. He said the committee spent only two days studying the school, and spent about an hour in one class and 30 minutes in another, making a total of two or three classes during that period.

CHARGE LUXON

Also charges were leveled at one of the committee members, Norval Neil Luxon, dean of the University of North Carolina School of Journalism, as being in favor of fewer but larger professional journalism schools.

"... no hope of FSU getting a law school ..."

Other committee members were Herbert Brucker, editor of the Hartford Courant and former professor of the Graduate School of Journalism, Columbia University, and Ralph Casey, director of the School of Journalism, University of Minnesota and former member of the ACEJ.

Charges implied that the committee's decision was pre-determined before visiting the school.

The committee, in its report to the Board, said a full week was spent examining the schools at the U. of Florida and FSU. "Although the consultants recognize that their time was limited it should be pointed out that one of them (Luxon) participated in the 1950 accrediting visitation to the U. of Florida and another (Casey) has served on the American Council on Education for Journalism through a period when reports of the accrediting committee were considered and final decisions made. The third member (Brucker) has participated in visitations under ACEJ," the report stated.

PHYSICAL FACTORS

The students said only physical factors were taken into consideration. They asserted that because Tallahassee furnishes an excellent laboratory for classes and because the value of an FSU degree will be cheapened, the "Board has made an inconsiderate, unwise, and needlessly hasty decision."

Collins said he had no reason to consider the survey was not comprehensive and said he certainly would not believe the out-of-town experts were prejudiced.

Journalism students this week declared April 22-25 as "doomsday" for students of the FSU School of Journalism.

In protest, the students donned black arm bands to signify the death of their school, and "the type of superficial investigation which was conducted, the lack of leadership of the administration, and the fact that the school was judged on physical facilities rather than on its level of education and quality of instructors."

MEET STROZIER

About 20 students gathered at the journalism school Wednesday as Dr Robert Strozier met with the dean and the journalism faculty. The door of the school was draped with black crepe paper.

That afternoon in a taped interview with Mark Austin, journalism student and Flambeau staffer, Dr Strozier said "the abolishment of the school casts no reflection upon the highly qualified men in the department." He said some of the professors would be qualified to teach in other departments.

Dr Strozier said the journalism students, in his opinion, would not be able to get the Board to reverse its decision.

In a motorcade of 14 cars, the group moved to the governor's office that afternoon where they received a 45-minute interview.

"I think the location of government offices, providing a natural laboratory for journalism studies, should have weighed heavily on the board's decision. . ."

". . . many other schools are going to be consolidated . . ."

Senate Sends Amendment To Students

One constitutional amendment was passed and another proposed in Student Senate Wednesday.

The amendment passed would prohibit Honor Court members from sitting in on classes specifically to detect cheating. It was introduced by freshman Senator Don Sink.

The amendment passed Senate unanimously. To become part of the constitution, it must be voted on favorably by a majority of at least 25 per cent of the student body. It will be on the ballot with the May 6 class elections.

Sink's proposal came as a result of the honor committee's investigation of the honor system and the results of the recent poll on it. Buck Bryan, chief justice-elect of Honor Court, told the Senate that the court would not sit in on classes, even if the amendment failed.

11% FOR ABOLITION

Other results released by Sink showed that only 11% of the students taking the poll favored abolition of the system, but that 60% were disillusioned by it. Sink recommended a better period of orientation to give students a more thorough understanding of the workings of the system. Only about half of those polled showed an understanding of its procedure, he said.

Ronnie Clark, sophomore senator, introduced a constitutional amendment which would allow editors of the publications to be voting members of the Board of Publications. Presently they are members of the Board, but have no vote.

Clark's amendment also proposed that six hours of journalism courses be dropped as an alternate requirement for membership on the Board. Clark explained that since the school was nearly certain to be abolished, the requirement would be useless.

The amendment was referred to committee.

In other actions, the Senate:

JOURNALISM

Formed a committee at the request of Senator Dayton Roberts to look into the abolition of the school of journalism. Roberts said the Board of Control's action would seriously hurt morale here and leave persons in other small schools wondering "who's next?"

Discussed a proposed house of representatives solution to the reapportionment hassle. Opinion seemed to run against it.

Heard Senator Clark say that his committee would be through being "diplomatic" if the Women's Senate proposal concerning bermuda shorts was not adopted by the Dean of Women's office.

Approved Pat Wolfe as Senior Senator and Nancy Jo Bowers and Cynthia Lawrence to Honor Court posts.

Jones' Post To Be Vacant At Present

Rather than filling Gerald Jones' vacant position as assistant business manager at present, his duties will be divided among members of the office staff, according to Rod Shaw, business manager.

Joe Sharman, night policeman, will be transferred to day duty and will take over traffic duties and the handling of traffic tickets, previously one of Jones' duties.

"I would like to make it clear that Sharman's new duties will not interfere in any way with the other policemen's jobs," Shaw said.

The supervising of auxiliaries will be taken over by Shaw for the time being, until a successor is appointed, if that is the action decided upon.

"We would like to save money by not hiring an assistant, but if the extra duties become a burden to the efficiency of the business office, we will have to hire an assistant," Shaw said. Sharman will not be replaced, whatever is decided.

The Traffic Committee met yesterday afternoon to discuss the present traffic control system. Until four years ago, Shaw handled the duties not performed by the committee.

'Weekend' Shorts Endorsed

Privilege Retained By Women's Senate

Women's Senate voted unanimously Tuesday to rescind legislation passed March 25 which would have required senior women to sign out for town activities after 7:30 p.m.

In effect, this action nullifies Section II of Bill IV, which would have terminated a senior privilege standing since the days of Florida State College for Women.

On taking this move, Women's Vice President Polly Atwater said, "Women's Senate felt that they had not considered sufficiently this matter and at this time, although not consistent with the overall rule, seniors were entitled to this privilege."

The motion to rescind was made by Senator Betty Ann McGowan and seconded by Senator Joyce Holt, after several senators had expressed a desire for the move.

WEEKEND SHORTS

The Women Senators also passed a resolution to allow women to wear bermuda shorts on Saturday.

This resolution was passed on the heels of a recommendation for such action by a University Senate Committee headed by Senator Ronnie Clark.

The resolution, as introduced by Senators McGowan, Ada Leigh Wall Pat Manning, Sally Highnam, and Ann Williams, states:

Whereas: Each year interest in, and demand for, the wearing of bermuda shorts has been increasing:

And: The University Senate Committee has strongly recommended that Women's Senate act on this measure;

Be it resolved that: Women's Senate of 1957-58 go on record as favoring change in the social standard section of the Knowledge for College for 1958-59 permitting bermuda shorts on Saturdays on campus in dormitories, sorority houses, and eating places, and immediately adjacent to campus.

Be it further resolved that: Bermuda shorts not be worn in inappropriate places, such as town, library and classes.

The resolution awaits approval of Dean Warren.

OTHER ACTION

In other action taken Tuesday, Women's Senate:

Introduced a bill to grant an unlimited number of weekends second semester to freshman women attaining a 3.0 average during the first semester.

Appointed a committee to study the whole question of signing out and make recommendations on the issue to the new Senate.

(No concrete action in the form of legislation can be taken this year, as the deadline for submitting new legislation to Dean Warren has passed.)

Senators McGowan, Barbara Youmans, Ann Williams and Pat Hendry will serve on this committee.

Adopted a resolution asking the Secretary of Finance for a separate budget for Women's Senate.

Under the present set-up, Women's Senate receives no set amount to operate on, but must ask for money as it is needed.

The senators stressed that they are not asking for more money, just for a specific amount reserved for their group. Money for Sophomore Council and Freshman Flunkies would be included in this budget.

65 STUDENTS EXPECTED FOR FCCH CONFERENCE

Sixty-five students from ten state colleges will attend the annual Florida Citizenship Clearing House conference here Monday through Wednesday, Dr. Elston Roady, executive director of the organization, announced yesterday.

The conference will feature three panels on the executive and judicial branches of government and will be highlighted by a talk to the delegates by former Governor Millard Caldwell entitled, "The Challenge of Public Life."

The panel on judiciary will consist of Justice Stephen O'Connell, and Judges Donald K. Carroll and John T. Wigginton. William Durden and Richard Gardner of the governor's office and Dean Ralph Page of the University of Florida's College of Arts and Sciences will be the panel on the governorship.

A panel on "Women in Florida Government" and a talk by Dean of Students R. R. Oglesby on "Participation in Politics," will feature Tuesday afternoon's program.

Visiting students will tour the Capitol and state office buildings Tuesday morning. The FCCH is an organization devoted to increasing the interest of college students in politics and government. Ten colleges in the state have branches.

The political science department will be hosts to the delegates.

Jordon To Speak To Meteorologists

The Florida State University Meteorology Club will present a guest speaker, Dr. Charles Jordon, this afternoon at 4 in room 123 History Building.

Dr. Jordon will discuss cloud development and show slides and time-lapse motion picture films of cloud formation.

Everyone interested is invited to attend.

Code Changes Recommended; Only 250 Students Take Poll

By JIM McINTYRE
Flambeau News Editor

The report of the recently conducted honor poll shows that students are definitely in favor of the honor system, according to Secretary of Honor Joyce Weatherup.

Miss Weatherup released the preliminary report and figures this week with a recommendation for certain alterations in the Honor Code. The alterations were based on the opinions voiced by the students taking the poll.

Miss Weatherup, commenting on the poll, said that only half of the 500 students contacted showed up to take the quiz.

POSSIBLY SWUNG

She emphasized that the poll could have possibly been swung in another direction had all the students filled in the questionnaire, but that the committee had to go on the basis of opinions available.

Conclusions drawn by the committee on the basis of the poll included student feeling that the honor system should not be abolished, that certain modifications should be made in administration, and that a large portion of the student body has witnessed cheating this year.

The conclusions were drawn from percentage results of those taking the poll.

Forty-four per cent of those polled said that they had witnessed cheating at some time during the year. Fifty-four percent had not noticed cheating and two percent omitted the question.

Of those who had observed the infractions of the code, only two percent said that they had taken any action. Another 44 percent said that they would like to see action taken.

Of the 250 students, nine percent said that they had cheated during the year, but only one percent of those polled had turned themselves in.

DEFINITE LACK

Miss Weatherup said that the response indicated a definite lack in the honor system, and added that most students are already aware of it.

The lack, she said, was in the failure of the honor system to receive total acceptance by the student body.

Although the pollees indicated a lack of personal acceptance of responsibility for administration of the code, they were optimistic about the potential of the honor system and did not want to abolish it in favor of a system of proctoring.

Seventy-two percent of those polled said that the honor system should not be abolished, and 90 per cent said that the honor system is an ideal worth striving for.

Miss Weatherup said "This leaves us with a paradox—the students think the responsibility is theirs, but they won't take it."

An amendment to Honor Court procedure, which provides that Honor Court members shall not sit in on exams for proctoring purposes, passed Senate Wednesday as a result of Miss Weatherup's report.

The amendment, which is a constitutional provision, will be submitted for student body approval during the spring elections.

SUSGA Meet Opens Today; Students Invited

All sessions of the Southern University Student Government Association conference today and tomorrow will be open to interested FSU students, chairman Art Moore announced yesterday.

Over 30 delegates from 10 Southern universities will congregate on campus this afternoon for the SUSGA meet, an annual event since the organization's inception in 1954.

The main work of the organization is done in this annual conference, Moore said. Here delegates discuss problems relating to the operation of student government in their respective schools and ways of overcoming these problems.

Moore said that "SUSGA is not an organization to create policy. It's not in competition with NSA (National Student Association). It's strictly a workshop in student government."

FOUR YEARS OLD

SUSGA was begun four years ago by North Carolina, Emory, FSU, and Auburn. Its membership now includes the latter two schools, plus Alabama, Tennessee and Mississippi Southern.

Requirements for membership in the group are enrollment of at least 3,000, approval of two-thirds of the membership and payment of $25 annual dues.

"This year we have invited other schools as observers in hope that they will become members in the future," Moore said.

Registration will be held from 4-8 p. m. today in the Longmire lobby, but FSU students will not be required to register.

Tonight at the first general session, at 7 p. m., Student Body President Arnold Greenfield will welcome delegates. Moore will present the purpose of the meet and "what we hope to get out of it."

General sessions are to be held in the Longmire Auditorium.

EXECUTIVE MEET

Following this is an executive committee meeting with the chairmen of the delegations of the member schools participating.

Saturday, subcommission meetings will begin at 9:30 a. m. Those interested in publications, judicial, legislative and executive problems will be led in discussion by Bucky Canon, Buck Bryan, Jim Apthorp, and Moore, respectively.

The executive and legislative subcommissions will meet in the Longmire Auditorium. Publications is scheduled for room 210 Longmire (the Senate room) and the Judicial group will meet in 204 Longmire.

After a 12:30 luncheon in the Trophy Room of the Student Center, the subcommissions will sum up their findings at 2:30.

A report on these findings will be mimeographed and sent to southern schools in addition to those attending to show them how others are solving their student government problems.

At the closing general session at 4 p. m., the group will elect new officers. Moore, elected in April 1957, will turn over his duties to the 1958-59 chairman.

Law School Here Improbable—Collins

Governor LeRoy Collins said Wednesday there was no chance that the Board of Control might move the University of Florida Law School to Tallahassee.

Alumni pressure, among other things would preclude moving the law school, he told a group of students protesting the recent Board action to abolish the FSU School of Journalism.

He said, "It is more in the realm of fantasy to say that this could happen and anyone that thinks that the Law School at the University of Florida could be moved or abolished is not being realistic."

Dr. Robert Strozier said in his statement to the Board regarding the transferring of the FSU School of Journalism to the University of Florida that Tallahassee was the ideal spot for the state law school to be located.

Students Should See Faculty Advisors

All students are advised to see their faculty advisors between now and May 16, according to Melvene D. Hardee, coordinator of counseling.

Blood Bank Sets 3rd Donation Day

Blood donations will be accepted at the University Hospital between 1:30 and 4 p. m. Tuesday, the University Blood Bank's third scheduled donation day.

Students wishing to donate blood should be between the ages of 21 and 59 years. Students under 21 may donate if they are married or in the Armed Services, or upon presentation of a statement of permission from their parents. Parental permission blanks are available at the hospital reception desk, according to Hinton F. Bevis, hospital administrator.

"We're a little disappointed in the number of donors we've gotten so far," Bevis said. "We're hoping Tuesday will bring better results."

Christine Bryan Soloist Tonight For Final Symphony Concert

Tonight marks the final concert of the season for the Florida State University Symphony Orchestra, Robert N. Sedore, conductor.

The public is invited to the concert which begins at 8:15 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium.

BRYAN FEATURED

Tonight's concert features Christine Bryan, senior in the School of Music in the studio of Betty Jane Grimm. Miss Bryan will be featured as soloist in three songs (Wesendock Leider) by Wagner.

Miss Bryan, a mezzo-soprano, had a lead role in the campus production of "The Bartered Bride" last year and has been soloist with both the University Singers and the Women's Glee Club.

Opening the program will be "Chaconne" from Partita in D Minor by Bach, orchestrated by Maximillin Steinberg after the Busoni piano transcription. Sedore said that it is a very fine transcription for full orchestra, rarely heard.

For the final number, the orchestra will play Symphony No. 8 in F Major, Op. 93 (four movements) by Beethoven.

YEAR'S SUMMARY

In summarizing the activities of the FSU Symphony Orchestra this year, Sedore said that in addition to the four formal concerts normally presented during a school year, the orchestra has played for several productions and has been called upon for many other occasions such as joining with the Light Opera Guild, University Singers and the Choral Union.

This year's production include "Oklahoma," and "La Boheme," which comes up next month. Handel's "Messiah" and "Carmina Burana" by Carl Orff have been done with singing organizations on the campus.

One of the highlights of the year was playing for the production of Menotti's "Amahl and the Night Visitor." This production featured the original television cast from New York, and was an offering of the University Artist Series.

All FSU students and the general public are invited to attend the final concert of the season.

What Will Others Offer?

An old confederate general, Nathan Bedford Forrest, once commented the way to win a battle was to "git thar fustest with the mostest." This could aptly be applied to what has happened on the Florida educational scene.

IN THE DAYS of no coeducation, the state's schools developed specialized areas. The courses offered at Florida were for men and the courses at FSU were geared to the women students—with the exception of the liberal arts, of course.

It seems only natural that after going coed the two universities would conflict in offering courses, with FSU quite anxious to offer curriculm to appeal to its new men students, and perhaps vice versa.

BUT DUPLICATION in some fields of specialized training crept into the school's catalogs. The first school to fall under because of this unnecessary dupiication was the School of Journalism but others are slated to go soon.

The fact that Florida was "thar furstest with the mostest"—that is, the cream of the professional schools (law, engineering, journalism, and now medicine) were first located at Gainesville creates a problem for state universities yet to be built.

WITH THE University of Florida and FSU, long established institutions, having a full slate of specialized and professional schools, what will these future universities be able to offer in this line? The Board of Control's recent contention that duplication is unwise and costly is quite rational but in a few short years there may be a need for more than one such specialized type of course in the state.

WE AGREE that duplication without cause or necessity is understandable, but if this idea is kept for many years each new university in the state will only have a liberal arts curriculum available.

It seems likely that there will be some conflict and urging on the part of future state universities to duplicate the offerings of the University of Florida. And when the necessity arises, we hope the Board of Control doesn't insist on its "non-duplicating" policy.

FEA Entrenched At Capitol

Those who take an interest in the welfare of the Florida public school system will be interested in an article in the April Atlantic by one Lydia Stout, a faculty wife at Gainesville.

MRS. STOUT, who has tried to buck the monolithic lobbying power of the Florida Education Association in the last two legislative sessions, ia probably as well qualified to testify as anyone on the decay of Florida's schools.

She lays the blame for the low quality of secondary and primary education at the feet of the professional educationists who form an almost unbeatable bloc on the floor of the legislature.

THE QUALITY of public school teaching. Mrs. Stout says, has suffered aa a result of the qualifications placed on teacher certification in the state by the lobbyists of the FEA.

Even an Albert Einstein would not be qualified to teach public school math unless he spent a semester or two taking the "Mickey Mouse" courses in education before attempting it.

THE PUBLIC school teacher of today is bound by step requirements in the field of education, but actually few requirements in the field in which he is teaching.

The situation breeds mediocre teachers who cannot survive in other departments of the universities and muat seek refuge in the comfortable confines of the Schools of Education.

Even the state scholarship program is now bound by a rigid restriction requiring scholarship students to major in education. Their opportunities to gain valuable knowledge in their special fields are thus curtailed in an abominable manner.

ANOTHER ARTICLE in the same magazine reviewed Russian secondary education and, although it did not say that the system in use was ideal, it did point out the superior preparation the Russian student has on the high school level. It also pointed out that the Russian school teachers have more concentrated training in their special fields, rather than in pedagogical personality-adjustment training.

It might be a good idea for the citizens of Florida to take a little more seriously this threat to top-quality education. But the FEA looks pretty soundly entrenched in the legislative halls.

Women's Senate Steps Ahead

Women's Senate is not as conservative as we first supposed. This week the group passed two pieces of legislation that indicates it can tackle a problem with courage and open-mindedness.

SOMETIMES IN the past it haa seemed that Women's Senate has been handicapped by that old stubborn, bull-headed stigma: tradition.

Although it is ideally thought that women students have a voice in setting women's rules and regulations, each gain is made through long and persistent urging to the administration. And perhapa this is good. We should not like to see over-zealoua students change the rules each year.

WOMEN'S RULES are not overly unfair on the FSU campus; in fact, the current few regulationa seem to be quite lenient. But aome rules, immersed in tradition, do remain long after the change of time demands a more liberal outlook

Perhaps bermuda shorts is one such social regulation. We do not advocate drastic retractions of standards which have given FSU women an excellent reputation. However, we do not want to be riding horses when others ride in automobiles.

WE MUST COMMEND the women solons for requesting that bermuda shorts be worn on a limited basia. Thia is a realistic approach to the problem and shows their willingness to compromise.

Also the Senate showed good judgment in rescinding its previous resolution to require senior women to sign out.

Shock Troops Out Laying Fences

GREETINGS!

I see that the shock troops have been out again.

I don't know who they are, but I assume that they are a group of Korean veterans who were frightened by a Chinese trumpet while laying accordian wire. They have been completely rehabilitated except for the fact that from time to time they have this uncontrollable urge to run out and lay some more accordian wire.

FORTUNATELY it seems to be a group manifestation, as it might be difficult if individuals arent running about at all times laying wire. It is also just as well that the actual accordian wire has been taken away from them, as it tends to get noisy in high winds. Instead they have been persuaded to operate with plain wire and rusty stakes.

Actually it is a fine thing that this perverse urge has been turned to such useful purpose. Were it not for these burgeoning little fences it is quite possible that we busy little students would wear trails across the grass. Now everyone knows about Southern Hospitality and Graciousness and all that sort of thing. It is easy to see what the thinking behind this is. The assistant sub-secretary in charge of Gracious Southern Lawns once visited Chicago and was shocked by the signs saying "please keep off the grass." "Horrors," he thought, "we can't let dangerous Yankee ideas like that pervade our Gracious Southern Ways."

BESIDES, think for a moment how ugly it would be if we actually did make nasty old trails across the grass. Anyone who has glanced at the landscapes, for example, of John Constable or Nicolas Poussin knows what a repulsive thing a pathway can be. Far better to have fences. What if they are a little rusty and tend to sag in all directions? At the library, for example, the random angles of the rusty uprights and the meandering line of the wire dangling between them adds artistic contrast to the severity and rigor of th library building itself.

ANOTHER USEFUL function of the fences is the bodily protection which they afford students. Under certain conditions grass can become dangerously slippery, and an unwary student — particularly a student from some great metropolis where grass is completely unknown — might slip and have a nasty fall. It is true that I have several times seen students trip and fall over these ubiquitous fences after dark, and never seen anyone slip on the wet grass, but everyone knows how unreliable random observations are. I have probably seen every such fall which ever took place on the campus, while the infirmary could well be filled with groaning victims who slid on the slippery grass and fractured their left eardrums. Let us all offer up our thanks to the authorities who so carefully protect us.

A THIRD useful function of the fences is to instill a sense of order and law into us. I am sure that the fact that the only person I ever saw casually stepping over one of them was a campus policeman is entirely immaterial and irrevelant. When the system of fences has completely encircled all of the lawn areas it will not only assure the nature lovers and bird watchers that the sparrows sitting on the benches will not again be disturbed by a thoughtless sophomore catching up on his parallel reading, but it will provide a practical demonstration of that sterling old Prussian motto, "everything which is not compulsory is forbidden." This, of course, comes under the heading of The Humanities, but is provided by that department at no extra charge.

THE ONLY trouble with the fence program is that I have not been able to persuade my friend Wyatt O'Penspaces from Houston, Texas, that the fences were not put up by a group of renegade sheep men. It is against the law in Texas, he tells me with a gleam in his eye, to carry a pair of oilers—somebody might be tempted beyond his ability. Wyatt tells me that if he catches one of those sheep, there will be a barbeque Texas style, on the roof of West Hall. I really haven't seen any sheep, but if there are any, I do hope that we can restrain him.

Officials Don't Answer Questions

By JACK PEACOCK

Apparently the major qualification in political leadership or any other position of leadership for that matter, is to be able to say nothing in as many words as possible

This is borne out constantly in President Eisenhower's press conferences. An example of this would possibly be: Question: In your opinion Mr. President, do you think that the present recession that we are suffering is getting worse? Answer: "Now in my opinion I would say the results shown to me proves that the recession is broadening out and actually we only had a little dip."

That's all that he said in answer to the question, he didn't mention the results in specific terms, he didn't so much as say what kind of "dip" it was.

This is all that he ever says at press conferences and the people that listen to it take it to be words of great wisdom.

Another executive that seems to have the same gift of—well, seems qualified, is Governor Collins. On Wednesday afternoon a group of FSU journalism students, fifty strong, were ushered into the governor's office for a press conference concerning the abolishment of the FSU School of Joutualism.

As one spectator put it, "Winter came early and the kids are still shoveling their way out."

Now I am not accusing the governor of anything, nor am I saying that he did wrong, but what I can't understand is how fifty so-called intelligent students can sit for 45 minutes and listen to answers to their questions and when he finished each question he had said exactly nothing.

Out of the whole 45 minute session, he said two things, 1) he would not interfere with the Board of Control's decision, and 2) anyone that thought there was a possibility of the University of Florida Law School being moved to Tallahassee was living in a world of fantasy and should wake up to reality.

Some oldtimers around campus said that it reminded them of the "Blizzard of '56" when Athletic Director Danford explained student seating in Campbell stadium.

A Letter

TO THE EDITOR

I would like to take this opportunity to thank my wonderful supporters in last week's primary. In looking back I realize that nothing could have been possible without them. Thanks, so much.

My greatest desire now is to serve the student body in any and every way I possibly can. If you have any problem, please bring it to me and I will do my very best to help you with it. Feel free to call on me at any time. Thanks again

Leadership Needed For Survival-Urey

By BUCKY CANON

"Unless we get good leadership, the chances for surviva[l] bad," a world famous nuclear chemist said yesterday visiting Florida State University.

Speaking in reference to the nuclear arms race, Dr. Harold Urey, Nobel prize winner and director of one of the wartime Manhatten projects's three divisions, rested comfortably on Dr. Strozier's back porch.

"I do not see where that leadership is coming from," he continued. "President Eisenhower is a very nice man and I think that is why he was elected, but a 'blood, sweat, and tears' type of leadership is what is needed now." Our leaders should "stop feeding us intellectual tranquilizers and tell us the full problem."

Despite three American satellites in the sky, Dr. Urey pointed out that the USSR has put up a half ton sputnik while ours weigh only a few pounds. This shows that they are still ahead, he said.

The scientist, who was one of the main producers of the first atomic bomb, spoke amiably and discerningly of the press. A personal friend of Dr Strozier, Urey is his house guest during his stay on campus. Yesterday he gave two lecture here—one to Sigma X., national scientific honorary, and one to the public.

Dr. Urey lamented the fact that the only defense to nuclear weapons is other nuclear weapons. "It is a curious thing that defense depends on the same weapons which if used can destroy us or all life on earth." The scientist said that he believed a political defense must be worked out between nations and that it is a mistake to continue the nuclear arms race.

While nuclear tests do not spread a detrimental amount of radioactivity around, he said, a full scale war would "poison the atmosphere."

"We have seen a steady deterioration of our school system over the past 50 years," Dr. Urey declared, speaking on education.

"The most important object of education should be to teach people—not to make them happy," he continued. He added [th]at did not believe that a larg[e] ment of American pop[ulation] needed to be happy. The [ele]mentary schools should [teach] arithmetic, reading, writing English.

Trumpet Recital Is An FSU First

By DIXON REDDITT

Calvin Hasbrouck, in his recent masters recital in trum[pet] gained for himself the distinction of giving the first such re[cital] at FSU. There is an argument against a completely sol[o per]formance in the instrumental field, for presentation to a ger[eral] audience Hasbrouck evidently adheres to this belief because he performed only one selection that could properly be defined as "solo" and even this has an ensemble sounding title (Sonata VIII of Corelli).

In addition Hasbrouck was careful to surround himself with a varied accompanimental medium. That is, the first group was performed with Charles Farley organist, the second with Phyllis Rappeport, pianist, and the last group with a large string group and Linda Bean, English hornist.

This last number (Quiet City) of Aaron Copland was one of the highlights of the evening both because of its interest as a composition but also because of the expert way in which Dr. John Boda, an exponent of contemporary music himself, brought out the fullness of the piece in his conducting.

There is no doubt that the best performance was in the Hindemith Sonata for Trumpet and Piano. Here Hasbrouck was in his element, con... refinement of expression ... his principal strongpoint... Outdoor Concerts Could Be Better

By W. DORSEY STUART

On Wednesday of this week the first of a series of three outdoor concerts was given, this one by the FSU Symphonic Band under the direction of Manley R. Whitcomb.

The purpose of this "Starlight Serenade" was to provide "pleasant entertainment and relaxing music." It is this reviewer's opinion, however, that there were some objectional aspects of the performance which made it less than the prescribed "pleasant" and "entertaining".

The program opened with four selections directed by student conductors. Phillip Posey was the first to appear and did a good job of conducting a Beethoven Military March.

The next to take the podium was Robert Baden and the reviewer felt much apprehension at the performance of the subtle Bach chorale Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring by such a large and unwieldy group of instruments.

Much to our surprise and relief a subdued and musical performance was given, in spite of the not too unisonal clarinet section obligato.

Fred Grumley then gave a somewhat disjointed reading of a movement of Saint-Saens' Symphony No. 1 and finally Merrimon Hipps gave an average performance of Summer Day Suite by Serge Prokofieff.

In the next section of the program Mr. Whitcomb took charge of the baton. The first num[ber] attempted was Tuahridge F... by the American, Walter Pis[ton].

Done with only half of the ba[nd] which eliminated half of ... wrong notes, this difficult num[ber] proved to be ineffective beca[use] of lack of sound and precis[ion]. We feel that a little more pr[ac]tice and a little more hand w... have made a little more diff[er]ence.

In contrast, Tulsa, by Don G[il]lis, a work which has the dub[ious] distinction of being perform[ed] three times on campus this ye[ar] was played about as well as ... could be by the group. To p[re]fer our opinion, however, ... Gillis' music seems to be mos[tly] effect for effect's sake.

In general we felt that the ... tonation was "not quite perfec[t]" that listening within the ensem[ble] was ignored, that precision w[as] generally lacking (except in ... magnificent trombones and ... bass) and that although expos[ed] passages were usually learn[ed] accompanying figures we[re] brushed over in a most ann[oy]ing fashion.

Lest we be accused of a pre[ju]dice against bands in general ... us say that much better perfor[m]ances have been previously giv[en] and on the assumption of the[ir] continuation we heartily reco[m]mend the next performance of ... FSU Symphonic Band to all ... a means of hearing "pleasant e[n]tertainment and relaxing music."

Probation Hurts All

Baseball resumes the spotlight again, but not on campus. The Seminoles face a return series with the same team that swept a doubleheader on opening day here.

They will be facing the same meau, but chaoces are they are somewhat disturbed after being slapped with another three-year suspension by the NCAA.

The Auburn Tigers, who were favored to cop the Southeastern Conference baseball title, won't be going to any post-season tournament even though they finish first.

There are definite repercussions to a school that is placed on probation—not only to its present students and administration—but to their alumni, the city it's located in, and probably most important regarding athletics, its future students.

Many are the coaches and scouts that have used the phrase—"Sign with us and play in a bowl game or a basketball or baseball tournameot."

Aaburn finished number ane in the country last season, besides heading the SEC, but because of a restriction was unable to compete in any post-season aame.

No school likes to have that hanging over it. The NCAA must punish all for the mistakes and under the table actions of a few.

True, it's a harsh punishment, but rules are rules, and if they are broken you must accept the consequences.

The people responsible for breaking the rules always seem to be thinking only of themselves, but their actions affect a lot of other people, and many of the iuoocent find out only when it appears in a newspaper.

It could and probably does lead to discord and non-cooperation among people who work together.

Auburn's restriction could enable Florida State to sign some prospects in many sports who might have preferred to attend the Alabama institution.

It's not always that way, but it's a strong bargaining point.

SO YOU WANT TO BE A COACH?

"So you want to be a coach?" says FSU Coach Danny Litwhiler. Monday night is your big chance.

Monday's game is Faculty and Staff Appreciation Night and the spectatars will be calling the plays. There will be cards held up as play develops, and judging by the fan's applause on what to da is hnw Litwhiler will call them.

Some of the signs will be—bunt, steal, hit and run and squeeze.

How Florida Southern is going to be kept in the dark while all this is going on I don't know.

But it should be interesting.

Relay Teams Seek National Prominence

Florida State's mile and sprint medley relay teams make a bid for national prominence tomorrow when they meet the country's top college relay teams in the famed Penn Relays.

A quartet of speedsters will carry the Seminole colors onto Franklin Field in Philadelphia for the relays. The four are Mike Conley, Doyle Ruff, Jack Terwilliger, and Jim Casteel.

The Tribe's foursome will face formidable nppositinn in both relay events. The eight opposing colleges in the mile relay have all bettered FSU's best time of 3:14.4 recorded at the Florida Relays. Topping the list are Manhattan and North Texas State with clockings in the 3:11's.

Terwilliger is optimistic about the Seminole's chaoces of winning. "If everyone is on we can take it," said the senior speedster.

The Seminole lineup far the mile relay will have Casteel, wha ran a 48.7 in the 440 against Florida last week, in the leadoff position. Following Casteel are Ruff and Terwilliger. Conley, who clicked aff a 48.6 third leg for the team in the Florida Relays, will anchor the event.

The same order will be maintained for the sprint medley relay. Casteel will run the opening 440. Ruff and Twig the following 220 legs, and Conley will close with the 880.

Elwood is among the top five vaulters in the South by virtue of his 13' 4" vault in the Florida Relays.

Baseballers Face Auburn

By FRANK RAMOS

Florida State's baseball team meets Auburn away today in the first of an all-important two game series with hopes of a third straight trip to the NCAA District III playoffs possibly riding on the outcome.

Coach Danny Litwhiler has nominated rightbander Frank Slusser and ace lefthander Jack Bristol to oppose the Plainsmen who defeated the Seminoles here 4-3, 18-7 here on opening day.

The Seminoles will return home Monday to meet the Florida Southern nine at 7:30 at Centennial Field. Tom Garcia will be the probable starter for FSU.

Auburn has a 9-2 record in SEC competition. After dropping two straight to Florida, the Tigers have won seven in a row.

8-5 RECORD

Florida State's baseballers carry an overall 8-5 record into the series.

Slusser, who pitched the school's first no-hitter against Miami last Friday night, has a 3-0 mark and an 0.93 earned run average. Bristol has split four decisions so far, but bas a 1.94 era. He lost the 4-3 game to Auburn on unearned runs.

The Seminoles have raised their team batting averagr to .281 after a slow start.

The pickup in the averages can be traced to the booming bats of Mike Copps and Charlie Rodgers in the Miami series.

Copps broke out of a slump by rapping out six hits including a towering home run. He also took over the club leadership in the RBI department with 12.

McCARRON TOP HITTER

Owen McCarron leads the team in batting percentage with a .375 mark. He has also scored the most runs, and is close to setting a new stolen base record.

Gerry Philp bas mnved into second place in team batting with a .344 mark. Philp trails Copps in the RBI department with 11.

Others maintaining a better than 300 average are shortstop Dick Howser and Rodgers.

Bristol is the strikeout leader with 33 and Slusser maintains the second spot with 29.

Litwhiler plans to use his usual starting lineup against the Tigers.

Larry Malmlin Not Returning

Sophomore gymnastic star Larry Malmlin of Stockholm, Sweden will not return to Florida State in the fall, the Flambeau learned Tuesday.

Malmlin, a former Swedish Olympic team member, said the main reason for leaving was that he was "running out of money." He will resume his job as an electrician in Stockholm.

Malmlin will leave here May 16, and will compete for a place on the Swedisb Olympic Team that will travel to Moscow for the World Championships of Gymnastics.

Saturday will mark his last home appearance for the gymnasts, and on May 9-10, with Jack Miles and Chick Cicio, will compete for Florida State at the NAAU championships at Los Angeles, California.

CAMEL
CHOICE QUALITY

If you answered "No" to all questions, you obviously smoke Camela – a real cigarette. Only 6 or 7 "No" answers mean you better get on to Camela fast. Fewer than 6 "No's" and it really doesn't matter what you smoke. Anything's good enough!

But if you want to enjoy smoking as never before, switch to Camels. Nothing else tastes so rich, smokes so mild. Today more people smoke Camels than any other cigarette. The best tobacco gives you the best smoke. Try Camels and you'll agree!

Final Speech Effort Is 'The Alchemist'

By KAY WRIGHT

The final production of the season by the Department of Speech will be "The Alchemist," by Ben Jonson, which opens at the Augusta Conradi Theatre Friday, May 9.

Dr. James W. Brock, director of the production, announced that there will be four performances beginning at 8:15 p. m., on May 9, 10, 12 and 13. All performances will be open to the public.

Tickets may be reserved by telephoning 2-6500, ext. 8-3411 beginning May 7. Tickets will also be available at the door.

Dr. Brock, a specialist in Elizabethan drama, promises a total effect of "good humor and brilliance." "The Alchemist" is a fast moving, broad comedy which provides a lesson in human greed and duplicity.

Three enterprising rogues set up an "alchemy shop" in the house of a departed master and attract all the "suckers" of London into a series of hilarious events, which Coleridge described as one of the three best plots in all literature.

"The Alchemist" is a play of biting satire also. Ben Jonson attacked the society of his day with the lash of wit because he believed that the function of the comedy was "to show an image of the times and sport with human follies."

Dr. Brock said that "The Alchemist" has engaged the time and efforts of the actors, directors and scenic workers for over five weeks. The play was presented at the Arts Festival in Sarasota, Saturday.

"The performance was well received by a full house," said Dr. Brock. "Presenting the play in Sarasota gave us an opportunity to work out some of the rough spots and make a few changes in the script," he said.

Dr. Brock edited the original script, which was written in 1610, by cutting when necessary and translating obscure 17th Century English terms.

The play will be staged in late Elizabethan style with the actors trained in the special style of acting of the period, which calls for rapid reading of lines, heightened expression and mannerisms and slightly exaggerated movement.

By these means, "everyone should be able to enjoy and appreciate the revised edition which has been prepared for this production," Dr. Brock said.

Selective Service Test Thursday

The Selective Service College Qualification Test will be given May 1, at 8:30 a.m., in 210 Educational building.

Only those students who mailed applications before April 11 are eligible to take the test, according to Mrs. Fay Stanley, director, selective service affairs.

FCCH Meet Hears Panel, Ex-Governor

About 60 students from 10 Florida colleges and universities are attending the Florida Citizenship Clearing House Conference on campus today and tomorrow.

The conference, which began yesterday, features three panels on Florida government, two addresses and a field trip.

The FCCH, an organization dedicated to fostering better governmental and political ideals among college students, has 10 chapters in the state. The FCCH and the FSU political science department are acting as hosts for the conference.

Dr. Elston Roady of political science is executive director of the FCCH.

Former governor Millard Caldwell spoke to the delegates last night on "The Challenge of Public Life." This noon Dean of Students R. R. Oglesby will speak on "Participation in Politics" to the conference.

The visiting students will tour the capitol center buildings this morning. This afternoon a panel on "Women in Government" will be held at the Library Lecture Hall at 2 p.m.

A discussion on "Government is Your Business" will be held tonight in 124 Science, led by Dr. James Prothro.

Yesterday afternoon a panel on "The Florida Judiciary" was held with Justice Stephen O'Connell, and Judges Donald K. Carroll and John T. Wigginton participating.

The conference will close tomorrow with a panel on "The Governor's Office" at 9:15 a.m. in the Library Lecture Hall.

Western Culture Is 'Crisis' Topic

Dr. Jackson L. Ice, assistant professor of Philosophy, will speak on the American Studies program tomorrow night at 7:30 in the library lecture hall.

The speech will cover the general breakdown of western culture and the predicament of modern man.

Ice will talk first on the present situation in modern culture and include an analysis of the more immediate crises and decline.

A discussion of the basic reasons for current crisis will be stressed.

'Flying High' Ready To Go; Here Thursday

Preparations for the annual "Flying High Home Show," Florida State University's Circus weekend, are in the final stages for the presentation Thursday through Saturday.

The show, directed by Jack Haskin, will begin at 8 p. m. in Doak S. Campbell Stadium. Admission is 50 cents for students, $1.25 for reserved seats and $1 general admission, sold only at the stadium.

Dress rehearsal will be tomorrow night with the staff and faculty invited to attend.

NEW SUITS

Approximately 100 new costumes have been made for this year's show which was described by a circus performer as "faster and more exciting than ever before."

Electricians are hurriedly completing the intricate wiring and electrical apparatus for special lighting effects.

A red and white band stand resembling a large circus wagon will seat the circus band. The band is composed of members of the FSU symphonic and concert bands.

"This is the first year we have acts going on simultaneously in each of the three rings," Coach Haskin said.

"We feel that this will make the show move faster and will provide more thrills," he added.

Painting of backdrops and props was done by Lynn Brantley and Elsie Cullesoo. Director of dances is Jackie Hailey; photography, Jim Martin and programs, Dot Kannon.

MANY ACTS

Trapese, acrobatic, adagio, ladder, clown, tight wire and skating are but a few of the many acts planned for the circus performances. The "Circusettes" will also present several dance numbers.

Plans for Family Weekend, which will be combined with Circus for the first time, are also nearing final stages.

Approximately 150 families are planning to attend the weekend program beginning this Friday with registration in the Student Center Trophy room.

"This number includes from one to six in each family," said Laura Cheek, general chairman for Family Weekend.

This number does not include those families who have not returned postcards to the committee indicating they will attend.

Miss Cheek urged that students buy circus and picnic tickets before their families arrive so they will be assured of reservations.

Tickets are now on sale at the Westcott ticket booth in the Men's Gymnasium. Picnic tickets will not be sold after 5 p. m. Friday.

Sororities, fraternities and dormitories are urged to begin putting up house decorations with a Circus theme. A prize of $10 will be awarded in each classification.

Walton Slates Greece Speech

Seeking $4,000

Campus Chest Week Goes Door-To-Door

The annual Campus Chest campaign, this year restricted to only one week's activities, will be attempting to raise $4,000, according to Beth Bowen, chairman of the Chest Week committee.

Miss Bowen said yesterday that the campaign, which begins May 7, would be limited to a drive for door-to-door contributions, rather than the former practice of holding special events.

The door-to-door campaign was established by the committee as a result of action taken by last year's Student Senate, restricting the campaign to one week.

ELIMINATES EXPENSE

Miss Bowen said that the one week of contributions would eliminate much of the expense incurred by the committee in past years, and would allow the Chest to receive a larger proportion of the money given.

She estimated that in previous years students had often spent three to four dollars on Chest projects with very little money reaching the committee due to high operating costs.

With no real expenses involved in the campaign, all money contributed will go directly to the committee for disbursement to the various charities and research foundations.

Among the benefitting agencies will be the national foundations for research in cancer, heart disease, polio and tuberculosis.

ONE BUCK

Miss Bowen urged all students to contribute at least one dollar to the campaign, saying that the $4,000 goal can be reached easily if each student will donate only the one dollar.

"Of course, any student can donate as much as he wants," she added.

Miss Bowen also emphasized the value of giving to a worthy cause and said that Campus Chest "seeks to encourage students to develop an appreciative attitude toward giving."

Other members of the committee are Ginger Collier, Jane Wallace, Bill Bunker, Delphia Johnson, Sheldon Fretwell, Gloria Meltzer, Ann Duncan and Sheila Kennedy.

Dean Asks You To Give Generously

Centuries ago the Great Teacher pointed out the personal values which occur from "giving." Even students with their limited means should not be deprived that privilege.

Fortunately for our students, giving is fun, and Campus Chest time is an exciting one on our campus.

Give as generously as you can. Remember that your contributions will go out all over the world aiding needy students of all nations, but much of it stays home, helping our needy and deserving neighbors and friends.

Housing Units For Couples Set By 1960

Plans are under way for approximately 256 married housing units for Florida State University couples by June of 1960, says Jack Rollow, director of housing.

An application is being prepared for the Housing and Home Finance Agency—a federal government agency—for their approval of the tentative plans for the increased housing. A loan will be obtained from the agency, in order to finance construction.

"We hope to have some of the units available for the married students by September 1959," Rollow says. The units will probably be spread out becoming gradually available from the fall semester next year through the spring semester.

Presently, there are 99 units (apartments) at Mabry Heights, 71 trailer spaces at West Campus and West Campus barracks buildings with 24 apartments. This is a total of 194 married housing units now controlled by the University.

Study Requirements

A year has gone by since the Flambeau conducted its poll investigating whether or not the majority of students and faculty members think Schools of Education over-emphasize methods courses.

THE CLIMATE of opinion has changed considerably since the poll was taken due to the scientific gains of the USSR. Nourished by threats that Russia's educational system, through strict academic requirements, is turning out students more highly educated than ours, educators, scientists, politicians, professors, and professor's wives are seriously re-appraising U. S. education.

In referring to professor's wives we are speaking of Mrs. Lydia Stout, whose article on Florida teacher certification requirements appeared in the April Atlantic Monthly.

WHEN THE Flambeau poll was conducted Senator L. K. Edwards had raised the question of whether or not Florida's teacher training produced the best teachers. The poll asked for yes or no answers to the questions: Are present FSU requirements for teacher certification necessary and good because they provide minimum standards of college education for teachers, thus protecting the children of our public schools? "And, they are necessary because they are artificial restrictions and students should spend more time learning what to teach and less on how to teach."

THE BIG question was: is method over-emphasized?

Results of the poll indicated education majors (who signed) voted 26 for the requirements, 26 against it, non-education majors voted 11 for, 79 against, and faculty members voted one for, and 12 against.

The Flambeau, taking into account the factors involved in the poll, reached a conclusion that opinion warranted an investigation of the worth of the present requirements. "Such an examination would look into all the factors—possible duplication of subject matter in the education curriculum, the extent to which individual instructors vary their courses, the role played by "counseling," in students' distribution of their free elective hours, duplication of subject matter in Education and non-education courses, etc.," the Flambeau surmised.

MRS. STOUT'S article has created a stir of controversery on the subject that differs from Sen. Edwards' remarks in one important way: now there is a more receptive audience willing to view the problem.

We did not at the time of the poll, nor do we now assert which side of the method controversy is correct, but we do think that public opinion is such at this time warrant a study of the issue.

On one point, however, we believe the Russian's have the right idea; their teachers are not required to major in education and minor in the subject they teach. Perhaps, another factor to be looked into is the clause requiring students receiving teaching scholarships to major in Education.

Base Changes On Results

The most important conclusion we can draw from the recent honor poll is that most of the student body do not desire to see the Honor System come to an end at Florida State.

But we also feel that results show that the system is not all the students feel it could be.

THREE OUT OF four polled indicated that they favored retention of the Honor System—but nearly the same number also felt "disillusioned" by the system as it presently exists.

The honor poll has been one of Student Government's most significant projects this year. On its results will be built the changes and revisions for the Honor System at this university for the years to come. The results of the poll, we feel, justify changes and modifications in the character and operation of the Honor System.

THESE CHANGES MUST be of two natures. First the procedure of the Honor Court itself needs change. Secondly a change in the attitude of the student body is needed to make the operation of the system more successful.

The Senate took the first step Wednesday by passing a constitutional amendment which will prohibit Court members from sitting in on classes to catch cheating. The Senate is to be commended on this step in the right direction and we urge a "yes" vote on this amendment in the May 6 elections.

WHAT WAS THE first step Wednesday we hope will lead in time to the eventual divorce of the Honor Court from the duties of apprehension, prosecution, and defense of alleged violators.

The Court should judge and judge only. Other functions should be left to others. Only when this is done will Honor Court jurisprudence be to the point where it will lean towards protecting the rights of the accused.

THIS SEPARATION of non-judicial duties from the Honor Court will take time, we realize. But now is the time for the Honor Committee, the Secretary of Honor, and the attorney-general's office to start thinking of changes based on the results of the poll.

The problem of changing people's attitudes is difficult. Students who take offense at cheating, but refuse to turn in cheaters pose a dilemma for the Honor System. We cannot offer a solution to this dilemma, but we do feel that if the Honor System is strengthened to safeguard the rights of the accused, students might be slightly more inclined to turn cheaters over to the Court.

FCCH Encourages Future Leaders

The sixty-five students attending the Florida Citizenship Clearing House conference here this week are enjoying the privilege of hearing many prominent people speak on politics and government.

THE FCCH offers opportunities to college students throughout the state which would be beneficial to every citizen of Florida. The students get a first hand view of government agencies at work by visiting various state offices and the Capitol, thereby making the study of government much more exciting than learning about it from a textbook.

THE FCCH program was expanded this year to offer a select group of political science majors from the state's colleges and universities the opportunity to spend a week as an observer in some of the more important state government offices.

By promoting the personal method of observing politics and government, the sponsors of the FCCH are contributing a great deal to increasing the interest of college students and encouraging them to take part in it.

Board Of Control Duplicated!

By LAWRENCE PERKINS

GREETINGS!

Before getting down to serious business, I had better explain that somebody from Gracious Southern Lawns clubbed our proofreader over the head as he was checking the "Campus Fences" column and changed those Chicago "do not keep off the grass" signs. "Make them think that their signs say 'keep off the grass' like ours," the malefactor said, wielding the bludgeon. The other proofreader, who won't budge an inch, was out, so the foul deed was done. This time we will have the building guarded.

NOW THAT OUR social obligations have been disposed of, let us turn to the exterior world.

I cannot understand all the excitement about the Journalism School. The idea of eliminating unnecessary duplication seems quite practical to me. The only thing I can't understand is why they stopped at just one school.

THE FIRST THING that comes to mind is auditorium pipe organs. The organ at the U of F is a Skinner just like ours, but ours has two more sets of chimes, so is obviously the one to keep. The state can probably sell the one at the U of F to a skating rink for a tidy sum; they might even get enough to fix the campus clock there.

With the organ gone, the auditorium will be inferior to ours, so they can use ours at Westcott on Tuesday and Saturdays. In the meantime, they can turn their building over to the Agricultural Extension Service for use as a dairy barn. "Milk from cultured cows" could be their slogan.

THEIR CAMPUS post office stays open later than ours, so I suppose we will have to give up ours. We can always send out a courier three or four times a week to get our mail, and the empty building would make a lovely penny arcade—so handy to the bookstore.

We would lose our ROTC unit, too, as they have had theirs much longer than we have had ours, and they have an artillery unit which we lack. Of course giving up the ROTC might get us into trouble with the authorities who insist that all land grant schools have an ROTC unit. This brings us to the central problem—why have two universities?

THE ROTC business will mean that we have to move everything to Gainesville. This will not work too much hardship on the residents of West Hall, who are accustomed to making long journeys to and from class, and the other students are hardy and can learn. Only think! We might have been so unfortunate as to have fallen into the miserable predicament of our neighbor state of Georgia, which has a whole system of universities! They have been misleading educators by avowing that each such university specializes in a particular field, as for example Georgia Tech in engineering, and the University of Georgia in humanities. Such an arrangement would demand a journalism school here and relegate the sciences to Gainesville; let us be grateful that no such absurd thing has been suggested.

AFTER THE transfer has been effected, the campus turned over to horticulture, and the principal east-west street of Tallahassee renamed Beetroot Boulevard, there will be one more bit of business to attend to. Why have more than one Board of Control?

It is legendary on this campus that Miss Maude Schwalmeyer (for whom the little building on Copeland Street is named) had a large paddle which was conspicuously displayed in the classroom, labeled Board of Control. That particular Board of Control was a most exemplary instrument. There may have been complaints about the user, but there was never the breath of complaint about the Board itself from teacher, parent or student. With all due respect to others, surely the same thing cannot be said about any other Board of Control anywhere.

Let us, then, recover and restore the one perfect Board of Control to its rightful rank. By the infallible logic which we have established, this will mean that all other Boards of Control must be abolished. Sad, but necessary. At least the members will not go unemployed, they can always apply at the beetroot farm which will flourish where our campus now stands.

Evening Of Music Was Very Pleasant

By DALE JENSEN

The University Symphony, conducted by Robert Sedore, presented its final concert of the season last Friday night to a moderate-sized audience in Westcott Auditorium. Guest soloist was a lovely Senior from the studio of Betty Jane Grimm, Miss Christine Bryan.

OPENING THE concert was Bach's Chaconne from the Partita in D minor, in a twice-removed transcription (orchestrated by Steinberg after the Busoni piano transcription) that was nonetheless quite effective. The Chaconne, with its miniaturized theme and variation form, requires many swift changes of mood. After a rather rough opening, the ensemble settled down and showed constantly increasing skill with the subtleties of Bach.

THE SOLOIST afforded the evening's most enjoyable moments in her exquisite performance of Wagner's Wesendonck Lieder. Miss Bryan should go far. Her mezzo-soprano voice is wonderfully rich, and powerful, throughout its excellent range. In addition to the remarkable technical command displayed, Miss Bryan possesses that rare essence that all creative artists pray for, that seemingly will not allow her to do any unmusical thing. She deserves the highest praise, and will undoubtedly receive it many times over in her future career. We consider ourselves fortunate to be among the first to offer it.

UNDOUBTEDLY INSPIRED by Miss Bryan, the orchestra's best work was also done in the Wagner, which was disappointing from their standpoint, for musically speaking, the Wagner score was the least deserving on the program. After the intermission, the orchestra returned considerably cooled off and performed Beethoven's 8th Symphony in a manner that while acceptable, was a bit of a letdown after the excellence of the Wagner. Nevertheless, they are to be commended, for this is the first presentation within the past three years, of a Beethoven symphony.

The overall effect of the evening was one of great pleasure. The orchestra has improved greatly during the season. The strings, happily augumented by several townspeople and faculty members, have done remarkably well in the face of a very crowded schedule, lack of adequate rehearsal hours, and generally young players.

THE WOODWINDS have developed fine solo qualities, and more delicate yet, a balance of voicings. Intonation, the single largest bugaboo through the orchestra as a whole, has been especially poor in the woodwinds, though this final concert was the best in this respect. The brasses, always capable and solid, have found a balance and blend of parts that would do any orchestra proud.

In short, we feel that the orchestra has gone about as far as it can without further tangible help from the music department. Next week, space permitting, we shall proffer our suggestions for such tangible help.

PAY NO HED to the idiots who declare that criticism should be free from personal feeling. The true critic, I repeat, is the man who becomes your personal enemy on the sole provocation of a bad performance and will only be appeased by good performances.

IN THAT DEN of mature thought and action, the University of Florida, there will be at least 10 more riots before the close of the school year. Myth Necessary To Man-Universe Relation

By EMMETT JARRETT

Man has always attempted to relate himself to the uni[...] This is a statement which has held true since man existed, a[...] will hold true forever, unless there is another step in the evo[...] tionary process which disposes of man as we know him.

IT HAS NEVER been possible, however, for man to establish such a relationship without resort to myth. In times of the "youth" of a culture, the myth of relationship is synonymous with the predominating religion of the culture. In the decline of a civilization, the culture's religion loses its vitality, and people seek for a relation myth elsewhere.

The twentieth century has seen the decline of Christianity (the official religion of the West) and the establishment of various myths of relationship in the poetry of the age. These myths differ from the organized religion's myth in that they are personal, and hence of little use in relating the entire society to the universe in which it finds itself.

SOME EXAMPLES of this phenomenon are the mythology of T. S. Eliot, who accepts Christianity, but states that any hope of progress or any action taken of a moral nature must always be within a context of despair. Eliot takes the myth of Christianity and attempts to "save" his own soul with it. (The use of the term "save" here is not in the vulgar sense of some religious groups in the United States which have their greatest following in the South, and the more ignorant sections of the South at that.)

Another Scandal Due For Cagers?

Last week's NCAA reprimands to Auburn, Seattle and Southern Methodist came on the heels of an article by Sport Magazine on the possibility of another basketball scandal.

In Seattle's case, it was a pretty accurate forecast.

It's been seven years since the big 1951 scandal, when a shocked athletic world looked behind the scenes at Madison Square Garden and other big arenas and decided it was time to wash out the clothes.

Now, Sport asks: "Is college basketball headed for another scandal?"

The article draws no conclusions, but it offers a multitude of facts which can only lead the reader to believe that the answer to the above question must be yes.

Anyone who thinks that gambling on basketball has subsided has only to look at the point spreads which appear daily in the newspapers, or the numerous advertisements in The Sporting News offering to "pick the winners."

That recruiting exists among the major colleges in basketball, no one can deny.

Wilt Chamberlain received a reported $10,000 trust fund to go to Kansas, nobody knows what Oscar Robertson got to attend Cincinnati, but he is probably close to "the Stilt's" class.

RECRUITING SYSTEM

Also in the field of recruiting, "poop sheets" are available to college coaches, not only offering point spreads of prospective games but also a list of the most sought after high school players of the day, a tremendous boon to recruiting.

Basketball is big—and is getting bigger. Somewhere the boom will stop, but at the moment it shows no sign of even slowing down.

With basketball moving out of non-campus city arenas, the colleges themselves are moving into expanded facilities.

Most major basketball powers have fieldhouses with at a minimum a 15,000 seating capacity. The University of Indiana, for instance, has a gym currently seating 10,500—but that's too "small." They're in the process of building a new 17,500 seat structure.

This gives more fans a chance to see the sport, more fans bring more money to the school, more money brings bigger and better players, better players bring more victories, which brings more fans, which brings more money and around and around we go.

It's unfortunate that the key to a good athletic team and a winning season seems to be money these days, but it's also very true.

Is college basketball headed for another scandal? It has certainly gotten off to a good start. This scandal may descend from the recruiting practices rather than the gambling though.

The axe has already fallen on Seattle and North Carolina over the Jackie Moreland disturbance. Others may follow.

Three-fifths of Louisville's starting five this past year was plucked off the campuses of other universities. This has almost become fair play among big-time colleges who are interested in victories and not overly concerned how they get them.

Its not a practice at all universities but it is becoming too widespread to do the sport any good. Sooner or later, the NCAA must catch up and when it does—poof!

However, to quote from the Sport article.

Perhaps the most serious matter is the creed of all those connected with the game. You are not to talk of it, nor even to kid about it or think about it. It is gone, this scandal business. We must just go about our business and it never will return, and anyone who says it will should be classified as a knocker.

"You are to be an ostrich.

"Do not, under any circumstances, say that basketball has nearly all the conditions—and, in many cases, worse—than were found in 1951. Don't say it, even though it is so true that it scares you."

Cindermen End Home Schedule

On the way to one of their best seasons, the Florida State track team plays host to the University of Miami Thursday night in what will be the last home and dual meet of the spring for the Tribe.

Miami is led by senior Bill Bennett who is the team's captain. Bennett runs the dashes, hurdles, and the relays. He also competes in the broad and high jump.

The Hurricanes lost to Florida this season and in other meets have shown weakness in the distance events. Bob Rosebaugh, pole vaulter, Gary Freemen, distances runner and Matt Allen, a half-miler are other key men for Miami.

Doyle Ruff, Tribe ace half miler, may not run in the Miami meet due to an injury he received in the Penn Relays Saturday.

In the Penn Relays, Jerry Henderson set a new FSU school record and placed first in the event as he threw the javelin 217' 4". The winning throw was four feet better than the second place heave.

The sprint medley team for FSU, composed of Ruff, Jim Casteel, Mike Conley, and Jack Terwilliger set a new school record in that event as they finished second to Villanova.

The Seminoles were forced out of the mile relay when Ruff collided with another runner and injured his leg. Dick Elwood pole vaulted 13' for the Tribe, but did not place.

Malmlin Paces Gymnasts' Win

Larry Malmlin, Florida State's Swedish gymnast, bowed out of intercollegiate competition Saturday as he paced the Seminoles to an 85-42 victory over Northwestern Louisiana State.

Using the compulsory routines he will use in the forthcoming National AAU championships, Malmlin won the still rings, high bar and side horse events, and placed second in free exercise to teammate Roger Webb.

7TH WIN

It was the seventh dual victory of the season for the gymnasts breaking the old mark of six set last year. The meet was the season's finale for FSU.

The Tribe's three graduating seniors each came through with individual wins. Laird Anderson, who is unbeaten in dual meet competition this season, won the rope climb, Don Pressler took first on trampoline and Joe Gusic finished first on the parallel bars.

The summary:

Rope climb—Anderson, FSU, Hicks, FSU and Leach, NSC.
Trampoline—Presser, FSU, Powers, FSU and Huval, NSC.
Free Exercise—Webb, FSU, Malmlin, FSU, and Huval, NSC.
Side Horse—Malmlin, FSU, F. Lecuona, FSU, and Lundgren, NSC.
High Bar—Malmlin, FSU, Pearson, NSC, and Gates, NSC.
Parallel Bars—Gusic, FSU, Gates, NSC and Malmlin, FSU.
Still Rings—Malmlin, FSU, Gates, NSC and F. Lecuona, FSU.
Tumbling—Presser and Cicio, FSU, (tie) Webb, FSU.

Netters End Slate With 9-0 Victory

With a 9-0 shutout of Mercer at Macon Saturday, Florida State's tennis team closed out its 1958 slate with a 9-7 overall record.

It was the only win for the netters on their three-match road swing through Georgia. The other two matches saw the Seminoles bow to Georgia and Georgia Tech by identical 8-1 scores.

The Tribe returns all of this year's team next season.

FSU had an easy time with the Bears as they were extended to three sets in only two of the nine contests.

The summary:

Bryan-Maddock defeated Johnson-Daniels, 8-2, 4-6, 6-2; Hester-Berry defeated Garwood-Thompson, 6-1, 6-1; Alex Sutor-Russ Rolinger defeated Maxwell-Kenney, 6-2, 6-0.

Conley Makes Final Appearance At Home

By BEN BALSER
Assistant Sports Editor

Senior Mike Conley, one of the most brilliant trackmen ever to wear the Garnet and the Gold of FSU will make his last appearance before the home fans Thursday night against the University of Miami.

The slender miler has won the mile run in every dual meet since his sophomore year in 1956. This figures up to eight straight mile victories over the past two seasons.

During his three years of competition Conley has broken and reset the school mile record five times. He has also broken the two mile record three times.

In the Coliseum Relays in Montgomery at the beginning of this season, the black-haired speedster, chalked up the current school marks in both the mile and two mile. He ran the mile in 4:18.1 and the two mile in 8:50.3.

Both of the above times were also track records for the indoor track in Montgomery.

Conley first broke the mile mark in 1956, his first year in collegiate competition. The old record was 4:31.8. In the Florida meet that season, Conley paced the four laps in 4:29.9.

At the end of that season in the Florida AAU, the spunky distance man ran the mile in an unofficial time of 4:23.

In 1957, with the record at 4:29.9, Conley became state champ in the mile as he ran it in 4:25 which broke his own mark set the year before.

In the meet following that, the Georgia AAU, Mike again broke his record as he turned the four laps in 4:18.8. That record held until this year when he again broke it in Montgomery.

Last year, in the opening meet of the season against Mississippi Southern, Conley broke the two-mile school mark which was 10:20. At the end of last season, in the Florida AAU Conley broke his own record in the two mile as he ran it in 10:08.

That record held until he broke it again this year in Montgomery as he cut almost a full minute off his old time.

Conley was graduated from Orlando Boone High School with letters in track and basketball. As a miler during his junior and senior year, Conley was state high school champ in that event. In 1953 he held the state record at 4:40.

Besides the mile and two mile runs, Conley also runs a leg in the mile relay and sprint medley. He was a member of the mile relay team that broke the school record in the Sugar Bowl meet in January and then later broke that mark in the Florida Relays.

In the Relays, Conley ran his leg of the relay in 48.6. The modesty and team spirit of Conley was reflected in the answer he gave when asked what his greatest thrill has been at FSU.

One might think he would have answered that it came when he broke one of his individual records, but he smiled from ear to ear and replied, "the way we swept the Florida Relays."

In the Relays, FSU won every event it entered, but Conley did not run his events since only relays are run at this meet. He did run with the mile relay team which was strictly a team victory. But that was his greatest thrill.

Mike holds FSU track coach Mike Long in the highest regard. "Coach Long has certainly been an asset to me. We have both had to cooperate and work together and I think things have turned out well."

Baseballers Clash With Mocs Today

Triumph Twice Over Auburn

By FRANK RAMOS

With a successful two-game trip to Auburn under their belts, Florida State's baseballers face a strong Florida Southern nine today at 3:30 at Seminole Field in the wrap-up of their two-game series.

The Seminoles and Mocs met last night at Centennial Field with righthander Tom Garcia on the mound hoping to make it three straight for the resurging Tribe.

Coach Danny Litwhiler was undecided about today's pitcher but indicated it will probably be either Fred Kenney or southpaw Don Axon.

The Seminoles this past weekend upped their season record to 10-5 by sweeping two games from the Auburn Tigers, 5-1 and 4-2.

Frank Slusser pitched a five hitter in Friday's game as he bested Auburn's sophomore hurler, Red Roberts. Roberts went into the contest with a 4-0 mark.

Dale Koch and Mike Copps proved to be the big guns in the Tribe lineup. Koch drove in two runs with a single while Copps got two RBI's with a sacrifice fly and a single.

KOCH, COPPS HIT

While Jack Bristol held Auburn under control, Koch and Copps continued their batting sprees in the second game off Auburn ace, Alan Koch.

Dale Koch rapped out three singles to drive in two runs. Copps scored two runs and drove in one by collecting a double off the scoreboard and belting an inside the park homer.

FSU catcher, Bill Westendick drove in what turned out to be the winning run in Saturday's contest when he rifled a single to left in the sixth inning to score shortstop Dick Howser.

SLUSSER WINS FOURTH

Slusser had almost perfect control in beating the Tigers. The senior righthander allowed only five hits, walked none, and struck out seven to notch his fourth win without a loss.

Bristol evened a personal account with the Tigers by firing his eight-hitter Saturday. The Tigers defeated the FSU southpaw in the opening game of the year for the Seminoles.

Linksters Enter Golf Tourney

With a 10-7 mark in the record books for the season, the Florida State golf team travels to Athens, Ga., to compete in the Southern Intercollegiate Tournament, which will run Thursday through Saturday.

Some of the strongest teams in the south, including Duke, LSU, Georgia and Florida will be represented in this tourney.

SHAVE GOING

Coach Bill Odeneal will take junior Bob Shave who competed in the Southern Intercollegiate in May of 1956 as a freshman. He placed fourth which was the highest place any FSU golfer has ever attained in the Southern Intercollegiate in the school's history. This was considered quite a feat, especially for a freshman.

Other men who will probably make the trip will be Mel Fleischer, Dick Hanscom, Don Torppa and Rem Noble.

The Seminole golfers closed out their season on a losing note Saturday when the Rollins Tars downed them, 21½-8½. Jim Curti of Rollins won medal honors with a three-under-par 68.

FSU edged Florida Southern's golfers Friday, 14-13. It was the tenth triumph of the season for the Seminole linksters. Dean Refram a Florida Southern player, was medalist with a 69 on the par 72 course.

New Insurance Plan Adds Hospitalization

The Student Insurance program will be expanded to include hospitalization as well as accident insurance if the Senate approves the recommendation of the student insurance committee.

The committee will present its report to Senate tomorrow

If adopted, students who purchase the group accident insurance plan, sold by student government for $4.90 a year, will be eligible to purchase the hospitalization policy for an additional $10.10.

Students may purchase both for $15, but the hospitalization policy cannot be bought without the accident insurance.

The policy, underwritten by the Continental Casualty Co. of Chicago is handled locally by the John E. Hunt Insurance Agency. Hunt's agency is currently administering the student accident insurance.

The proposed policy will cover student's expenses while hospitalized at school, at home, and while traveling, for a period of 12 months. This includes costs acquired while being hospitalized in the FSU Hospital, up to $3 a day for room and board.

Payment for expenses other than room and board are provided for in the policy.

In other hospitals students may receive room and board payment up to $10 a day for 30 days per confinement.

Other benefits are surgical fees up to $200, miscellaneous hospital costs up to $100, out-patient benefits up to $15, and physician's visits when confined in a hospital up to $90.

The policy is also offered to student's dependents at a slightly higher rate.

The committee working on the project include Pat Finlay, secretary of interior; Dick Crawford, secretary of student welfare; Diane Godin, sophomore senator; Mattox Hair, sophomore senator, and Arnold Greenfield, student body president.

Race Relations Panel Slated

A discussion of "The Future of Race Relations in the South" will be held tomorow at 5 p.m. in 208 History.

Several students will be on a panel to make opening remarks, with a discussion to follow. All students are invited to attend.

40 Scholarships From Traffic Fines?

A total of 40 scholarships will probably result from accumulated funds of the traffic division taken from traffic fines this year, Assistant Business Manager Gerald Jones said yesterday.

According to Jones, fifteen $100 scholarships a year have been provided for by money received from traffic violations since July, 1955

Jones will recommend an additional 26 scholarships be provided for next September with accumulated funds that have not been needed to cover the expenses of car registration, decals, and other supplies that are paid for through traffic fines.

During a period from July 1, 1957, extending through March 31, 1958, an estimated five to six thousand tickets have been issued grossing $4,804.76 in fines.

Jones said all violation money is returned to a student fund which pays for various expenses of the traffic division in addition to the scholarships

Irish Named 'Prof-Of-Year' At Convocation

Dr. Marian D. Irish, head of the political science department, was named the University's "Distinguished Professor of the Year" in Tuesday's faculty awards ceremonies.

The award, presented by President Robert M. Strozier, was the result of a vote by a special committee of faculty members representing all areas of academic pursuit.

SECOND PROF

Dr. Irish was the second professor to receive the award which was inaugurated last year. Dr. ... Rogers of the English department was the first recipient. A native of Scranton, Pennsylvania, Dr. Irish came to Tallahassee as a professor of political science in 1933 when the institution was Florida State College for Women.

She is the author of many articles in professional publications and is the co-author of a book, The People Govern, published by Scribners in 1954.

Prentice-Hall will be publishing her forthcoming book, The Politics of American Democracy, coauthored with Dr. James Prothro, of the FSU political science department.

BRITISH REPRINT

Her recent speech to the Southern Political Science Association, of which she is retiring president, was reprinted in a British publication, The New Statesman. The speech concerned the present state of the presidency of the United States.

Dr. Irish was the author of an article in the Saturday Evening Post several years ago in which she expressed the need for a ... of democracy" and said the future safety of this country depends more upon the political understanding of the citizenry than on their technical efficiency or scientific superiority.

The article was an expansion of a lecture given by Dr. Irish to one of her classes.

DEFENDS FACULTY

The Faculty Awards Convocation also heard President Strozier defend the teachers in the recently abolished School of Journalism.

Strozier said that "Lawrence ..., journalism dean and a group of dedicated teachers were called to this institution to found a school of journalism.

Their dedication and their contributions to the University have not been recognized A report made for the Board of Control by a group of consultants based its recommendations for a single school in our sister institution on the basis of duplication in a restricted area. It made no criticisms of the members of our faculty.

"It is my hope," Strozier said, "that we shall be able to encourage the members of that faculty to remain at FSU, not because we feel a sense of obligation to them but because we believe they are the kind of teachers whom we would like to have in our academic family."

Dean's List Frosh To Get More Breaks?

Dean's List freshmen women will be allowed unlimited weekends second semester if legislation passed by Women's Senate this week is approved by Dean Katherine Warren.

The Senators approved a bill Tuesday which would abolish the present designation of five weekends for freshmen with a 3.0 or better and place them under the same rules as upperclassmen, with an unlimited number of weekends

Polly Atwater, women's vice president, said about the bill, "We figure that freshmen who make the Dean's List can use their judgment in deciding how many weekends they should take."

Senator Pat Manning is currently distributing Junior Counselor recognition keys to the present J.C.'s and those J.C.'s of last year who ordered them.

These pins are to honor the service Junior Counselors have rendered during the year to their counselees and the school.

"We were fortunate enough to have money for the keys put in the budget, so that we can continue buying them for the Junior Counselors in the future," Miss Atwater said.

Veteran Nominations

Nominations for new officers will be held at a meeting of the Vets Club at 7:30 tonight at the Trophy Room in the Student Center.

Lewis, Kissenger Lead Attack

Senators Fire Criticisms At Greenfield, Flambeau

Criticisms were levelled against President Arnold Greenfield's administration by several senators Wednesday when he appeared before Senate to answer questions.

Senators Don Lewis and Gary Kissenger led the attack with charges that the President had not obeyed several statutes in the areas of the "buddy system," finance, and veterans' affairs.

The Flambeau was also brought under Senate fire when some senators charged that the newspaper had concentrated undue attack upon the Senate while not giving cabinet any criticism.

TERMED UNFRIENDLY

President Greenfield appeared in Senate to answer questions regarding his administration. This was in response to a resolution passed unanimously by Senate two weeks ago. Senator Don Lewis, author of the resolution, later termed it "unfriendly" to the administration.

Senate reached no conclusions as a body after the questioning period, but Vice President Jan Kaminis advised the Senators that they were within their rights to look over the activities of the executive branch from time to time.

Lewis, who did the most questioning, asked Greenfield about the failure of the buddy system this year. The buddy system is a student government program to help orient foreign students. It was begun three years ago.

Greenfield replied that the program, while good at first, has subsequently diminished. A study was made among the foreign students at the first of the year, he said, and showed that the system did not have the desired results.

VEEP DISAGREES

Vice President Kaminis took issue with the President and said that the system was helpful and should be continued.

Lewis, continuing his attack, charged that the present system of financial committees are not in compliance with the statutes. To this Greenfield replied that the committees do conform with law.

Senator Kissinger asked the President why the office of under secretary for veterans' affairs was not filled.

Greenfield said that the office presently had no duties and he did not want "to appoint anyone to an empty office."

Based on previous questions, Senator Carl Butler and Women's Vice President Polly Atwater charged the executive branch with obeying those statautes which they wished to obey Butler asked if it wouldn't be better if the president would go to Senate and ask them to repeal a law rather than just ignoring it.

BLAST FLAMBEAU

Some Senators charged the Flambeau with concentrating news and editorials on Senate and leaving cabinet "out of print." Greenfield said that the Flambeau gave the activities of the separate cabinet offices as much coverage as Senate if not more He added that he thought the Flambeau was free to criticize whomever it wanted.

Senator Dayton Roberts charged some of the senators with using the question period to air their gripes about the Flambeau.

Greenfield listed some of his administration's accomplishments prior to being questioned. They included Family Weekend, the Honor Poll, the new insurance program, Speaker's Bureau, preparation of the budget, promotion of campus chest, the blood bank, and the SUSGA conference.

REFLECT ON ALL

He added that these accomplishments reflect on all of student government, not just the cabinet. He pointed out that some of them were initiated by Senate and that Senate had enacted legislation on the basis of others. Because of their nature, however, they had to be handled by the executive branch.

In other actions, Senate:

Heard a final Food Service Committee report by Ada Leigh Wall, chairman. On her urging, the Senate created a permanent special committee to function in this area.

Defeated a proposed amendment to the constitution which would have permitted editors of publications a vote on the Board of Publications. It was defeated unanimously without debate after an unfavorable committee report.

Received the resignation of Sonia Morena from Senate.

Faulkner's Work To Be Featured

James T. Cox will read a paper on the analysis of Faulkner's Spotted Horse at the English coffee hour in the Westminster House today at 4 p.m

The paper will deal with the work as it originally appeared in short story form during 1931. The material was later reworked into a novel, The Hamlet, by Faulkner.

"With an analysis of the imagery in the original version, I hope to establish (it) as significant not only in the tradition of frontier humor but in the tradition of the modern symbolic short story," Cox said.

He intends to bring out the element of Christian symbolism which is only faintly apparent in the latter version.

Kaye Band To Play For 'Spring Formal'

By JACK PEACOCK

Musical trends have come and gone, but the inimitable style of Sammy Kaye's orchestra will always remain in the blue-ribbon position of the nation's favorite bands.

With this in mind, the Junior Class is bringing this great showman and his band to the Florida State campus on May 17, for a concert and the "Spring Formal" Dance.

With his unusual and talented flair for the show business, Kaye has instituted his audience-participation feature, "So You Want To Lead A Band," during each show of his engagement.

NOVELTY STUNT

"So You Want To Lead A Band," in which two women and two men, picked at random from the audience by Kaye to lead the band with a souvenir "Swing and Sway" baton, is one of the greatest novelty stunts that has ever graced a band show

Because of the impromptu nature of "So You Want To Lead A Band" many sidesplitting situations arise Kaye asks contestants why they want to lead band and various other questions. The answers almost always guarantee laughs.

Kaye is an excellent ad-lib artist and is quick to take the advantage of any twist in the interview. Yet he never offends and is so informal that the "bandleaders" lost all their nervousness and give good accounts of themselves.

FOLLOW BATON

The four contestants are called up and each one is interviewed, then handed a baton and invited to lead the band. The musicians follow every move of the baton.

After each contestant has had a chance to conduct the band, Kaye reintroduces each contestant to the audience and the audience votes on the best one by applause. The one who receives the most applause is adjudged the winner and receives a nice prize.

SAMMY KAYE

The concert will be held in Westcott Auditorium at 3 p.m. on May 17 and the admission will be 75 cents per person. The "Spring Formal" Dance will be held that evening in the men's gym from 9 til 1 and admission is $1.50 per couple.

Special combination tickets are being sold for $2.50 and all tickets are available at Westcott Ticket Office, date of opening sales will be announced later.

Here's The Record

Recently several Senators have been suggesting that the Flambeau has been unduly critical of the Senate. The latest of these criticisms of the Flambeau came in Wednesday's Senate meeting.

JUST HOW CRITICAL of the Senate has the Flambeau been this year? This is the editorial record.

October 18, 1957—We urged Senate to give more thought to the passage of bills.

December 13, 1957—We felt that Senate could broaden its perspective and spend a majority of its time discussing such problems as new housing, educational requirements, integration, and parking and traffic.

January 17, 1958—Absent senators are stagnant officeholders.

March 14, 1958—Warned Senate not to pass a resolution providing for petty methods to promote voting.

March 21, 1958—Denounced passage of above resolution.

February 25, 1958—Urged adoption of "Dead Day" resolution passed by Senate.

April 29, 1958—Praised Senate for passage of Honor Court amendment.

ON OTHER OCCASIONS the Flambeau has offered suggestions to the legislative branch without their being critical or laudatory.

Now what has the Flambeau said about the executive branch of student government.

November 1, 1957—Made a case for NSA and criticized President Greenfield's stand on that issue.

December 10, 1957—Praised cabinet for action in lifting sophomore car ban.

April 29, 1958—Urged cabinet to follow up honor poll results.

THE RECORD WILL show that the Flambeau has not unduly criticized the Senate—nor has it overly praised the executive branch. While the Flambeau has devoted more editorial attention to Senate, it has neither forgotten about the executive branch, nor has it been partial in any "squabble" between the two branches of government.

The Flambeau feels that its functions as a newspaper are to praise, criticize, and most important—offer suggestions to all branches of student government.

SG Presents Good Program

Student Government, and we refer to both the executive and legislative branches, has come up with a most worthwhile addition to the present student insurance program. The new addition gives students the chance to purchase hospitalization at the low price of $15 per year. Dependents may also purchase the insurance at a slightly higher rate.

THE INSURANCE program which has been in effect for a few years under the auspices of student government allows a student to purchase accident coverage for $4.90 per year. Now students will have the option of purchasing hospitalization insurance with their accident policy.

The benefits of the hospitalization plan are many, but perhaps the one which will affect most students is the clause which covers expenses incurred in the University Hospital.

Since the activity fee pays for most expenses of student patients, (except food expenses), those carrying the hospitalization insurance will not need to pay any costs. The plan pays up to $3 a day for room and board while confined in the University Hospital. It also pays for expenses other than room and board.

IN OTHER hospitals students may receive room and board payments up to $10 a day for 30 days per confinement. Other benefits include costs for surgical fees, miscellaneous hospital costs, and physician's visits when confined in a hospital.

The proposed plan was drawn up by the John E. Hunt Insurance Agency with the student's needs in mind. Although some items like maternity benefits for married students could not be included because it would necessitate higher rates, the insurance program is quite broad and adequate for students.

Student Government must be commended for the presentation of this fine, practical and most beneficial program. We are sure it will be accepted by the Senate at its next meeting and will be available to the student body in the fall.

What Others Are Doing

A staunch advocate of education reform sent us the following excerpts from the Council for Basic Education Bulletin.

"SOMETHING happened in Richmond, Virginia, a few weeks ago that has attracted little attention outside the Old Dominion but has great potential significance for education nationally. The State Board of Education, goaded by threats from the General Assembly, voted to cut drastically the number of credits hours in professional education required for a teaching certificate, and to up the requirements in English, foreign languages, mathematics, and the sciences.

"Among other changes, a college graduate now needs to take only nine instead of 18 hours on Education. Even this requirement can be waived by the State Superintendent to enable local communities to employ retired college professors and others qualified to teach but who lack education courses."

"AMAZINGLY, the Senate of the General Assembly voted unanimously in favor of a bill which would have instructed the State Board to abolish all professional Education requirements for high school teaching. Eventually the House watered down the Senate proposal and the State Board adopted the recent regulations— which might be described as a victory of subject matter over methodology."

Perhaps our legislature could follow Virginia's lead with a re-examination of Florida's teacher certification requirements. Although the conditions may be different in Virginia, a re-evaluation of our solidly immersed methodology courses is badly needed

LETTERS to the EDITOR

Sr. Prexy

DEAR JUNIOR CLASS MEMBERS,

As your representatives this year, we have seen the problems confronting class officers. Hoping for the best possible representation in our senior year, we are endorsing BILL CLENDINEN for president. Many of us have worked with Bill during his terms of office as president of our freshman and sophomore class and realize that he is more than capable and able to do the job in the best and most efficient mannner.

If you are seeking good class government and excellent representation, please vote as we are, for BILL CLENDINEN.

SINCERELY,
VICTOR HARKE,
Social Chairman
BILL BUNKER,
Vice President
NANCY FOWLER,
Treasurer

DEAR JUNIORS,

I would like to take the opportunity to thank you as a class for the enthusiasm and support that you have given me as your Jr. Class President this year. If you see fit to elect me your SENIOR CLASS PRESIDENT for next year, I'm sure as a class we will go forward even more to become the best senior class Florida State University has ever known.

Your vote and support will be appreciated.

SINCERELY,
PHIL KNIGHT

Sr. Veep

JUNIOR CLASS:

Serving as your class vice president this past year has given me a great deal of pleasure and satisfaction. I deeply appreciated the vote of confidence given me last spring when I was elected to this office.

Now I am asking for your support again as I seek election to the same office which I held this year—the class vice presidency. My aim in seeking re-election is efficient and capable class government, and I am willing to give my time and energy to the fulfillment of this goal. It is my hope that our class will move forward in our final year here at FSU, and I would like to take part in its progress.

I will appreciate your consideration and confidence in Tuesday's elections. Above all, however, I hope that you will all go to the polls and vote, so that we may have the overall participation that a class such as ours should have.

SINCERELY,
BILL BUNKER
Candidate for Senior Class
Vice President.

Soph Prexy

DEAR FRESHMAN CLASS,

During the past year I have served you faithfully and have been active in Senate throughout the whole year. I have introduced several bills including the so called "dead day," a day before exams when there are no classes. I served on the organization and finance committee which helped take the honor poll. I also called for the bus investigation which increased the number of buses.

This is how I've served you as your freshman Senator. I have the enthusiasm, the desire, and most important, the experience in student government to serve you best.

If elected, I promise to work for a "rat week" which will do a much better job of orienting (?) the new freshmen than we had. I will work for a bigger and better Sophomore hop next year. Last but not least, I will work for a class project which will bring our class more prestige.

Your freshman senator,
DON SINK

Soph Sec.

DEAR FRESHMEN:

Freshmen, you have a problem—and we, whose names are attached to this endorsement, have the right solution to your problem.

The problem is your need for a Secretary of your Sophomore Class. Our answer is qualified, dependable, and willing Miss Nancy Bates.

Nancy's record shows past secretarial experience for many service clubs, and competent work in a local office further proves her dependability.

In addition to the many activities to her credit, Nancy was valedictorian of her graduating class and is now secretary of her sorority's pledge class. She is further qualified by being a Business Education major.

Sincerely,
TEMPLE HESS, BRENDA M. BRADY, ELBIA GARCIA, MELISSA STALLINGS, SALLIE LIDDON, KAY DAVIS.

Vote Yes

FELLOW STUDENTS:

As Chief Justice-elect of your Honor Court, I would like to urge you to vote for the amendment in the election Tuesday which prohibits Honor Court Justices from proctoring exams. I think that this is a good amendment and should be passed for the following reasons:

1. It will protect the court members. As you know court members are sworn, as are all students to uphold the honor system. The few instances in the past in which court members have proctored exams, have been when they were requested to do so by members of that class, and felt that it was their duty to do so. This amendment will allow the court member to refuse to do this and place the duty where it should be in the first place—on you.

2. It is not the purpose or duty of the Court to be a "police agency." The Court's purpose is to try the violations which are reported by you.

3. It should cause students to assume more responsibility for the Honor System. In the past many have assumed it to the point of asking the Honor Court to do something about bad situations — now, perhaps they will go the whole way and do it themselves.

For these reasons and others, I urge you to vote YES on the amendment. I believe that with cooperation, constructive criticism and a lot of hard work, we can have a true and effective honor system at FSU.

Sincerely,
BUCK BRYAN
Chief Justice-elect of the Honor Court

Sr. S.C.

MEMBERS OF THE JUNIOR CLASS

My name is Marilyn Reedy. Briefly I would like to tell you why I am seeking the office of Senior Social Chairman. Recreation is my major, and I am President of the FSU Recreation Society. Especially through my major, I have received a great deal of training in Social Recreation. Because of this, and because I would be working in my major field, you can be assured of an Interested, Dependable, and Qualified Social Chairman. I sincerely hope that you will grant me the privilege to serve you next year in this capacity.

Sincerely,
MARILYN REEDY

Jr. S.C.

DEAR FELLOW MEMBERS OF THE SOPHOMORE CLASS,

I am writing this letter to ask your support in the coming class elections. As you might know, I am seeking the office of Social Chairman of the Junior class.

I feel that in the two years that we have had on this campus, I have tried to fulfill the qualifications necessary for this office. I was this year's Chairman of Freshman Talent night, on the committee for the Campus All-Star Show; I am a member of the Students Events committee, I have been on the Freshman and Sophomore Executive committees that have planned our social events, a member of Sophomore Council, a J. C. for next year, and have a 3. overall.

I would serve in this office to the best of my ability, so "come sing with me" and vote for Sandi Baskind for Social Chairman of the Junior Class.

With sincerest thanks,
I remain,
SANDI BESKIND

DEAR SOPHOMORES,

For the past two years I have been honored to serve you in the capacity of class secretary. Now that the period of poster-littered buildings, jittery nerves, and hasty speeches has returned, I would again like the opportunity to serve our class as secretary. My continued interest in this particular office seems unusual perhaps, but it reflects a sincere desire for a position of responsibility and not just one of political prestige.

I would certainly appreciate your support in this election, but what ever your decision may be, please take time to vote — so you may take pride in those you select to represent you.

Sincerely,
KAY HUFFORD
Candidate for Jr. Class Secretary.

Judiciary

To: FSU Student Body
Subject: The KEY for a capable Judiciary member.

Serving you this past year as a member of the Judicial Court, I have gained insight into and experience in dealing with the problems of the men and women on our campus.

I, Nancy KEY, am again seeking a position on Judiciary and I am again ready to accept the KEY responsibilities of the court—fair and impartial judgement.

Sincerely,
NANCY KEY
Student Party

Honor Court

TO THE STUDENT BODY:

I am asking you, the members of the student body, to vote for me for the office of Senior Men's Honor Court. I have a very sincere interest in serving you as a member of your Honor Court.

I believe strongly in the principles of the Honor Code and wish to serve my university in this office. I have taken part in a wide variety of campus activities such as Sigma Delta Psi, Alpha Kappa Psi, Commander of Arnold Air Society, and Varsity Track. I have also achieved 3.2 scholastic average. I believe my participation in these activities has enabled me to work very effectively with many members of the student body.

I will greatly appreciate your support and look forward to the opportunity of serving you.

DON AYRES

DEAR STUDENTS:

In making plans for my campaign in this election, the suggestion was made that I seek endorsement by students well-known in campus politics. It is my feeling, however, that unless a student is elected on his personal merits, he does not deserve to hold an office. This is especially true for a position on Honor Court, where politicians reknown is far exceeds in importance by personal qualifications.

Here at FSU, I have served this past year on Sophomore Council and as Social Chairman of my dormitory. I have maintained a 3 1 overall average; and, I have been selected to serve as Junior Counselor for 1958-59.

To me, however, my most important qualifications are interest in the Honor System of FSU, and the desire to serve my fellow students in this capacity.

So it is with this in mind that I offer my candidacy for the position of Junior Women's Justice on Honor Court.

Sincerely,
ELAINE BOGUE

Snack Bar Hardens a American Student

By LAWRENCE PERKINS

GREETINGS!

A few of my degenerate neighbors, softened by W civilization, have been complaining to me about the Snac here in West Hall. Their puling complaints specify such dilloes as high prices, bad service and dirty dishes.

AS USUAL, they have missed the point. Fortunately, as I have observed on my rounds picking up dry cleaning (you didn't think I was living on what I make writing this column, did you?), our virile American heritage is still with us, and many of our students have risen to the challenge.

The truth is that the Snack Bar is there to make the students get out and scrounge for themselves.

I PASS OVER the many who have learned how to heat a can of beans in the shower room, and to keep bread reasonably fresh in a clothes hamper. And the few who keep going from week to week by attending all the coffee hours and coffee concerts are unworthy of mention.

One shining example is Wyatt O'Penspaces, from Houston, Texas. He has rigged a pigeon trap on the sun deck, and has a cozy little barbecue pit (the one he built for those sheep he couldn't find) over in the corner. Not only is his food problem taken care of, but he has enough feathers to keep his pillow stuffed. The only trouble is that lately he has developed an abominable habit of sitting on window ledges and cooing

ANOTHER STUDENT with the true pioneer spirit is Calvin Clum. Cal has perfected a process for transmuting grass into chopped spinach by ion transfer. No fool, Cal tells his major professor that there are still a few technicalities to work out, and three times a he brews up another ba the stuff. That curious hue which his skin has on recently will probably right off once he gets ou the world again.

There is also Walton who set out a seine in tle brooklet near the po fice building, and occa lands a very nice catf steams them at the steam at the entrance of the pa lot in front of West Hall is no use giving you th tistics, of course, as nobod lieves a fish story.

AS A MATTER OF this gustatory enterpr not entirely confined to Americans. Gaetano G baldi tells me that he ha ured out a very practic to use the incinerato pizza oven, and Toshi kiri informs me that the from the flower beds front yard are not so ta chrysanthemum salad, bu will do in a pinch—and in a pinch.

So you see, fellows wrong it is to complain an institution that has real purpose the develo and furtherance of nat terprise and invention of us would have thou these things if we had a teria which opened at re able hours and served ing foods at prices whic could afford? Nobody would have gone our dec way, and fallen a victim first hot dog to assault us we have left these ivy-c halls.

Certificate Recitals Are Enjoyable Fare

By DIXON REDDITT

The first recital of the week, the certificate recitals of C Terpening and Jerrald McCollum, was as enjoyable as any tificate recital we have heard and considerably more impor musically than most.

A certificate or junior recital is always an important landmark in the musical lives of those who undertake to prepare such a performance. All students in the applied area of voice, piano, organ, etc. are required to give both a junior and a senior recital.

Performers majoring in the wind instrument field are only required to give a senior recital. No student majoring in music education or in a related field with a specialization in music is required to give any type of recital. Whenever students in these other fields give recitals it can be assumed that they have done so only by near super-human efforts, course work being what it is in their major fields.

THEREFORE WE thrice commend Miss Terpening who is a music education major and also active in other areas here and about

McCollum played with a sensitivity that is hard to achieve on that monstrous challenge to physical virtuosity: the organ We only wished that his Prelude and Fugue in D Major of Bach had not been partially obscured by the herd of people who entered the hall late after the Prelude.

This stamping and pawing about like wounded animals is to be doubly despised, both by the performer, who may have his concentration broken and by the audience, which can hardly help being EXTREMELY annoyed Something should be done.

DESPITE THESE above mentioned distractions, McCollum proved himself to be sensitive and alert to many subtle variations in registration and Miss Terpening proved that she has abandoned forever the 'coke-bottle' school of flute playing which has been so popular here in the past.

We were particularly thankful to McCollum for reserving his full fortissimo until the end of the Franck, Chorale in A minor, where it was most effective.

Miss Terpening's best work was in the frequency heard (on this campus) Trio I of Haydn. Here the ensemble (Dorsey Stuart and Robert Cancelosi oboe and 'cello) was just short of magnificent.

THE SCORING is originally, of course, for two flutes and cello. The transcription of one of the flute parts for oboe, needle say, places the oboe in some ward situation. Stuart h transcended the difficulties grace and in most cases wi parent ease

Tribe Opens Road Swing

Larry Block

Two Main Pitchers

For the past two years Baseball Coach Danny Litwhiler has built his staff around two main pitchers, and oddly enough one has been a righthander—the other a southpaw.

Going back to 1956, Florida State's big two were righthander Max Loyg and southpaw strikeout artist Tony Avitable.

Last year's staff was built around southpaw Jack Bristol and big-redheaded righthander Jerry Boxer. In both years the Tribe was chosen as the independent to represent district III at the Gastonia, N.C. regional playoffs.

When this season began Litwhiler had his lefthander in Bristol, but the other spot was far from filled. It was narrowed down among Frank Slusser (2-1 in 1957), Tom Garcia (3-0 in '57) and Fred Kenney (1-2 last year).

At this moment, though, the battle is over—it's Slusser. The Nescopek senior righthander has won five games so far without a loss, one of which was the school's only no-hitter, with an amazing earned-run-average of 0.84.

If Slusser gives up one run in a game his era goes up. 'N what's he do against Florida Southern—pitch shutout ball for his five innings on the hill.

On the Seminoles' current road trip the pitching rotation calls for Slusser to open against Stetson, Bristol in the second game, Garcia to open the Miami series and Slusser to pitch the final game.

From here on in the Seminoles' chances for their third straight NCAA appear to hinge on the pitching arms of Slusser and Bristol.

The third starter, Garcia, although a capable pitcher, is, however, ineligible for any playoff action as he is in his fourth year of varsity ball. NCAA rules say three years only.

As the late Connie Mack once said, "Baseball is 70% pitching." A lot of people are in accordance with that statement.

WEIRD INCIDENT

A "freak" incident last week at the Penn Relays may very probably have cost Florida State's crack relay teams a chance in the national spotlight of track.

Doyle Ruff, running the second leg of the mile relay, and in third place at the time, collided with another man as the runners became bunched together.

Result—a muscle strain for Ruff and the Seminoles had to sit it out for the remainder of the meet.

But FSU did pull one out of the hat in the person of Jerry Henderson, who tossed the javelin over 217' and a first place.

I checked the results of the meet in The New York Times, and the best they could do was mention it in the last graph of a 25-paragraph story on page five.

It read something like this. "In the javelin, Florida State, a newcomer, ..." And to boot they misspelled his name and Florida.

SWEENEY IN THE TREES

Spring is here—the season of tree-sitting contests. This I applaud. Tree-sitting is healthful and jolly and as American as apple pie. Also it keeps you off the streets.

Tree-sitting is not, however, without its hazards. Take, for example, the dread and chilling case of Manuel Sigafoos and Ed Sweeney, both sophomores at the Nashville College of Folk Music and Woodworking, and both madly in love with a beautiful alto named Ursula Thing, who won their hearts singing that fine old folk song, I Strangled My True Love with Her Own Yellow Braids, and I'll Never Eat Her Sorghum Any More.

Both Manuel and Ed pressed Ursula to go steady, but she could not choose between them, and finally it was decided that the boys would have a tree-sitting contest, and Ursula would belong to the victor. So Manuel and Ed clambered up adjoining aspens, taking with them the following necessaries food, clothing, bedding reading matter, and—most essential of all—plenty of Marlboro Cigarettes.

We who live on the ground know how much you get to like with a Marlboro. Think how much more important they must be to the lonely tree-dweller—how much more welcome their fine, mild tobacco; how much more gratifying their free-drawing filters; how much more comforting their sturdy, crushproof flip-top box. Climb a tree and see for yourselves

"...A TREE SITTING CONTEST...."

Well supplied with Marlboros, our heroes began their tree-sitting contest—Manuel with good heart, Ed with evil cunning. The shocking fact is that crafty Ed, all unbeknownst to Manuel, was one of three identical triplets. Each night while Manuel dozed on his bough, one of Ed's brothers—Fred or Jed—would sneak up the tree and replace him. "How can I lose?" said Ed with a fiendish giggle to his brother Fred or Jed.

But Ed had a big surprise coming. For Manuel, though he did not know it himself, was a druid! He had been abandoned as an infant at the hut of a poor and humble woodcutter named Cornelius Whitney Sigafoos III, who had raised the child as his own. So when Manuel got into the tree, he found much to his surprise that he had never in all his life felt so at home and happy. He had absolutely no intention of ever leaving.

After seven or eight years Ed and his brothers wearied of the contest and conceded. Ursula Thing came to Manuel's tree and cried, "I am yours! Come down and pin me."

But Manuel declined. Instead he asked Ursula to join him in the tree. This she could not do, being subject to mopery (a morbid allergy to woodpeckers), so she ended up with Ed after all.

Only she made a mistake—a very natural mistake. It was Jed, not Ed, with whom she ended up.

Ed, heartbroken at being tricked by his own brother, took up metallurgy to forget.

Crime does not pay.

OUT BY A STEP. Florida State first baseman Charlie Rodgers stretches to nip a Southern batsman in Monday night's game. Tribe won, 5-0.

Face Hatters, Miami; Trip Southern Twice

By BEN BALSER
Assistant Sports Editor

Riding on the crest of a four-game win streak, the Florida State baseball team moves into Deland today for the first of two games with the Stetson Hatters.

Monday, the Seminole baseballers journey to Miami to meet the University of Miami in a two game set.

FSU's ace hurler, Frank Slusser (5-0) is slated to open against the Hatters today, and southpaw Jack Bristol (3-2) gets the nod for tomorrow's contest.

Coach Danny Litwhiler has tentative plans to pitch Tom Garcia against the Hurricanes Monday and come back with Slusser Tuesday.

The Hatters will probably start Russ Sikes against the Tribe today. The rivalry between FSU and Stetson has been one of the keenest in the state.

The two teams have met 29 times with the games dating back to 1948. The Seminoles have won 16 times while the Hatters have taken 13.

SPLIT SERIES

Miami and FSU have already met twice this season with the two-game series ending in one victory for both teams.

Litwhiler will go with the lineup that has pushed over 25 runs in the last four games. Owen McCarron, the leading hitter with .385, will open in centerfield.

He will probably be flanked by Mike Copps and Gerry Philp. Copps is leading the team in RBI's with 18 and Philp has 12. They are batting .365 and 313 respectively.

Dale Koch with 13 RBI's will start at third and Dick Howser, who is batting .304 will be at shortstop. Second base will be handled by Ray Bazzell and Charlie Rogers, who is in a current batting slump, will be at first base.

Bill Westendick, who opened the season as a reserve catcher, and has started the last six games, will start against the Hatters. He is batting .310.

The Seminoles boosted their record to 12-5 with two victories over Florida Southern, Monday and Tuesday.

Tuesday afternoon, Slusser held Southern to two hits in five innings then retired as his mates went on to win, 11-1. McCarron, Copps, and Westendick had two hits apiece and Copps and Westendick both had two RBI's.

Garcia spun a nifty five-hitter Monday night as State triumphed, 5-0 Howser led the Seminoles with two doubles in four trips to the plate.

Thinclads Seek AAU Crown

Paced by national javelin champion Jerry Henderson, Florida State's southern track giants will travel to Gainesville tomorrow as favorites to cop the Florida AAU track title.

Main competition for the Tribe will be furnished by Florida. Other teams entered are Miami, Florida Freshmen, and the Tallahassee Athletic Club, composed chiefly of FSU freshmen.

The Tribe will be competing after only one day of rest. They met Miami here last night in a dual meet.

Some famous individual stars will also compete in the AAU unattached. Among these is a former national javelin champ, Bill Duckworth. Duckworth, a graduate of Georgia, threw the javelin 232 feet earlier in the season at the Florida Relays.

Henderson's best effort for FSU is 217 feet, which won him the national title last Saturday at the Penn Relays.

FAULKS ENTERED

Another well-known cinder star entered in the 100 and 220 is Buddy Faulks, also an alumnus of Georgia. Faulks, who has stepped off a 9.6 in the century, has won both titles the last three years in both the Florida and Georgia AAU meets.

Opposing Faulks will be Seminole Jack Terwilliger. Terwilliger has run a 9.7 this year.

The iron-man title for the meet must go to FSU's Jim Casteel. Casteel is entered in four individual events, the 440, 220, low hurdles, and broadjump, and will also see action with the mile relay team.

Doyle Ruff, who injured his leg last week at the Penn Relays, is a surprise entry in the 880. It was thought at first that the Orlando speedster would not be able to run the rest of the year.

One of the Seminole track greats of all times, Mike Conley, is favored to win his two specialties, the mile and two-mile runs.

"The team with the greater desire will win," Coach Mike Long stated.

Long feels that the meet will be very close "for varying reasons." These factors include the individual stars the Tribe must face as well as the normal Gator threat when they are at full strength.

Top Rope Climber

Gym Star Anderson Ends College Career

By MIKE PLATTIS

Fans watching Saturday's gymnastics meet with Northwestern Louisiana State College may remember seeing a bundle of muscles hurtling up a 20-foot rope in the vicinity of 3.7 seconds.

Senior Laird Anderson is probably the most outstanding rope climber in the history of Florida State.

He also competes on the flying rings, and this year has lost only once in dual meets, to to Swedish team mate Larry Malmlin.

Like tramolinist Don Priesser, Anderson almost missed coming to FSU.

"I was all ready to go to the University of Georgia, when I saw Florida State win the Georgia AAU's in 1954 I met Coach Price, and became interested in continuing my high school gymnastics in college."

Anderson

A native of Atlanta, Georgia, and one of the few Seminole gymnasts to come from Georgia and the South in general, Anderson was the state's school-boy all-around champion his senior year, and was a member of the Druid Hills High School team which swept the Georgia, Alabama, and Florida state championships in 1954.

As a freshman in high school he tried out for football, but soon found that he was "a little too little," so he tried out for a gymnastics team which was just forming.

FSU coach Hartley Price has been happy that his ace climber was too small for football, for the muscular Atlantan came up with a sixth in the rope climb in the National AAU's as a sophomore, scored a fifth in the 1957 NAAU's, and another fifth in this year's NCAA's in East Lansing, Michigan.

BEST TIME

His best competitive time has been a winning 3.6 seconds in the 1957 Florida AAU's, which he also won in 1955.

Price reluctantly noted the end of Anderson's career by saying, "I wish he was a freshman and starting all over again for us. He's done a fine job, and I really hate to see him leave. Those 5½ points he scored in last month's NCAA's were pretty big."

Placing fifth at that meet was the high light of four years competition in college, and the stocky gymnast felt, "more proud of that accomplishment than any other in gymnastics It came as a climax to four years work in the gym."

The future holds an ROTC army commission at graduation, and then training at Fort Benning, Georgia next January.

After his two-year hitch, he's not sure exactly what branch of his political science background he would like to explore, but he knows that he would definitely "like to be of some service to the country, probably in foreign service or some type of government work."

Unlike so many athletes, Anderson didn't limit his extra curricular time to athletics.

A former vice-president of Sigma Chi fraternity, and presently president of Gold Key, he is also a member of ODK, army ROTC Scabbard and Blade, former vice-president of Alpha Council, and Who's Who in American Colleges.

PDT, Majors Cop Net Titles

Phi Delta Theta and the Majors Club won the intramural badminton titles in their respective divisions.

PDT went through the Greek Divisions playoffs undefeated and in the finals soundly defeated Kappa Alpha, 15-8 and 15-3 for their crown.

The Majors went through the Dorm-Independent playoffs undefeated and edged out once-beaten Newman Club in the finals, 15-18 and 15-13.

In softball make-up games, LCA soundly defeated PKA, 25-5. KA defeated SC, 15-10 and then lost to SN, 4-2.

Bob Nellums pitched his second shut-out of the season, by blanking TEP, 9-0 and then won a forfeit from PKP. DTD shut out KS, 7-0.

Playoff schedules have been decided and in the Greek division. In the first round of the double elimination tournament ATO meets PKT, SN meets SAE and KA and PDT drew byes.

Dorm - Independent playoffs started yesterday with only four teams being entered Newman Club faced Magnolia Hall and the Psychology Club met Penthouse Gang. This will also be a double elimination tournament.

The Intramural board met last Monday and decided that the Greek Division and the Dorm - Independent Division would be completely independent of each other next year.

Frosh Nine, Gators Open Here Today

Florida State's freshman baseball team seeks to hike its season record over the .500 mark in a two-game set with the University of Florida frosh here Friday and Saturday.

Both games are set for 3:30 p.m. at Seminole Field.

The heavy-hitting Baby Seminoles take a 3-3 mark into the series.

They have beaten South Georgia Junior College, Hanover College and Troy State once each and dropped three to Troy State.

Coach Bob Wynn will probably start a lineup including six men who are hitting over .350.

Leading hitter among the regulars is Jack Dull, hitting .455 First baseman Doug Walker is hitting .409, second baseman Bob Reynolds .400 and catcher Tommy Thomas .357.

Wynn indicated that outfielder Jim King, hitting a lusty .714 in limited appearances, may return to the lineup for the frosh after being sidelined with an injured foot.

Golf Tourney In Second Day

The second round of the Southern Intercollegiate Golf Tourney at Athens swings into action today as the Florida State golf team will attempt to improve their fifth place finish of last year.

Yesterday 18 holes were played, and today the linksters will tour the 18 holes again. The low 40 scorers will compete for the individual title in the 36-hole round tomorrow.

The team placings will be computed on today's and yesterday's scores.

Coach Bill Odeneal entered six Seminoles in the tourney; Bob Shave, Mel Fleischer, Rem Noble, Dave Morris and Dink Wise. The low four scores will be included in the team score.

North Texas State is defending their team title. Dick Whetzle, of North Texas State, will be defending the individual crown which he has copped the past two years.

Twenty-eight colleges and universities and numerous individual stars are on hand for the 21st annual event.

A Married Couple's Life Here

From Scotland To Panama To FSU

By VIRGINIA DELAVAN

Roughly 8,000 miles of Atlantic Ocean separate Paisley, Scotland and Panama City, Panama. But through fate, chance, or some other strange force, a Scottish-American soldier and a Panamanian University student met, fell in love, married and set up housekeeping at FSU.

John McTaggart was born in the United States of Scottish parents. When he was five the family moved back to Paisley, where he grew up with his two brothers and one sister. At 20 a touch of wanderlust struck him, sending him to Canada job-hunting.

CROSSED BORDER

In the course of time (1954) he crossed the border from Vancouver, British Columbia, to Washington and eventually wound up in the US Army, fulfilling his service commitment as an American citizen. His basic training was completed in California.

Meanwhile, Tilcia Femenias, an only child, was growing up in Panama's capital, Panama City.

She went to high school in the Canal Zone, learning to speak English with only a trace of a Spanish accent. Subsequently for 2½ years she studied at the University of Panama, majoring in English.

Luckily for our story, John was assigned to duty in Panama. The soldier and the student were introduced to each other by a friend of Tilcia's.

On June 22, 1957 the two were married in a Catholic Panamanian Church, by a "Spanish priest speaking in atrocious English," says John.

Eight months later, after John's discharge in September and a four-months' stay in Panama as a civilian, the couple moved to a four-room apartment at 447½ West College Avenue, Tallahassee, Florida.

THREE SEMESTERS

Through Army extension courses administered through FSU, John had completed three semesters of college work and was enrolled here as a second semester sophomore.

Though John (26) and Tilcia "Tillie" (21) McTaggart have unique personal backgrounds, their daily life might well typify that of the many other married couples working and studying on the FSU campus.

John has just decided to major in speech therapy, with his minor in psychology. He ultimately plans to work with children with speech and hearing impediments, possibly at a hospital in the Canal Zone.

Five foot, four-and-a-half inch Tillie is temporarily the family breadwinner. She works full-time as a secretary with the campus Army ROTC unit, doing "mostly typing — lesson plans for the captains' ROTC classes, tests and demerit lists."

They find that their biggest problem these days is "money." Tilcia earns $185 a month after deductions and another $135 comes in from John's GI Bill.

A breakdown of monthly expenses runs approximately: $80 for apartment (includes rental, tax, water heater, garbage collection and utilities), $60-70 for food, which varies somewhat from month to month.

BEER WITH BOYS

About $25 for entertainment (only the "best" movies, good plays at FSU and "beer with the boys"), $20 for miscellaneous expenditures (gas, newspapers, magazines, etc.).

The rest of the monthly income is banked. Tilcia terms their budget "strict", but John seems to feel that it's rather flexible.

The McTaggarts arise every week day morning "in a rush" around seven. While John shaves and dresses, Tilcia gets breakfast (eggs, bacon, tomato juice, milk and coffee). Tillie dresses, they eat.

Leaving the breakfast dishes unwashed in the sink, they head for campus, John for class and Tillie for work. John's classes run from 8 until 12 every day, and include algebra, Spanish, history, meteorology and speech.

Lunch is a catch-as-catch-can affair when they "eat hardly anything" for lack of time. John then makes tracks to the library, where he spends his afternoons studying.

He picks Tillie up at the ROTC building at 4, and they do the family errands — getting gas and groceries. After an occasional fifteen or twenty minute ride around town they return home.

TAKE TURNS

The two take turns cooking dinner — John likes Italian food and Tillie's speciality is arroz con pollo (chicken with rice). One of Tillie's special (and practical) hobbies is collecting and experimenting with tasty, inexpensive dishes.

By 8 or 8:30 they have finished eating and washing dishes.

In the evenings, John studies, devoting most of his time to his hardest subject, algebra, while Tillie reads, sews and "writes letters like mad" to make up for John's neglect of letter-writing.

Sometimes they have visitors from the "house in front," which is inhabited by male FSU students, or listen to hi-fi records there.

Tillie usually stays up until John finishes studying, about 11:30, because as she says, "He studies better when I do."

On Saturdays and Sundays they sleep until the leisurely hour of 11 or 11:30. Weekends are filled with such domestic activities as housecleaning and picnics with other married couples.

DIVIDE WORK

The two divide the housework —John takes the laundry to be cleaned, sometimes buys groceries, mops the floors, in addition to his part-time chef job. Tillie irons, makes beds, cleans and generally "straightens up the whole mess he makes."

Tillie claims that John's worst habit is "leaving things around. I'm like a little shadow, walking after him and picking things up."

John won't reveal any of Tillie's faults, but she claims her worst fault is "leaving things in the refrigerator until they spoil."

But about her housekeeping, John says, "Due to her family background she had never done a lick of housework in her entire life; however, in the 10 months that I've been the guinea pig, I must say there's been definite improvement."

CHEAP LABOR

Due to the cheap labor available in Panama, Tilcia was waited on hand and foot. This dependence she has found to be a main difference between Latin American and North American girls.

US girls, she says are "quite independent." They learn early to cook, clean and generally take care of themselves.

Americans the same age, she has found, are more care-free than their Panamanian counterparts. To Panamanians, "everything is a serious problem. Like dressing — when a Panamanian girl goes out in public she feels she has to dress up. I have tried to get over this."

Tillie finds the casual American dress and outlook "much more comfortable."

She continues, "Panamanian girls marry young. American girls have a different point of view. They want to see the world, don't want to be tied down. If they married young it would worry them that they hadn't dated a lot."

READING HOBBY

The couple's reading is a favorite hobby. Sometimes they read the same books — serious fiction and plays. John's favorite writers are H. E. Bates (The Purple Plain) and Ernest Hemingway, especially his Old Man and the Sea.

Tillie is a Hemingway enthusiast also. The two have recently started a Bud Schulberg tangent, reading his What Makes Sammy Run and The Disenchanted, the latter supposedly the life of F. Scott Fitzgerald.

John has done Little Theatre work and some radio announcing. He enjoys both and hopes to get a parttime job this summer in a radio station.

Last November and December John had a small speaking role in RKO's forthcoming movie, "The Naked and the Dead," starring Raymond Massey and Aldo Ray, and filmed in Panama. John is hoping that his part, that of Toglio, won't end up on the cutting room floor.

EXPECTING

The McTaggarts are expecting a baby in September, which they confidently expect to be a boy. They plan to name him John, Jr. John, Sr. questions using such a common name, Tillie says, but she feels "inside he's proud."

Tillie is only going to ask for two months off from work to have the baby, and will try to go back to work as soon as possible afterwards. She speaks enthusiastically of the "wonderful nursery" she has found.

This summer John plans to take two speech courses and one in psychology at FSU.

Tilcia wants to finish school and get her degree in E[...] but she says, "Now John [...] important." Her work fo[r] ROTC entitles her to a free [...] of her choosing, which [...] English.

Delta Gam House Opens This Fall

By PATSY GUTHRIE

The new Delta Gamma House, located at the corner of Copeland and Call and cater-cornered to the new Baptist Student House, is now receiving its finishing touches.

Thirty-six women and the house director will be able to move in the new building next fall. Accommodations for meals and social life are planned to include twice that number.

Found on the main floor are the formal living room, recreation room adjoining the dining room, the kitchen area, the house director's suite, the chapter president's bedroom, and bath, the entrance foyer, and an open terrace to the rear.

On the second floor are seventeen bedrooms, with bath facilities and ample storage space

Dr. Ivan E Johnson, head of the Arts Education Department and whose wife is a Delta Gamma, planned the entire color scheme and is also helping with the selection of furnishings.

The house's intercommunications system will have stations in five different parts of the house which can be reached from the central hall station. Another feature of the system is that music can be piped into downstairs rooms and the upstairs hall.

Architect Ernest Stidolph designed the $123,000 house which is built on a modified colonial style J. O. Carlile of Tallahassee, who has erected many of the state and university buildings, holds the construction contract.

Groundbreaking for the new house took place July 21, 1957. On hand for the occasion were representatives of the various groups who had worked together to make the event possible, including Delta Gamma alumae from Tallahassee, Mrs. Kenneth Ballinger, house corporation president, and Mrs. Stanley Rea, building committee chairman and financial director.

Miss Katherine Warren, dean of women; Dr J Broward Culpepper, executive director of the State Board of Control; Reverend Austin Hollady, director of the Wesley Foundation; and Arlene Ritchie, member of the collegiate chapter, were also on the program.

Delta Gamma is the newest sorority on the FSU campus. Gamma Mu chapter was installed in September, 1951. For seven years the women have dreamed and worked for a house of their own.

The DGs are presently renting a house located just four blocks south of the site of their new home, on the corner of Copeland and Pensacola.

Mrs Katherine W Depue is the house director This is her first year at FSU

Newly elected officers are Barbara Mentzer, president; Barbara Joy Mueller, first vice president; Delane Vincent, recording secretary; Bobbie Anne Stang corresponding secretary; and Battie Jane Cook, treasurer.

If you'd like to hear more about the new house you've been watching go up all year, just ask any girl who wears an anchor pin. That's all the DG's are talking about.

Starlight Serenade Scheduled Tonight

The amphitheatre will be the scene of the second of this spring's Starlight Serenades, tonight featuring the Concert Band at 8:15 p.m.

Robert Braunagle will direct the Concert Band in a wide variety of music. Included on the program are several marches, "Folk Song Suite," by Ralph Vaughn Williams, selections from "My Fair Lady," by Frederick Lowe, an overture from "Mississippi Suite," by Ferde Grofe, and "Carribean Fantasy," by John S. Morrissey.

Ramoo Meyer is guest conductor for tonight's serenade. Meyer is a graduate of Cincinnati Conservatory of Music and is graduate student in the FSU School of Music at the present time.

He has been a member of the Cincinnati Symphony and the Louisville Orchestra. He conducts the percussion ensemble and teaches percussion in the FSU School of Music.

According to Manley Whitcomb, Symphonic Band director, the Concert Band is organized to give an opportunity for the general college student to participate in a fine college concert band. "Good band literature is combined with novelties and light concert music to provide a recreational outlet for the average college band students."

"The Starlight Serenade is the contribution of the University Bands to campus tradition and campus life," said Whitcomb.

"Its purpose is to provide pleasant entertainment and relaxing music in an environment which takes advantage of the Florida climate and the beautiful outdoor theatre on the University campus."

The final in the series of serenades for this spring will be presented in the amphitheatre on May 14, featuring the Symphonic Band. Featured on this program will be Moussorgsky's "Pictures at an Exhibition" and Charles Carter's "FSU Rhapsody."

skeleton crews in each building to show visitors the facilities and supply information. Westcott auditorium will also be open.

At 12:30 a picnic has been planned and will be held at the Reservation. A box chicken luncheon will be provided.

A water ballet will be presented in Lake Bradford by 30 members of Tarpon following the picnic. The show is to be composed of the best acts from past years and will be complete with costumes, props and sound effects.

Transportation to and from the Reservation will be provided by university busses leaving the men's gymnasium at 11:30 a.m. and running to 12:30 p.m.

"It will be much easier for parents to plan to go to the picnic in busses," said the chairman, "as the Reservation parking spaces are rather limited."

She suggested that families leave their cars parked in the men's gymnasium parking lot. Busses will return to the gym following the picnic and ballet.

GALL GAME

A baseball game between the FSU freshmen and University of Florida freshmen is the next event on the agenda. The game will be played on the varsity baseball diamond at 3:30 p.m.

Flying High at 8 p.m. in Doak S. Campbell Stadium provides the climax of Family Weekend.

Tickets for Circus are reserved for students and families on Saturday night. Townspeople are asked to attend tonight. Tickets are 50c for students, $1.25 for reserved seats and $1 general admission to be sold only at the stadium.

"From all indications we are expecting a very successful weekend," Miss Cheek said. "Plans are being carried out efficiently and everyone is following through with his duties.

"If everything turns out as is expected this should be an annual affair," she concluded.

Many Groups Get Chest Funds

NOTE: This is the first in a series of articles concerning the various outlets for FSU's Campus Chest donations.

By BILL BUNKER

World University Service, which receives the largest single donation from FSU's Campus Chest money, is an international student service organization which gives needed aid to university students in 40 countries throughout the world.

WUS, as it is commonly called, is not an American charity organization, but is based on the cooperative efforts of students and professors in the countries which it serves. It works entirely within the university community, and its basic budget is totally dependent upon the support of this community.

The organization originated after the First World War. Its initial program provided relief for universities in central and southern Europe. Since that time, the WUS has grown into a world-wide operation in an effort to fight ignorance and need on an international scale.

The organization's aid program differs according to the varied needs in different parts of the world university community. In Europe, where World War II disrupted the lives of many students, WUS offers aid to refugees; provides scholarships, medicines and food and contributes to the operation of an international center offering rest cures.

Asia has the greatest need at present, and it is here that WUS help is most strategic. Newly established nations on this continent are desperately in need of skilled technicians. However, many students are forced to abandon their studies because of ill health, bad housing, or insufficient funds.

Throughout Asia, WUS has constructed Student Health Centers, and TB Sanatoria. Also, it has stocked libraries and laboratories, established dormitories, and provided scholarships and loan funds.

The need for aid of various types is critical in other parts of the world also. Middle East students need housing. African universities need larger scholarship funds to encourage greater enrollment.

In the United States international concern and understanding is an underdeveloped area. According to a WUS information release, American students are dangerously unaware of what is happening throughout the world and the personal implications carried by these events.

WUS helps to meet this need by stimulating interest in international university affairs. The organization provides speakers and resources for international education and serves as a channel for tangible participation in a world-wide cooperative effort.

According to the organization's Summary Financial Report for the fiscal year of 1955-56, $915,938.53 was distributed for various aid programs. $743,906.29 of this was spent for overseas aid while the rest went for home services.

Forty per cent of the money donated to Campus Chest by FSU students goes to the World University Service organization. Last year FSU's donation totalled $1,480.

WUS is sponsored both in the United States and abroad by various political and religious organizations. However, it emphasizes the fact that it is a non-sectarian, non-political program carrying out work without regard to race, creed or nationality.

Outstanding Senior Election May 6

During the preliminary class and student government elections Tuesday, seniors are requested to vote at the polls for the Outstanding Senior man and woman of the class.

Crisis Series

Men In 'Moral Vacuum,' Ice Tells AS Audience

Dr. Jackson L. Ice said Wednesday night that men are living in a "moral vacuum" because of what he called a "market-oriented philosophy of life that [illegible] individuals as mere means to economic ends."

Dr. Ice, assistant professor of philosophy, spoke to an American Studies lecture audience on the crisis today in philosophy and religion.

MATERIAL CULTURE

"Culture has come to be identified with material goods more and more in exclusion of religious, moral, scholastic and creative achievement," he declared. "Bigger and more elaborate skyscrapers, parks, homes, automobiles and factories, faster modes of travel and communication, larger foreign markets, more powerful and deadly weapons of war, more luxuries, amusements and leisure time for cheap diversions have become synonymous with culture."

"And," he added, although "we in the U.S. like to refer to the 'Godless materialism of Russian Communism' this only "helps disguise fact that our aims, like theirs, are just as materialistic."

The idea that such a "market-oriented" viewpoint is one of the causes of "the illnesses of Western civilization long antedated the hydrogen bomb," he said. For over a century, he declared, philosophers have pinpointed this and other causes. Among them he mentioned:

LIVE AS WORKERS

"The overorganization and predatory control of human life" —"For example," he said, "millions of people are living as workers, not as human beings; their personalities and ideas are subordinated to institutions."

"Specialization." This can be seen, he said, in a university where "the philosopher cannot communicate with the psychologist and the psychologist cannot be understood by the physicist, and he in turn by the artist. And what is worse they do not care."

The "rapid transition from a rural-centered to an urban-centered society, and the more recent voluntary and compulsory migrations from place to place which have turned a great deal of our population into nomads of the world or refugees within our own nation."

LOST OPTIMISM

The lecturer told his audience: "To put the matter quite simply: Western civilization has lost its optimistic, progressive and stable World-view because the thinking of its people could not keep pace with the many rapid changes and upheavals that occurred since the eighteenth century.

"This World-view was [illegible] on three main beliefs that [illegible] lost their power to in[illegible] men's thinking today: be[illegible] God, world-purpose, and moral order of the world."

He added:

"It is not enough in [illegible] times to be only a scien[illegible] philosopher, an artist. It [illegible] enough to just be a labo[illegible] business man, a politician [illegible] must all first be human be[illegible] responsible men, and sec[illegible] men with certain callings o[illegible] cupations."

JAZZ LAB BAND CONCERT Tom Baldwin and Pat Johnson on tuba and French horn will be two of the performers in Sunday's lab band concert. The two instruments, not usually heard in the standard jazz ensemble, lend a distinctive flavor to the group's brass section.

Revived Lab Band Concert Set Sunday

The 17-piece Florida State University lab band, recently resurrected after a year's dormance, will present its first concert this Sunday, May 11, in the amphitheatre.

The band will do a half-hour stint on the regular Phi Mu Alpha Coffee Concert program, with a Beethoven Rhondino and Paul Bowles "Music for a Farce" performed by other groups preceding the jazz section of the concert.

SUNDAY PREVIEW

Larry Raines, spokesman and alto sax man with the band, said yesterday that the Sunday concert will be a preview of the two-hour concert to be given by the band Thursday, May 22.

The band, which plays arrangements by its members and other campus jazz arrangers, is composed of four saxes, four trombones, four trumpets, piano, bass, tuba, French horn, and drums.

The band was originally begun some five years ago to provide a workshop for the jazz instrumentalists in the School. Its original purpose was to keep up the skills of the professional musician while he is in school and give members experience in large jazz combinations.

Some original compositions are used by the group, but the repertoire consists primarily of standards arranged by members of the band.

All of the band members have had professional experience, either with local, service or touring bands. Two of the musicians have travelled with the Ralph Flanagan band at one time or another.

BACK ON FEET

The band got back on its feet this semester after a layoff of about a year. The only concert played last year was a short appearance at the Tallahassee Federal Correctional Institute.

Raines said that the late start this year is an attempt to set up a situation so that next fall the band can be a permanent non-profit organization which will perform regularly.

The May 22 concert, to be held in Westcott Auditorium at 8:15 p.m., will feature Robert Glotzbach as guest piano soloist. Mr. Glotzbach is an assistant professor in the School of Music.

Arrangements to be featured in this Sunday's concert include "Powder-Puff," "Gone With the Wind" and "Spring is Here" by Gordon Henkel; "How High the Moon," "Cold Minor" and "I Love You" by Mike Lewis; and "Strike Up the Band" and "Hip Odermic" by George Newell.

Meteorology Film Set For Thursday

"The Unchained Goddess" a film dealing with weather, will be presented by the Department of Meterology Thursday night at 7:30 in room 120 of the Geology Building, according to Dr. W. A. Dryden, Assistant Professor of Meteorology.

The film, shown on television two months ago, is part of the Bell Telephone science-TV series.

The public is invited to attend the showing.

Sophomore Nurse Is Commissioned

Elaine Grieser, a sophomore in the School of Nursing, has been chosen as one of about 250 students for the Army Student Nurse Reserve Program.

GRIESER

She will be commissioned as a second lieutenant immediately and will draw more than $200 a month pay for her junior and senior years in school. After graduation she will serve for two years on active duty.

Miss Grieser, the first to be chosen for the program at FSU this year, will be assigned during the summer as a nursing intern at Suwannee County Hospital at Live Oak, according to Miss Vivian M. Duxbury, dean of the School of Nursing.

Campus Chest To Open Drive

Campus Chest will kick off a week-long drive for contributions tomorrow night, canvassing all sorority houses between 7 and 10:00.

Jane Wallace, chairman of sororities, will visit all the houses, calling on them to make donations toward the $4,000 goal set this year by Chest officials.

Schedule for the remainder of the week is as follows: Thursday night, fraternity night; all day Friday, day student opportunity; Monday night, women's dormitory night; Tuesday night, men's dormitory night. Wednesday night, calls made on all students missed previously.

TWO LEADING PLAYERS in the Speech Department's presentation of The Alchemist, by Ben Johnson, Stanley De Hart, as Sir Mannon, left, and Isa Cohen, as Dol Common, right. The Alchemist opens Friday night at 8:15 p.m. in Conradi Theater for a four night run, May 9, 10, 12 and 13.

'The Alchemist' Riotous Comedy

(Ed. Note. Ben Jonson's Alchemist, which will be presented in Conradi by the Speech Department this Friday and Saturday nights at 8:15, is possibly one of the outstanding satires of all time. In this article Humanities Professor Alan Thomson explains some of the significance of the play, which will also presented next Monday and Tuesday night.)

By ALAN THOMSON

A serious discussion of Jonson's Alchemist would be absurd, since the play is one of the most riotous comedies ever written. It is pure satire from beginning to end.

Like all good satire it is filled with sly observations on human life (and some not so sly—gentlemen please note). It is boisterous and subtle, vulgar and delicate, thoughtful and thoughtless, but above all it is fast moving.

FIRST IN 1610

The Alchemist was originally presented in London in 1610. This period in English life was one of great ferment. Medieval influences were giving way to scientific interest. There was an increased social consciousness and a greater awareness of individuality.

Thus Jonson's probings were related to his search to understand men's motivations. His subject is the dupe. The kind of man who might be sold the Brooklyn Bridge. Or the kind of person who, in our time, believes that certain bars of soap can bring romance—for, after all, the advertisement says so!

In Jonson's England, Alchemy was the subject of much discussion and practice. English life at this period was a curious combination of Medieval superstition and Renaissance enlightenment. Alchemy was a sort of halfway house between superstition and science.

The chief aim of the alchemist was to create gold out of baser metals such as lead. The alchemist's laboratory was a curious repository for books on superstition and witchcraft, chemical retorts and weird experiments involving incantations and the mixing of potions reminiscent of the activities of the witches in Macbeth.

PERFECT GOLD

The theory behind alchem's attempts to make gold was that gold was the most perfect metal and all others were imperfect.

The problem of the alchemist was to develop a process that would make perfect these less perfect metals, and thus make gold. What a perfect situation for such crooks as Subtle, Face and Dol Common!

The plot is very simple. The three crooks take over an empty house in London which has been vacated by its owner because of the plague. Their aim is to catch "suckers," and since London is full of them, especially those interested in getting more gold, they have little trouble.

The variety of "suckers" who become involved in this action represents the variety of types that Jonson wishes to satirize.

There is Drugger, the shrewd business man, always ready to make an extra "buck"; Sir Epi-

Fight Rear-Guard Action

"Although education comes primarily from the classroom, it may and should come from many sources and many expeniensec," Dean of Students R. R. Oglesby told a group of political science students last week.

USING THE thesis that practice as well as classroom knowledge is needed to prepare oneself for a career in politics, Dean Oglesby brought up a topic which we think not only applies to that field, but to the general development of all students in all fields as well.

HE NAMED a few political skills students should acquire through practice on the campus: the art of responsibility, the practice of participation, skill in discussion, and the privilege of protest. No matter what field students enter, the experience they gain outside the classroom will be helpful and of importance to their futura lives.

The dean points out he is fighting a rear-guard action—that the vogue in current educational circles is to look down on anything not straight from the science and mathematics classrooms.

CRITICS OF modern educational mehods might tend to lean too far toward the old traditional type of learning—readin', writin', and 'rithmetic. However, the value of the extra curriculm has been proven. Dean Oglesby quoted his father as saying, "the way to learn to milk a cow is to milk one."

This analogy follows not only in campus politics but in music, journalism, and meny other fields as well. Of course the danger arises when these activities become primary and class work secondary. However, a balance should be kept, instead of advocating the abolishment of outside the classroom activities..

OF THE political skills mentioned in the talk, shared responsibility, participation, discussion and protest, it is worth noting that euccess of these factors depends upon student-faculty or administration relations.

What can be done to improve our status in these areas? Dean Oglesby urges studants not to demand full responsibility but to shara decisions with faculty and administration about such matters as curriculum development, grading system, intercollegiate athletics, distribution of student fees, honor systems and women's regulations.

HE URGES that student activities be clearly defined; that they become concerned with arranging of intellectual discussions and cultural events, with the purposes of education and the objectives of college, and with student motivation. In this way, student participation is not superficial, and the result is that students do not act in an irresponsible manner.

Lastly, he says e college campus is a wonderful place for an exciting "talk factory." Discussions on the serious topics of life must be brought out of each student. He says that "students should be encouraged to stand for something rather than sit for it. They should be taught to speak up, when the issues of the day are being discussed."

IN EVALUATING the situation at FSU wa have seen these things successfully take place. And we have seen areas in which they were a miserable failure.

FSU students have the spirit for protest and for participation; we could cite many examples. Student activities may have faltered a bit in one skill, that of being concerned with activities of an educational nature, but student representatives make an "A" in trying for shared responsibility.

WE HAVE never heard of any part of student government ask for complete authority to decide a question; rather, they have only asked for a voice. In most cases, this has been adequately accomplished.

But there is much to be desired in some areas; especially women's regulations. Women students do not have the voice in their affairs that is supposed. On many subjects student dissenters are merely made to see the administration's views—the way things have been done for years.

THE GOALS set down in Dean Oglesby's fine talk can only be realized when students, faculty and administration agree to "ehare responsibility" in such areas.

Vote Yes For Admendment

Besides being eble to vote for several of your friends running for the many offices at stake in today's election, you will be asked to vote "yes" or "no" on e proposed amendment to the constitution.

The amendment is a simple one. It merely forbids members of the Honor Court from sitting in on classes and examinations for the specific purpose of detecting cheating.

The proposed amendment comes as a result of the recent honor system poll which in turn was the result of student outcry over Honor Court tactics used last semester.

We urge you to vote "yes" on this amendment. We b.eve that the passage of this amendment is a step forward in shaping our honor system into being a just one. The amendment adds both to your rights and to your responsibilities.

Blames School Of Education

DEAR EDITOR:

I, es one of many education students, heve been wetching with glee the attacks on that school. And believe me Father Time has caught up with some of the misguided practicea that go on over in the School of Educetion.

There ere severel outstending wronge in Floride Education et the present time. These wrongs I intend to enumerete end lay at the door of the School of Education; end then offer solutions that would breed ill for that school (as it presently exista), the F. E. A., and probably make my job in the future as a teacher less secure. Nevertheless, I believs these to-be-mentioned measures necessary if we ere to bring about a needed chengs in our educetional standards for the better

THE THREE outstanding wrongs most noticeable in our schools at the present ere:

(1) Lack of skilled teachers in the "difficult" fields of science and meth.

(2) Too much emphasis on athletic activities.

(3) A curriculum flooded with gsneralised courses.

Our School of Educetion, which occupies e massive building on our campus and is soon to occupy en even bigger one, is indirectly responsible for these conditions. First of all students are required to take too many theory or methods courses which ere essentially bull sessions. The 106, 206, and 301 courses which I heve taken, ere a big farce and an utter waste of time Never heve I seen courses so devoid of subject matter. Almost without exception, the people I have talked to in these classes aaree they eren't worth a little bitty dam. The Educational Psychology courses are some better but could be dispensed with little ill effecta.

PROSPECTIVE TEACHERS that go into the high schools are going to be teaching some specialized subject matter such as math, history, English, etc. Yet the education student has little time to devote to his field after finishing general education requirements set up by the university and required Education courses. This process is encouraged and allowed for by low certifcation requirements. For eaemple, only 15 hours ere required for certificetion in mathematics. Do you think you would be quelified to teech math with this minimum?

Beceuse of these "crip" Education courses and general low requirements, low caliber students tend to go into Education. The few that aren't are those that have scholarships end cen't afford to chenge schools and those that want to teach so they will put up with enything.

MANY BRIGHT PEOPLE with creative minds that would like to teach, refuse to do so because they would have to be registered in the School of Educetion.

I propose two remedies for this aituation:

(1) Cut out the methods courses except as electives and cut down the internship program to 3 weeks. The first of which will be spent in e preparations class in which the student will lecture and be critiqued by his classmetes and instructor. The nest two weeks he should spend actively teeching in e hiah school or gremmar school.

(2) Offer atudents in Arts and Sciences thet have a high scholastic everage e certificate to teach courses in their major.

Lauds Candidacy Of Mary Jacque Dunbar

GREETINGS!

I passed out some mimeographed propagande leaflets fo[r] drycleaning business the other day, and caught one of m[y] customers in the ect of shining his shoes with e copy. [...] he thought it wes electioneering material.

This is an intereeting atate of civic affairs. As a matter of fact, e little research on my part disclosed that here in West Hall the students heve only one motive for voting in etudent elections: they want to get one of those "I HAVE VOTED—HAVE YOU?" cards so that they can black out the middle letters of the third word and display the reeult on their doors to impress the visiting public.

THE PSYCHOLOGY department has no objection to this practice as long as the cards do not exceed three by five inches; the fine erts departmeot could not be reached by press time. Still, as long as we have those Coke machines for therapeutic purposes, it seems as though we might use elections for something a little closer to the original purpose.

Perhaps the fault lies in the lamentable fate of the write-in vots campaign for that peerless journalism major, Mary Jacque Dunbar, for a position on the Board of Publications. Perhaps as e portent of the fete of the journalism school here, Mary Jacque was somewhat handicapped by the fact of her nonexistence, but ehe had a atrong following.

String Program Suffers Deemphasis

By DALE JENSON

In lest week's Opus, we promised to preach on e few thi[...] close to our musical heart in regerds the orchestra and the st[...] program at FSU. We have felt for no little time that the s[...] program has suffered from a great deemphasis on this campus.

The School of Music has always enjoyed e splendid reputation, which is being spreed more rapidly and in more fields as the school expands its scope and its enrollment. The band program is immense, and gaining in stature each yeer. The vocal department is quite strong, and with added help this yeer in the operetic phase, has rounded out its program. And the quality of the piano recitals each year leaves no doubt as to the top level of that department.

WHAT, THEN, of the strings? The orchestra, it seems, is the forgotten baby sister of the school of music

To eny serious wind instrumentalist, experience in pleyina with en orchestra is of prime importance. For the string players themselves, there is, of course, no substitute for symphonic playing. For the vocal department, the orchestre supplies the necessary eccompanyina body for any operatic productions, such as the forthcomina Boheme In addition, through opportunities to eppear with the Symphony as soloist, severel advanced performers each year aain valuable stage experience

YET, WITH ALL THIS responsibility, it seems that the orchestra is slighted when it comes to allocating funds. There ere only two strina teachers: one filling a fulltime position es Conductor of the University Symphony, and the other servina as Assistant Deen of the school as well as teaching in the classroom Needless to say, this seriously hampers private teaching However with the leck of adequate scholarships to attract strina students, (at the present, there is not a single violin major in the school) this problem is not of any great proportion at this time. This year I served on the Orientation Committee and also on the Homecoming Committee. My overall average is 3.6. I am e pre-law major and take a keen interest in student government.

Through an unfortunate act of circumstances, I missed the deadline for filing a preliminary expense estimate Last Friday, after my campaign was well under way, I was informed by e member of the Elections Committee that this disqualified me as an official candidete My only recourse now is to appeal to you for WRITE-IN VOTES. DEAR FRESHMEN,

Election time is on us once again end it is time to choose our officers for next year. There is one office in particular thet is terribly important, although not enouah of us realize it. The office I am speaking of is Social Chairman.

We have been most fortunets this year to have as social chairman e person who has gone far above and beyond the call of duty in everything that she has attempted. That person is Georgea Ort.

Georgea is now running for reelection. If you want next year to be as successful as this year has been, you can't go wrong with Georgee Ort.

Sincerely,
BRUCE BROWN
Freshman Class Presideet

I am deeply interested in serving you in class government next year as your Vice-President. I feel that my previous experience qualifies me for this office. I served as vice-president of several organizations in high school, National Honor Society, etc. I had a 3.45 everaae first semester, and I was recently tapped for Sophomore Council. Most important, however, I possess e sincere interest in this job, and am willing to fully devote myself and my time to this job if I am elected. It is my belief that we can make the 1958-59 Sophomore Class of FSU the best ever!

If there were any skeptics before Saturday's AAU track meet Gainesville that Florida State's cindermen weren't the best in state or the southeast, there shouldn't be any now.

And another trophy will be added to the showcase in the [...]n Gym.

The margin of victory was a scant 4 2 3 points over Florida's [...], who were pointing to this meet after being soundly defeated by the Seminoles earlier in a dual meet.

When the Seminoles won on April 12 all the Gators had their crying towels out. They were in terrible condition and a couple of their best runners were injured.

They couldn't wait until the AAU when they would take [...] FSU.

The winning throw wasn't even 200.'

Thinclads Win State Title

Edge Florida; Set 4 Records

By BEN BALSER
Assistant Sports Editor

With their strength resting mainly in running events, Florida State's cindermen chalked up another win in their most successful track season in history, as they captured the annual Florida AAU track and field championships at Gainesville, Saturday.

The Seminole thinclads swept six of 15 possible first places, and broke four track records as they garnered 41 2 3 points. Florida was the closest competitor with 37.

CONLEY WINS

Mike Conley, FSU senior distance ace, finished first in both the mile and two-mile events. His time of 9:55.8 in the two-mile bettered the old AAU mark set in 1954.

Tom Keeney, soph distance man for the Tribe, ran a close third in the mile and fourth in the two-mile.

State's versatile soph, Jim Casteel, broke the track record and his own school record as he paced the 440 in 48.0 flat. He also got a fourth in the broad jump.

NYE SURPRISES

Coach Mike Long said his biggest surprise came when Charley Nye, a sophomore half-miler, set a new track and school record in that event. Nye turned the two laps in 1:58.5.

Teammate Doyle Ruff who had previously held the 880 school and AAU mark, placed third. Long said "it was also one of Ruff's best races as he was still bothered by the injury he sustained in the Penn Relays."

FSU's senior dashman, Jack Terwilliger, won the 220-yard dash with a 21.8 time. He also managed a third place in the 100-yard dash which was won by Florida's Ellis Goodloe.

State's mile relay team composed of Claude Grizzard, Nye, Conley and Terwilliger crossed the finish line first in that event with a record breaking time of 3:21.0.

A second place in the javelin throw was taken by Seminole Jerry Henderson as he tossed the spear 197'6". Long commented that Henderson's arm was sore since he had only one day's rest between the AAU and the Miami meet in which he threw the javelin for a new school record of 227'5".

Dick Elwood and Ted Keen of FSU tied for fourth in the pole vault along with Miami's Bob Rosebaugh.

RIP MIAMI

The Seminoles won every running event Thursday night as they buried the Miami Hurricanes 88-41. Conley set a new track and school record as he ran his mile specialty in 4 14.25.

Terwilliger tied the school and track record as he ran the 100 in 9.8. He also set a new record in the 220 with a 2:21 clocking.

Casteel won first places in the 440, the broad jump and the low hurdles.

FIRST PLACE

Other first place winners for the Tribe were Dink Lawrence in the shot put, Tom Chivers in the high hurdles, Nye in the 880, Keeney in the two-mile run, Rod Fields in the discus and the mile relay team.

The win marked the first undefeated dual meet season in the history of the school. The thinclads also won the Florida Relays and the Coliseum Relays held in Montgomery. This season also saw the Seminoles whip the Florida Gators for the first time in a dual meet.

Baseball Team To Meet Miami

By FRANK RAMOS

Frank Slusser, who pitched a no-hitter against the University of Miami the last time he faced them, will be on the mound this afternoon against the same Hurricanes as Florida State's baseball team concludes a four-game road trip.

Senior righthander Tommy Garcia pitched for the Seminoles yesterday in the opener of the Miami series.

SIX STRAIGHT

The Seminole nine made it six wins in a row over the weekend as they swept a two-game series from the Stetson Hatters, 4-2 and 9-1.

Slusser started the Friday game against Stetson and chalked up his sixth win without a loss. It was his fourth start in the last eight FSU games.

Fred Kenney ca[me] [in] in relief of Slusser and didn't allow any runs in the last three innings. Mike Capps continued his RBI spree batting in two runs with a single in the first inning of the game.

Owen McCarron, who had two hits, set a new school record for stolen bases by stealing second after beating out an infield hit. The speedy outfielder now has 15 for the season.

BRISTOL WINS

A brilliant five-hitter by southpaw Jack Bristol combined with a nine-hit attack gave the Seminoles a 9-1 victory in Saturday's game.

Bristol was not only the hurling star, but his three hits topped all Seminole batters.

Dick Howser drove in two runs with a triple and a single in four appearances.

The Seminoles took advantage of five Stetson errors and used their speed in stealing six bases to set up their scoring opportunities.

Frosh Oppose Pensacola JC

The Florida State freshman [clo]ses out its 1958 schedule [this] afternoon as they play host [to] Pensacola Junior College at [...] on the Seminole diamond.

[The Ba]by Seminoles carry a 3-5 [record i]nto the final fray. Mike [...] a touted southpaw, or Jerry Turner, a right hander, will open on the mound for the Tribe.

Last weekend, the University of Florida freshmen swept a two game series from the FSU frosh. The Gators romped 17-11 on Friday and squeezed by the Tribe, 10-9, on Saturday.

Shave Places Fifth In SIGC

Bob Shave, Florida State junior, shot a final round par-72 Saturday, which enabled him to place fifth in individual competition of the Southern Intercollegiate Golf Tourney in Athens, Saturday.

The day before, the Seminole golf team tied for fourth with two other teams in the team competition. North Texas State won the team title for the third straight year.

FSU, Memphis State and Rollins tied for fourth with a total score of 601 for the 72 holes which were played Thursday and Friday.

The Seminoles placed three players in the select group of 40 men who competed for the individual honor. Besides Shave, Rem Noble and Mel Fleischer made the finals.

Shave's 72 on the final 18 holes gave him a total of 292 for the 108 hole tourney. Noble shot a final-round 76 to end with a 303, which was good for a tie for 20th place. Fleischer finished 35th with a 312 total.

Dick Whetzle of North Texas State captured the individual crown for the second consecutive year. He was forced into a playoff round by Tommy Aaron of Florida.

The playoff went only one hole as Aaron landed in a trap and took two shots to reach the hole.

Aaron, runnerup in the tourney as a whole, had a score high enough to cop the SEC golf championship.

The FSU golfers finished their season with a 10-7 record. Their wins included victories over Florida, Wisconsin, Auburn and Georgia Tech. The linksters nabbed second place in the Florida Intercollegiate which was held in Ocala in March. FSU will lose only three golfers through graduation.

Men Sell China To Attend College

By NANCY GENE BROWN

Have you ever listened patiently as one of the "older generation" proudly expounded on the good old days when he worked his way through college?

Chances are you have, because putting oneself through college was common practice not too many years back. But with the advent of the atomic era, the style sort of went out with the goldfish-swallowing rage.

However, here on the Florida State University campus, a group of college men has set out to prove that the fad isn't dead.

This isn't ordinary run-of-the-mill employment—not delivering laundry, jerking sodas, tending a gas pump, or working in an office.

Now you'll have to admit that this is a bit unique. Not only china—they also sell crystal and silver. And contrary to popular opinion on the subject of work, they like what they're doing.

'TYPICAL' JIM

Take, for example, a typical day in the life of a typical student who doubles as a part-time china salesman. He is Jim Reeves, a sophomore from Pensacola.

Classes keep Jim busy between 8 a.m. and 2 in the afternoon. He hits the books in the library until around 4, then goes home to put on a coat and tie, have an early dinner, and start making calls. He visits sales prospects until 9 p.m., then goes back to the books or takes a coffee break with his girl.

This amount of work brings Jim an average of $45 to $75 a week.

The set-up of which Jim is a part is called the "college program," created by Arcadian of Newark, New York The program came into being only a fe[w] months ago, and was the brain child of some students here.

Among them was Guy Millner, now a senior. Guy was a salesman for another company whe[n] he heard about Arcadian and d[e]cided to switch companies. H[e] and four other students devise[d] the college program, whereb[y] students would work part-tim[e] while in school and full-time du[r]ing the summer. They took the suggestions to Arcadian in New[w]ark, who bought the program a[s] it was, with not a single alteration.

This was a complete reversa[l] of the company's 107-year-ol[d] tradition. They had been convinced by the five who presented the idea that college men could do a good selling job—and they're doing it.

NOW WORKING

Currently, twelve Florida State men are employed in the program. They work on an average of 15 hours a week selling the china to single working girls. Using the reference plan, they secure names of prospective buyers from customers and friends, and usually call on both the girl and her mother together.

Most of the part-time salesmen will be taking full-time positions with the company this summer. Jim, for instance, will become an area manager in Mobile, with about 15 men working under him.

Including his summer earnings, Jim expects to pull in a total of $3000 during 1958. This rate of income looks so good to Jim that he's decided to continue full-time after graduation, two years from now

Jim, who maintained a 3.0 scholastic average at Pensacola Junior College before transferring here, feels that "If you can succeed in direct selling, you can succeed in anything."

An ATO who keeps busy as a candidate for a class office, Jim says, "It's been my experience that direct selling builds self-confidence and instills aggressiveness."

NOW RECRUITING

Currently, student salesmen are being recruited here, at the University of Florida, and at Jacksonville University. (Around 150 from this area are to be employed eventually.) The recruits attend two-hour training meetings each week here, and before starting their summer careers, they will convene for a mass sales meeting in Jacksonville.

The last such sales conclave was in Daytona Beach a couple of weeks ago. "Our meetings are different," Jim explained. "We don't just learn something, we have a ball."

At that particular meeting, attended exclusively by the college salesmen and their dates, entertainment was by no means neglected. There was a dinner, and ample time for golf, swimming, and hot-rodding up and down the beach.

Also typical of the student salesman is Ray Reinhardt. Ray makes six or eight calls a week, sells two or three sets of china per week, and his paycheck looks healthy—$60 to $65 weekly, he says.

NOT STATIC

Ray's life could hardly be considered dull or static He is involved in a variety of phases of university life — his fraternity, Gamma Delta, the Lutheran student group, Alpha Delta Sigma, advertising fraternity, and be has a demanding 19 semester hours on his schedule.

Despite the other extracurriculars, Ray gets "a big kick out of selling—every door's a challenge." In addition, he says, he likes the idea of being his own boss and "getting paid in proportion to what I do," on the basis of commissions from his sales.

"Lots of guys want a job that offers what they call 'security.' Sometimes they don't realize that in direct selling, although you work hard, you make more than you would in a 'soft, secure' job," Ray pointed out.

He displayed a graphic chart of the salesmen's records. "That's the thing about this kind of work—you're in competition with the other salesmen, and that competition gives even more get-out-and-sell incentive than the money you make "People think selling is hard," Ray continued. "It is, to an extent, but the prospects we visit are interested, and our closing-out average is high—a little [ov]er 50 per cent."

GOOD EXPERIENCE

Ray, who will manage the Pensacola area this summer, feels that selling is good experience for men who are going into any branch of business "Other people will verify this idea — there are many articles in magazines by businessmen who say that, if they could do it all over again, they'd start out by meeting the people through direct selling," he said.

The boys get added motivation for achieving high sales records from the fact that 'bonuses' are offered For instance, top salesmen can win scholarships, a trip to Newark, and clock radios.

Moving away from their home towns is being encouraged for the men's summer selling This, it is felt, encourages more intensive selling and the devotion of more time to the job

According to Guy, who has achieved the position of manager of the Tallahassee district, "A man's security is only in his ability and in his confidence in himself"

And the college salesmen, he says, are developing ability and, at the same time, gaining self-confidence.

Who says working your way through college went out with swallowing goldfish?

Bermuda Ban Lifted Saturdays

Two Runoffs For Class Prexies

[early Contract Initiated]

Next Year's Rent Due By August 1

Payment of next year's rent must be made by August and students who live on campus must agree to live university housing for the full academic year, Dr. Jack [Rollow], director of housing, told the Flambeau this week. Several important changes in housing policy are be[ing] made beginning next semester Dr. Rollow revealed. Contracts between the university and the resident will be [sent] out with the room assignments and must be returned with payment of rent.

ENTIRE YEAR

The contract provides that the student living in university [housing] accept the assignment for the entire year—fall and [spring] semesters—and states that the university reserves the [right] to entry by authorized personnel.

While women students living on campus have always been [requir]ed to live in university housing for the full year, no such [restri]ction has been placed on men students in the past.

Dr Rollow said that this policy was necessary to save the [univ]ersity a considerable amount of money by effectively re[duc]ing the number of vacancies in housing during the spring [seme]ster. He pointed out that there are over 50 vacancies in [...] Hall at present.

He said that those who violate the contract by moving off [cam]pus during or between semesters will be turned over to the [Dean] of Men's office for action.

Dean of Men Donald Loucks told the Flambeau that such cases [wou]ld be treated as a breach of university regulations. He added [that] he did not expect a large amount of trouble on this score [as h]e thought students were mature enough to decide on their [resid]ence for a full year.

MAY MOVE ON CAMPUS

Dr. Rollow emphasized that the new policy does not restrict [moveme]nt within the university housing system. In this instance [the] system includes all the sororities and 13 participating fra[terni]ties.

Movement of students pledging fraternal groups to their [hous]es and movement of temporary assignees from fraternity [hous]es will continue as it always has, he said.

Explaining why the payment of rent is due in the housing [offic]e by August 1, Dr. Rollow said that payment of $90 will pre[vent] last minute cancellations.

These cancellations are a source of much confusion in the [hous]ing office and often result in vacancies in housing during the semester.

Students paying rent by August 1 have until September 1 [to c]ancel their reservation and receive full refund on the rent. [After] this date refunds will be made on a percentage basis, Dr. [Rollo]w said.

Some confusion exists as to the date when the rent for the [sprin]g semester is due. The catalogue says January 2, but the [hous]ing contracts state February 2. The question of how scholar[ship] holders will pay rent has not been answered as yet.

TEN-SPOT DUE

A $10 deposit for all male students wishing to reserve rooms [is du]e today, Dr Rollow emphasized. This deposit, while reserving [a r]oom does not come off the rent due August 1.

Rather it is a "floating deposit" which will reserve rooms in [fu]ture semesters for the student. Dean Loucks told the Flam[beau] that it also served as a breakage and damage deposit. It [will] be refunded when the student withdraws from university [hous]ing.

While admitting that it imposes an extra financial obliga[tion] on the student, Dr. Rollow pointed out that it is expedient [for] the housing office and facilitates the planning which the office [has] to do.

CITES OTHERS

He pointed out that the University of Michigan had a $50 [dep]osit and that the State University of New York has a $25 [non]-refundable deposit for the same purpose.

Any student who cancels his room reservation before August [1] will receive a refund on the deposit. The deposit is not re[fun]dable after that date.

The contract, containing 12 clauses, states that the student [is] responsible for knowing and observing the principles and poli[cies] governing conduct and procedure in the halls."

It also states that the university "reserves the right to entry [by a]uthorized personnel." What constitutes authorized personnel [and] whether they can enter when the student is not present is not [qui]te clear.

The housing office, formerly divided into men's and women's [offic]es was united when Dr Rollow came to Florida State from [Har]per College in upstate New York early this semester.

The office is located in the basement of Bryan Hall.

[Le]aders Complain

No Students Asked On Housing Policy

The new university housing policy was termed "arbitrary" [and] "unjustified" by several student leaders caught by surprise at [the] release of the news.

Student body President Arnold Greenfield, who called the [polic]y "arbitrary," added, "no [stu]dents were consulted in the [for]mation of the policy."

[I]mplying that the housing office [wa]s putting something over on [the] students, Greenfield added, [th]e new policy was never men[tion]ed to any student government [offic]ial or any student to my [kno]wledge."

HEARS IN SENATE

Greenfield said that he first [hea]rd about the new policy Wed[nes]day afternoon after Senate [me]eting.

"We have dormitory govern[men]ts and student government for [the] purpose of cooperating with [the] administration," Greenfield [sai]d. "Consultation with them [sho]uld have taken place."

Greenfield added that Dean of [Stu]dents R. R. Oglesby had said [tha]t he felt the matter should [hav]e been handled through co[op]eration with the student gov[ern]ment.

"This may be justified from the [hou]sing office's point of view," [Gr]eenfield continued, "but it was [don]e in an arbitrary manner and [the] desires of students were not [con]sidered."

Greenfield was not the only one [to] protest. West Hall Senator John [Va]n Beck brought the matter to [the] attention of Senate Wednes[day] afternoon.

INFRINGED RIGHTS

Van Beck charged the policy [in]fringed on students' freedom and rights."

"The university has got you over a barrel if you want to live off campus," he said. "They throw that at us and say 'sign it?'"

Van Beck told the Senate that every effort should be made to modify the policy. Students should definitely be educated about it, he felt.

"The channels of student government were completely ignored," Art Moore, president elect of the student body, told the Flambeau. "I disagree with the manner in which it was put forth."

Moore also disagreed with parts of the contract which students will be expected to sign and urged that they "be brought up for student review."

"I can't see where any student government official can look on the manner in which it was produced in any way but disapproval," Moore said.

No students are members of the housing committee, which formulated the new policy.

Veterans Club Elections Tonight

Election of officers for the [fa]ll semester will be held at a [m]eeting of the Vet's Club at 7 [p.]m. tonight at the Trophy Room [of] the Student Center.

Plans for next year's activities [wi]ll also be formulated, accord[in]g to President Fehmi Zeko.

All members of the club are [ur]ged to attend tonight's meet[ing].

Moore Announces Cabinet Officers

Eight out of nine cabinet officers were named by Student Body President-elect Art Moore in a letter to Senate Wednesday.

The Cabinet nominees were referred to the judicial and rules committee before final approval by the Senate.

Not appointed was the secretary of organizations.

Appointees are Nancy Denham, secretary of interior; Gerry Gordon, attorney general; Don Reedy, secretary of honor; Laura Cheek, secretary of state; Sandra Rosenberg, secretary of elections; Barbara Watson, secretary of student events; Diane Godin, secretary of student welfare; and Don Ramsden, secretary of finance.

Arnold Gets Junior Prexy; 37 Elected

Thirty-seven candidates were elected in the class and court primary Tuesday and 18 offices are yet to be filled by run-offs.

According to Sandra Rosenberg, acting secretary of elections, 2347 students voted in this election, an increase of 147 over last year's vote.

GOOD TURNOVER

Miss Rosenberg remarked, "I was very pleased with the way people voted this time. Very few voted for too many candidates or in the wrong places on the ballot.

"It's the first time since I've been on the elections committee (this is her third year) that people have really read the ballot. This made our job so much easier and we really do appreciate it."

Run-offs will be held next Tuesday, beginning at 9 a.m. Miss Rosenberg said that everyone registered as a student may vote. Present seniors (as in the primary) may vote for court offices.

The entire student body is eligible to vote for all court positions. Class officers are elected by class.

Polling will be in the usual places. The West Hall station closes at 2 p.m., while the others remain open until 5. Classification of voters will again be checked.

'What Is An Education'

Noted Author Phillip Wylie Will Speak Here Monday

World-renowned author Philip Wylie will speak here Monday night and will present the annual Philip Wylie Award to two outstanding students in the School of Library Science.

Wylie, a resident of Miami, is one of the outstanding social critics of the generation, and a long-time friend of Dean Louis Shores of the Library School.

He will present the awards at a dinner for Library School students in the Student Center Trophy Room at 5:30 p.m. and will speak in the Library Lecture Hall at 8:15.

ON EDUCATION

Admission to both is by ticket only. Wylie's 8:15 lecture will deal with "What is an Education" and is expected to touch a good deal on his running criticism of the educational system of Robert Hutchins.

Hutchins, the former boy president of the University of Chicago, has been a consistent target of criticism by Wylie's tongue and pen.

Wylie, who was given an honorary LLD degree by former President Doak S Campbell at the FSU graduation in in February, 1956, has visited the campus several times before, once as guest speaker at an English Coffee Hour.

Wylie was asked to speak to a small, intimate group of students at the Coffee Hour. The demand for admittance was so great, however, that the meeting was transferred from the Westminster House Lounge to Westcott Auditorium.

When the curtain arose, the "small, intimate group" numbered 1600 students and faculty members.

Probably best known for two of his early works, Generation of Vipers and Finnley Wren, Wylie is also known for his "Crunch and Des" fishing yarns and his most recent book, The Innocent Ambassadors.

The latter book is a report of a trip taken around the world by the author and his wife.

Wylie created a stir in social circles with his vehement criticisms of "Momism," or the tendency in America to worship mothers. The criticisms were contained in a section of Generation of Vipers.

Monday will be the author's fifty-sixth birthday.

Tonight In Conradi

'Alchemist' Opens Four Night Run

The Conradi Theater curtain rises at 8:15 tonight on the Speech Department's production of Ben Jonson's "The Alchemist," opening a four-night run.

The play will run tonight, Saturday night, and Monday and Tuesday nights. Tickets are available at the door at a price of 40 cents to students with activity books and 75 cents general admission; reservations can be made in advance at the Westcott Ticket Office.

"After the success of the show when it was presented at the Arts Symposium in Sarasota, we are expecting good attendance here," said Richard G Fallon of the Speech Department faculty.

'BOISTEROUS'

"The fact that it is a very boisterous comedy ought to make it go over well with the student body," he said.

According to Fallon, a number of the actors have had a great deal of stage experience. Bryant Simms, playing the role of Face, has appeared on campus in "Caesar and Cleopatra" and "Glass Menagerie," and has done professional stock work as well.

Isa Cohen, who will portray Dol Common, has been seen here in "Glass Menagerie," in addition to her professional experience.

Reggie Ivory, who will take the part of Dapper, also has been in various campus productions, including "The Sleeping Beauty" and "The Bigger They Come."

A new-comer to campus dramatics is Preston Everett, who will play Subtle. This is his first major part at FSU.

Veteran performer Eli Ask will portray Tribulation. His local efforts have included "Oedipus Rex" and "Glass Menagerie."

Stanley DeHart will be seen for the first time this season as Mammon, although he appeared in several productions last year, among them "The Bigger They Come."

George Goldstein, as Drugger, will be another veteran in the cast. His appearances on campus have included "The Rainmaker" and "Caesar and Cleopatra."

Oliver Dixon, who had his first major dramatic role in "Caesar and Cleopatra," will play Surly.

Making his debut in a major campus production, as Kastril, will be Frank Plensner. His only other appearance was in "Antigone," an experimental production earlier this year.

Others in the cast include June Sillay as Dame Pliant; Virgil Austin, Lovewit; and Robin Brown, Cay Cranford, and Ethel Gifford, neighbors.

"The Alchemist" is directed by James Brock, assisted by Ethel Gifford. Sets were designed by Charles Reimer, with Patricia Clift in charge of costuming.

Shorts Wearing Restricted To Campus, Adjacent Areas

By VIRGINIA DELAVAN

FSU coeds may, for the first time tomorrow, wear Bermuda shorts on campus—uncovered by raincoats.

A letter from Dean of Women Katherine Warren, read at Tuesday's Women's Senate meeting, changes the social standards of the University to allow Saturday wear of Bermudas in the future.

CERTAIN CONDITIONS

Certain conditions accompany this privilege, Dean Warren said. "We are confident that in enjoying the freedom and comfort of wearing Bermudas on Saturday on the campus, (women) will continue to respect the places in which such attire is not appropriate."

Bermudas may be worn on Saturday on the campus and in immediately adjacent eating places. The areas between campus and sorority houses will be considered on campus.

The wearing of Jamaica shorts, short-shorts, slim-jims, pedal pushers, dungarees or slacks will not be permitted.

Bermuda shorts may not be worn off campus—to movies down town, or in off-campus eating places. They may be worn in cars to drive-in restaurants or drive-in theaters.

They will not be worn in the library, in classrooms or in classroom buildings.

JUST SATURDAYS

On all days except Saturdays the usual social standards on the wearing of Bermudas will be in effect.

Dean Warren concluded, "We sincerely hope and believe that each woman student at Florida State University will feel the responsibility for respecting this approved modification of the social standards relative to dress for women by maintaining it herself, and by urging other students to maintain it."

Copies of Dean Warren's letter have been circulated in women's dormitories and sorority houses outlining these regulations. As these regulations are part of the social standards, there still will be no penalties involved for violations, but offenders are subject to counseling procedures.

This action came after continuous effort by Student Senate and Women's Senate this year for modification of the old no-Bermuda regulation.

RE-STUDY

A Senate committee re-studied the matter last month and recommended to Women's Senate the passage of a resolution favoring Saturday Bermuda wear.

On April 22 the women senators did so and sent the resolution to Dean Warren.

Jan Kaminis, president of Senate, told the Flambeau this week, "This is an age-old problem Senate has been faced with every year and this year is the first that Senate has done anything tangible about it.

"All Student Government has been instrumental in passing this," she added.

SECURITY

Dean's List Frosh Get More Freedom

Dean Katherine Warren "wholeheartedly approved" Women's Senate's move to allow Dean's List freshman women unlimited weekends second semester, the senators heard in Tuesday's meeting.

As a result, beginning next year freshman women making a 3.0 average first semester may take as many weekend trips as they wish.

Tuesday's meeting was the last of this year for the women solons. Polly Atwater, women's vice president, thanked the senators for their hard work and time put in this year. She said, "I think we have made a step forward in student government this year."

Senator Pat Mickler, editor of the Knowledge for College handbook, announced that the book is well underway. The cover, featuring "Sally Seminole" entering the Westcott Gates, has been drawn and approved.

Senator Ann Williams listed three recommendations from her committee on signing out, to be studied further next year.

They are that freshmen continue to sign out; that freshmen be better oriented about the why's and how's of signing out; and that signing out be optional for upperclassmen.

Junior Counselor recognition keys have been distributed to JC's, Senator Manning said. The senate is asking the Secretary of Finance, Jack Taylor to place orders for next year's keys either now or in September.

New Flambo Staff Takes Over Reins

So long gang!

This here was the last edition by this year's Flambeau staff. Beginning next Tuesday, some other suckers—er people will take over production of the paper.

Buck Canon will be the new slave driver, and he'll crack the whip chiefly over managing editor Larry Block and news editor Nancy Gene Brown.

It's been hell, we mean a hell of a lot of fun, and if there's any complaints you wish to register, register them with the new staff, they're the big cheeses now.

'C' Average Required

Arts And Sciences Curriculum Due For Changes—Reynolds

By CHARLES GUTHRIE

Changes in the College of Arts and Sciences' requirements for graduation and changes in curriculum are now in the consideration stage with decisions to be made in the next two weeks, Dean Paul Reynolds said this week.

Fairly definite is the prohibition of students registering for their junior year in Arts and Sciences without a "C" average. Students will also have to maintain their "C" average in order to continue in the college.

The college is also considering requiring all students to acquire proficiency in a foreign language to graduate. This will be equivalent to 12 semester hours in a language and will not be retroactive.

Also in the consideration stage is the extension of general education requirements into the upper divisions of Arts and Sciences.

"Several departments have already limited credit for satisfying a major to grades of "C" or better and other departments are considering this," says Dean Reynolds.

The curriculum for engineering science majors will be concentrated beyond general education in physics, chemistry, math and engineering science. Only students who in the first three semesters can maintain an average of "B" or better in all science and engineering courses, will be accepted into engineering science.

The students also have to maintain a 3.0 average in their other courses.

"Other considerations will be discussed by the department heads in the next couple of weeks," Dean Reynolds stated. The considerations will be finalized at the meeting.

The College of Arts and Sciences will hold a faculty meeting the week of May 19 to discuss these and other considerations.

Protest Arbitrary Action

The new policy of the housing administration comes as quite a surprise to us as it does to you. (See story, page 1.) The policy was formulated without student consultation.

NOT ONLY were students not consulted. No mention was made of the fact policy change was being considered. It would seem that this was done in a deliberate effort to keep student opinion from affecting the change of policy.

In this sense we must agree that the new policy is "arbitrary." It was imposed on the students without their consent or knowledge.

THE BASIC question seems to be whether changes in housing policy fall into the area in which student opinion should be consulted before policy is set.

We believe it does.

DEAN OF Students R. R. Oglesby told a group fo young political scientists the other day that for a better university and for a better student, major policy changes in college administration should be worked out by the combined efforts of administration and students.

This is an opportunity for the dean to put his suggested policy into action. We feel, and we are sure he would agree that housing is an important field of student interest, deserving of student consultation when policies are being considered.

STUDENTS LIVE in the housing units, enjoying the conveniences of good administration, suffering the discomforts of bad. It is their rent which pays for the administration of the housing units.

Today's students are tomorrow's alumni. As alumni they feel a lot better disposed towards their alma mater if they have had a part in the building of the university—and that includes building policies as well as material objects.

TODAY'S STUDENTS are tomorrow's citizens. Again, as citizens—taxpayers and voters, a kindlier attitude towards the university will be had, if they have participated in the building of the institution.

The Flambeau wll not attempt to argue the merits or demerits of the new policies in this editorial. We realize that the housing office is running on a tight budget like everyone else these days and that indebtedness on certain dormitories must be paid off. We also are aware that the new policies will serve to expedite matters in the housing office and save students many inconveniences.

BUT WE ARE not sure that all the policies are entirely justified. Expediency should not be made a catchword to rationalize all actions. Totalitarianism is expedient, but hardly desireable.

These policies should be reconsidered by a combined committee of students and administrators.

Academic Unity Lacking

A remark made yesterday by Dean Louis Shores of the School of Library Science was probably as important a statement as will be made at FSU for some time.

DEAN SHORES said, in essence, that this campus has a remarkable collection of outstanding scholars in many academic disciplines, but seems to lack a cohesive unity among the various areas of academic endeavor.

The statement was hardly profound. But it did contain the germ of wisdom that is often hard to find when one points to the obvious.

WHAT HE WAS saying was that there is little school spirit at Florida State University. And he did not mean of the cheerleading variety.

There is a general lack of interest on the part of faculty members and students in particular fields in the work that is going on in other areas.

THERE IS LITTLE interest on the part of students in the important research in the physical sciences, social sciences, humanities and professional fields on campus.

The faculty seems to care only for its own chosen area, and few students care for any area. And it is only through developing an awareness of what is happening in the total university that the proper type school spirit can be formulated.

THE NEW administration and a new perspective on the part of many responsible officials points in the direction of an effort toward creating this awareness through faculty convocations, student publications and the like.

But any effort on the part of any official is so much futility when not backed up by an enthusiastic reception on the part of both students and faculty.

IF FLORIDA STATE University is to become a great university, as Dr. Strozier has indicated from time to time, it will only happen when all students and all faculty members seek to know what the university is doing as a whole.

Then, when great chemists and great musicians know what the great sociologists are doing, will FSU become truly great.

Shorts Action Anti-Climax

When women students wear bermuda shorts officially for the first time tomorrow, it will seem like an anti-climax. Many students have been discreetly wearing the shorts regardless of the social regulation.

THE ACTION by the dean of women's office brought much satisfaction from the Senators who have worked so persistently on the bill and from the students who have longed to be less formal on the campus.

However, we did not hear one "yipee" when the new regulation was announced.

WE WOULD judge that most of the students greeted it with apathy and resignation. It just took too long to accomplish this very small gain in more liberal policies regarding women's rules.

Women's Senate, under the leadership of Polly Atwater, did a most commendable job getting the regulation changed.

Everyone is aware of the disadvantages of the previous rule. Mainly, it was a pain to wear a skirt over sports attire for a walk to the student center on Saturdays, and raincoats looked atrocious and were a nuisance.

BERMUDAS ARE collegiate. They are accepted dress, and are neat and modest. Some might wonder why not allow pedal pushers, slim jims, etc. instead of favoring bermudas, but bermudas are the best looking and most appropriate attire for campus wear.

We are relieved that this social regulation was changed with the co-operation of students and administration. We hope that in the future when other legislation is passed by students it does not take so long getting approved that it is disregarded before final action is taken.

Drilling For Oil On Campus?

By LAWRENCE PERKINS

GREETINGS!

Wyatt O'Penspaces, my friend from Houston, Texas, tells me they have moved that oil drilling rig from the south side of the Education Building to the north side. He says he never saw an oil rig like that before, but what else could it be? Those are crazy cats, those wildcatters.

THAT GOT US TO talking about what they will do with the oil when they bring in a gusher. They don't intend to use it themselves, as they just converted the heating plant to gas. Therefore, unless they just want to prove that the university is a well-oiled machine, they intend to sell the stuff.

Poor Harry Board, the journalism major, became hysterical at that point, and we had to take him away. There isn't much point in telling you what he said.

CAL CIUM, THE chemistry student, suggested that they could use some of it to move West Hall onto the FSU campus. He mentioned that this might be accomplished by paving the street with some powerful reducing agent, thereby reducing the distance. This idea was discarded as impractical when we realized what might happen when some of the diet-conscious co-eds found out about it.

SOMEBODY EVEN suggested that by buying several recording machines and placing them around the FSU campus from 1 to 3 a. m. they could transcribe the shrieks and screams of the students for use in the anthropology department, and might even be able to sell some of them for use in science fiction movies.

My roommate, Plutarch P. Pentameter, solved the problem by making a suggestion which was acceptable to everybody. He just got a copy of Smoke Signals the other day by trading two empty chewing gum wrappers, and his feelings were quite strong.

"I DON'T BLAME them for distributing the thing the way they did this time," he said. "They were hoping that nobody would find out that it was even being distributed at all." He brandished his copy. "Unfortunately for them, the news leaked out, and a few black marketeers did get copies."

"Putting down a smoke screen, you might say," murmured Cal.

"RIGHT! BUT WE smoked them out."

"Maybe if they would just signal for some more smokes . . ." began Stu Pid, and we all glared at him.

"Do you suppose money would help?" I asked.

"OH, DEFINITELY. If they had enough money, they could junket around the country finding people of college age who like Smoke Signals. You know—the same way those schools you read about go looking for football players. They could carry several copies of Smoke Signals in an airtight box, and . . ."

"That's not exactly what I thought you meant. Couldn't we just give the money to Smoke Sia . . ."

"OH, NO, MAN, NO! What good would that do? After all, you know, they can't buy writers. The SPCA won't let them, and besides, there's already plenty of talent on campus. They don't need to buy paper." He gave his copy a vicious shake, "and it wouldn't help to buy blacker ink, either."

"Why wouldn't it?" asked Stu. We ignored him.

"THERE'S ONE BLACK thing," says Wyatt mournfully. "What if they don't strike oil after all. It's a long way to Texas from here, you know."

A mood of gloom settled over our gathering. Then Cal brightened.

"We could always improve distribution next time. Let's see, if they put them all in one box and hide it in the FSU tunnel . . ."

Interest Runs High In Creative Writing

By NANCY HANNAFORD

An advanced creative writing class is presently being advocated by a number of Dr. James Coa's 304 Creative Writing students. (See letters-to-the-editor in this issue of the Flambeas.)

This certainly seems like a good idea, for many reasons.

TO BEGIN WITH, the university's creative writing program tends to have been over-condensed in its recent paring down. Last year it was decided that, instead of having separate courses in writing poetry, short-stories, and drama, the creative writing offerings of the English Department be boiled into one catch-all course. This was done because not enough students were signing up for these specialized courses to warrant their continuation.

Even this spring semester, however, student interest was so great as to cause another class to be set up under Dr Cox.

NOW, AFTER STUDYING under him for a semester, a number of his students have considered his instruction valuable enough that they want to continue under him at an advanced level. This is certainly understandable when one attends Dr. Cox's classes, where the students have learned to criticize each other's work constructively, amicable, and lucidly.

It might also be noted that the high level of this criticism has been achieved over a period of months. Putting these students back into a beginning class would waste this training and would waste their time.

ALSO, THERE IS among Dr. Coa's students what one of them terms an "esprit de corps." They've overcome any personal friction and have begun to depend on each other, in group form, for criticism. They enjoy working together and consequently work well and constructively with each other.

The last factor which should be mentioned in advocation of an advanced creative writing course is that FSU's Department of English is certainly large enough and fine enough to make more intensive work in the field of creative writing a must.

LITTLE MAN ON CAMPUS By Dick Bibler

"IF I TAKE COURSES I DON'T NEED, I FIGGER I'LL GRADUATE IN TIME TO WORK LONG ENOUGH TO GO ON SOCIAL SECURITY."

Suggests Advanced Course In Writing

LETTERS to th[e] EDITO[R]

TO THE EDITOR:

For the first time in many years FSU is accumulating an active, interested group of rather promising young writers. In fact, at this time about half a dozen students have manuscripts under consideration by some of the nation's top magazines. Others have received heartening encouragement from important men in the field.

THIS IS GOOD news for FSU, for a group of good, promising writers can do much for the prestige of the University as any other single factor.

Yet with all the interest and activity in creative writing, the University is only offering a basic course in the subject. After we have whetted our appetites on this beginning course, we are left with nothing but the desire to write, and the little help we can beg from creative writing teachers who already have a tight schedule taking care of their official pupils.

IT SEEMS TO ME—with as many students interes[ted in] doing advanced work [in writ]ing—the University could [offer] some form of advanced [course] to take care of these peo[ple].

Dr. James Cox has bee[n giv]ing a lot of his free t[ime to] help young writers, but [the de]mand is a little too m[uch to] ask, when his regular [duties] take up so much of [his time]. If the English Dept. c[ould pos]sibly see fit to give th[is] capable man an officia[l class] in advance Creative W[riting] it would do a great de[al to] help in the serious sear[ch for] new writing talent.

Mississippian Says White Unity A Must

TO THE EDITOR:

In your editorial of Friday, April 11, concerning the firing of the editor of the Mississippi State paper, you say that you "are led to believe that there is no freedom of speech in any part of Mississippi."

THERE IS FREEDOM of speech in Mississippi, but there is something even greater. There is a unity and oneness among the whites which cannot be equaled, and that unity is what has kept Northern carpetbaggers and Southern scalawags like Hodding Carter from over-running Mississippi as they did during reconstruction.

My friend, your words betray your ignorance of the Negro situation in Mississippi. If you lived in a county where Negroes outnumbered whites 4-1, where the possibility of having a Negro sheriff, a Negro chancery clerk, a Negro superintendent of education and a Negro board of supervisors is as eminent as it is in some Mississippi counties, you would not be so hasty to present "both sides."

EDITOR MILLER, by taking a "liberal-minded" view-point, has not proved to be a martyr for freedom of speech. He has only proved that the editor of a newspaper, in a state-supported institution, and in a state where an over-whelming percentage of students, tax payers and law m[akers] believe so strongly in a c[ertain] idea, should follow the [wishes] of the administration, or [go out] and buy his own newspape[r and] bring ill will upon himsel[f] and not upon his sch[ool].

It is easy for someone [who has] never dealt with a pr[oblem face] to face or who will proba[bly never] have to, to be critical [of some]one who does have to face [it].

I SUGGEST YOU come [to Mis]sissippi and live in [a] Negro dominated c[ounty]. If after so doing, you can [still be a] "liberal", I say you haven'[t live]ed long enough.

True, most questions ha[ve two] sides. But here in Mississ[ippi we] are faced with unity, or [de]struction of ideals which are [more] deep-rooted than some o[f you] are able to comprehend. [There] is but one side for us—seg[rega]tion.

Sincerely,
CHARLES DAWKINS
Desk Editor, The St[ate]
Printz, Mississippi Sou[thern]
College

(Editors Note: Our remarks [that] "we are lead to believe [there] is no freedom of speech in M[ississippi"] was somewhat disproven b[y the] vote of confidence given M[iller] by the student body. How[ever] we are disappointed to see [that] you don't deny the lack of [free]dom of speech, but seem to th[ink] it is necessary.)

Let's Not Follow Old Dominion's Lead

TO THE EDITOR:

The Flambeau in a Tuesday editorial "What Others Are Doing" gives subtle endorsement to the Virginia legislature's action in pressuring their State Board of Education to halve the number of hours required for teacher certification. "Perhaps our legislature could follow Virginia's lead" the editorial concludes.

BEFORE WE GO dashing off to "follow Virginia's lead," let us examine the wisdom and logic applied by the Virginia legislature to other problems of public education.

Does not the fact that these same legislators voted last year to abolish their system of public education before obeying federal law show their concern for the public school?

DOES NOT THE FACT that Virginia — despite her wealth and taxable resources — spends less for education than 40 other states, show the regard of these legislators for public education?

It is not my aim here to defend all practices undertaken in the name of progressive education. It is my opinion, however, that half the people who criticize the methods courses don't really know the content of the program. Those who condemn without knowing deserve to be classed intellectually with the Senior Henry Ford whose prejudice was classically demonstrated by his "History is bunk" remark.

THERE ARE THOSE [who] condemn the methods co[urses] as useless and say: "A[ll you] need to teach is a thor[ough] knowledge of your sub[ject." I] belive that generalization [is not] true even in college teac[hing], not to mention lower educa[tion]. How often we hear of br[illiant] scholars being kept on [a uni]versity faculty because of [their] ability in research and wr[iting] despite their instructional [fail]ings.

How often we hear of a [pro]fessor: "He really knows [his] subject, but he just can['t get] it across." This type prof[essor] is indispensable to the f[urther]ing of knowledge and a [three] hours course of boredom [will] greatly harm his students.

A student in eleme[ntary] school, however, is stuc[k with] his teacher — good or [bad] — for a full school year. [And if] that teacher has no sense [of] method or psychology the [stu]dent is bound to suf[fer].

I should like to see [the] Flambeau offer some cons[truc]tive suggestions for the ed[uca]tion program. What is w[rong] with what specific courses? [Up]on what authority is the [criti]cism based? Should [these] courses be eliminated? [Or] should they be altered? L[et's] have more documentation [and] less generalization.

Joint Concert Pleased Audience

By W. DORSEY STUART

ON TUESDAY night of this week a joint concert was given by the Brass Choir, under the direction of William F. Cramer, and the Percussion Ensemble, under the leadership of Ramon E. Meyer. Both organizations performed admirably, giving pleasure to the audience and themselves.

In the Brass Choir group it was felt that the best number was Overture to Cadmos et Hermione by the French composer Jean Baptiste Lully. This was the last of the group and by the time it was played some intonation problems in the group had been corrected.

THE PERCUSSION Ensemble opened their program with a SEXtet by Thomas Sawe and we felt that it was the best numbers performed by the group. The Ensemble is capable of producing a wide range of very exciting sounds and accents. The only problem in listening to such a well rehearsed and proficient group is the need to hear, once in a while, a melody.

This was fullfilled by the premiere performance of Sonata for Two Pianos and Percussion by Charles Buhrman, a student at FSU. The ensemble was assisted by John Boda and Charles Rowden, Pianists who gave good readings of the number which is, we might add, impressive for a piece of underaraduate work.

THE FINAL GROUP consisted of two numbers by Roy Jesson and Wayne Scott, two lesser known American Composers. [It] is easy to see why they [are] among the "lesser known." [The] combined groups, however, [per]formed well, and it was fe[lt that] the percussion in particular, though not as varied as [in the] solo numbers, gained from [the] joint presentation.

In general it was felt that [both] groups performed commend[ably], although the Brass Choir has d[one] better previously. Both were [ad]equately rehearsed and b[oth] were equipped with conduc[tors] worthy of much praise. W[e are] sure the audience enjoyed [it] thoroughly because afterwa[rds] we met in the nearest telep[hone] booth and received the gen[eral] concensus of opinion from [all] of them.

THE ENGINEERS HAVE HAIRY EARS

Today in this age of technology when engineering graduates are wooed and courted by all of America's great industries, how do you account for the fact that Rimbaud Sigafoos, who finished at the very top of his class at M.I.T., turned down hundreds of attractive job offers to accept employment as a machinery wiper at the Acme Ice Company at a salary of $20 a week with a twelve-hour day, a seven-day week, and only fifteen minutes for lunch?

Engineering grads are wooed and courted...

I know what you are thinking: "Cherchez la femme!" You are thinking that Mr. Acme, head of the Acme Ice Company, has a beautiful daughter with whom Rimbaud is madly in love and he took the job only to be near her.

Friends, you are wrong. It is true that Mr. Acme does have a daughter, a large, torpid lass named Clavdia who spends all her waking hours scooping marzipan out of a bucket and staring at a television set which has not worked in some years. Rimbaud has not the slightest interest in Clavdia: nor, indeed, does any other man, excepting possibly John Ringling North.

So how come Rimbaud keeps working for the Acme Ice Company? Can it be that they provide him with free Marlboro Cigarettes, and all day long he enjoys that filter, that flavor, that flip-top box?

No, friends, no. Rimbaud is not allowed to smoke on the job, and when he finishes his long, miserable day, he has to buy his own Marlboros, even as you and I, in order to enjoy that estimable filter, that incomparable flavor, that crazy flip-top box.

Well, friends, you might as well give up because you'll never in a million years guess why Rimbaud works for the Acme Ice Company. The reason is simply this: Rimbaud is a seal!

He started as a performing seal in vaudeville. One night on the way to the Ed Sullivan show, he took the wrong subway. All night the poor mammal rode the B.M.T., seeking a helping hand. Finally a kindly brakeman named Ernest Thompson Sigafoos rescued the hapless Rimbaud.

He took Rimbaud home and raised him as his own, and Rimbaud, to show his appreciation, studied hard and got excellent marks and finished a distinguished academic career as valedictorian of M.I.T.

Rimbaud never complained to his kindly foster father, but through all those years of grammar school and high school and college, he darn near died of the heat! A seal, you must remember, is by nature a denizen of the Arctic, so you can imagine how poor Rimbaud must have suffered in subtropical New York and Boston, especially in those tight Ivy League suits.

But today at the Acme Ice Company, Rimbaud has finally found a temperature to his liking. He is very happy and sends greetings to his many friends.

Baseballers Seek Ninth Straight

Three Gymnasts Vie In NAAU

Three of Florida State University's top gymnasts are in Los Angeles to compete in the National AAU Gymnastics meet today and tomorrow.

They are Jack Miles, a former national flying rings champion; Lennart Malmlin, former member of the Swedish World Olympic team, and Chick Cicio, a former national free calisthenics champion.

Cicio and Malmlin have been the top producers for State's unbeaten gymnasts this season, and because of their versatility, could finish well up in the all-around competition.

Miles, a member of the U. S. Olympic team in 1956 and the Pan-American team the same year, specializes in the rings but is also an all-around threat.

5TH PLACE

Even though only three Florida State gymnasts will enter the NAAU meet, State coach Hartley Price thinks it's possible they could amass enough points to finish as high as fifth as a team.

Florida State won the NAAU title in 1951, 1953 and 1955. Other national championships for State include the NCAA titles in 1951 and 1952.

The Seminole gymnasts piled up a total of seven dual meet victories against no defeats this past season to establish a new record for the number of wins in a single season.

BIG STICKER for the Tribe during their recent surge is third baseman Dale Koch. Off to a slow start, Koch has pulled his average up to almost .300. Against Miami he hit a three-run homer as FSU won, 6-1.

Face Rollins Here Today, Tomorrow

Florida State's Seminole baseball team, rolling along with an eight game winning streak, will face Rollins College here tonight and tomorrow afternoon.

Coach Danny Litwhiler has nominated lefthander Jack Bristol to open the series tonight at Centennial Field at 7:30.

Righthander Frank Slusser will hurl tomorrow's game at Seminole Field seeking his eighth victory of the year which will set a new individual season record for pitchers.

The Tars clinched the Florida Intercollegiate Conference championship Tuesday when they beat Tampa, 4-3

The Seminoles practically clinched a bid to the District III NCAA playoffs when they whipped Miami Monday and Tuesday by scores of 9-2 and 6-1.

Behind the five hurling of seniors, Tom Garcia and Slusser the Tribe raised their season's record to 16-5.

Garcia set an FSU pitching record when he notched his third victory of the year and his 15th since pitching for the Seminoles The former record for most wins, 14, was held by Ed Sessions

Garcia's 14 strikeouts gave him a career total of 140 which topped the former school mark of 127 set by Howard Lockard

Leading the FSU hitting attack were Ray Bazzell, three hits, Dale Koch, two RBI's and Gerry Philp, two RBI's.

Slusser continued his outstanding hurling which started against Miami with a no-hitter. This time the senior righthander fired a four-hitter and struck out five.

Koch and Dick Howser led the Tribe attack by belting homers in the sixth inning. Howser's came with none aboard while Koch hit his with Mike Copps and Bill Westendick, who had three hits, on base.

Freshman Trip Pensacola JC

With a close 12-11 triumph over Pensacola Junior College Tuesday, the Florida State freshman baseball team closed out its 1958 schedule.

The victory gave the baby Seminoles a 4-5 mark for the current campaign.

Mike Hudgins started for the FSU frosh, but was lifted in the fourth inning and replaced by Charles Zito who was credited with his first win of the season.

The Seminoles were trailing 7-2 in the third inning. The lead seesawed back and forth until the bottom of the eighth when the FSU frosh got the winning run on a wild pitch by the Pensacola hurler.

The Seminole freshman, under the tutelage of Bob Wynn, opened their season with a victory over South Georgia Junior College and then beat Hanover College of Indiana.

Henderson Attains Goal

By PHIL ROYCE

When Jerry Henderson threw the javelin 227 feet 5 inches last Thursday night against Miami, it marked the attainment of a three-year-old goal for the rugged 6-foot Pensacola product.

As a sophomore back in '56, Jerry, then a novice at the art of the javelin, set his sights on hurling the former weapon of the Greeks and Romans 220 feet. Three years and approximately 1,800 throws later Jerry reached his goal, to the surprise of no one.

Jerry first became interested in the javelin during football season three years ago. As a sophomore quarterback, Jerry went out to the track one day with halfback Billy Weaver to throw the javelin around for fun.

"I hit 160 feet and when Ron Weaver invited me to come out for track I decided I'd give it a try," he explained.

Ron Weaver, holder of the school javelin record until this year when Henderson broke it, worked with Jerry as did Coach Mike Long, who knew a good prospect when he saw one.

It was this year that Jerry set up his goal of reaching 220 feet. He admits the task looked nearly impossible

"I'd mark off 220 feet from the starting line and just look at it. As I was only hitting 180 feet at the time it looked 10 miles away," Jerry said with a grin.

The young athlete was confident however, that his dream would eventually come true "I figured I'd improve 20 feet each year. That way I'd reach 220 feet my senior year."

True to expectations, Henderson added 20 feet to his initial throw in the final meet of the season against Loyola His toss of 182 feet won the event.

Henderson's progress this year began on a steady note and then became near phenomenal. He opened the season with a winning throw of 196 feet against Furman and followed this up with a 198-foot toss for first place against Roanoke College.

Jerry soon equaled his best efforts of his junior year when he hit 202 feet to cop the event in the Florida Relays in March. The physical education major really began moving in on his goal with a toss of 215 feet in the Florida meet to top Weaver's old school standard of 205 feet.

Actually, the formidable goal was cracked by Henderson in this meet but his throw of 222 feet was disqualified when he stepped over the line following his throw. "I was afraid I'd never hit 220 again," Jerry commented.

In his next appearance, Jerry gained the national spotlight when he threw the spear 217 feet to win the event in the Penn Relays before 46,000 applauding fans. Competing in the Relays were the East's top javelin men.

Jerry now had one final home appearance left in which to reach the coveted mark he had been hoping to break for three long years. Never one to miss an opportunity, Jerry's record breaking throw in the Miami meet is now part of FSU track history and proof positive of one of the finest individual efforts ever made by a seminole in any sport.

The attainment of this goal, however, was not Henderson's greatest track thrill. Jerry admits that he was not surprised to break the 220 mark. After all, he had made plans for three years to do so. But winning the event in the Penn Relays came as a complete surprise to Jerry and provided him with his greatest sporting thrill.

Far from being a temperamental and flashy star, Jerry is just one of the gang on the track team, which he praises liberally. "I've never seen a team with greater spirit. The members are always helping each other, even after they have run their events and would normally be expected to rest."

Henderson, undefeated again this year in dual meets, also praises Coach Long for his inspiration and leadership. "He has a way with the guys that makes us want to do our best."

Jerry, who lives with his wife, Cathy, a former FSU student, in a home near Florida High, plans to work as an assist coach in Football and track next year at either Leon of Florida High. In his spare moments he hopes to be able to help the new crop of Tribe Javelin throwers and perhaps enter the AAU meet again.

TO THE STUDENT BODY:
SUBJECT: BASEBALL AND TRAFFIC COURT

Now I know how the baseball player feels when he is on third base with the winning run. It took a lot of work to get the player to third base, work of the player and of his team mates. But the real work comes in making that run for homeplate and victory.

Well, fellow students, I too am on third base now, with my "homeplate" being election to Traffic Court. It is certainly an honor to have gotten this far, and I sincerely thank you for your interest and support in last Tuesday's primary election.

As you know, however, no run counts in the game of baseball if you stay on third base. It is necessary to follow through, to make that run for homeplate. The same is true of this coming election, for the important thing is the follow through, the winning dash.

YOU'RE UP TO BAT NOW! What YOU do this coming Tuesday will determine whether or not I come into homeplate first. I'm counting on you to hit a "homer" now . . . . please don't disappoint me!

Sincerely,
TERRIE JONES

TO THE STUDENT BODY:

I'd like to express my sincerest appreciation for the support that you gave me in last Tuesday's elections.

My interests in student government have narrowed down to a keen concentration in TRAFFIC COURT.

Last year, in high school, I was active in Senate, where I was elected treasurer. I was an officer in two national clubs and served on several committees.

I feel that I am well qualified and have the necessary interest and enthusiasm to fill this position well.

I urge you to give me your serious consideration in the run offs when you vote next Tuesday.

In your interest,
SHIRLEY COACHMAN

DEAR FELLOW STUDENTS

I would like to take this opportunity to urge you to vote for JANIE DAVIDSON for SOPHOMORE TRAFFIC COURT. I have known Janie for quite some time and I feel she is both capable and interested in working for you. Traffic Court is becoming more important every year and I know that Janie will help you and me if she is elected to this office.

Thank you for supporting me in the first election. I know you won't go wrong by electing JANIE DAVIDSON.

Sincerely,
JUDY DEKLE
Chief Justice of Traffic Court

Honor Ct.

To The Student Body:

I wish to express my sincere thanks for all those who supported me for the position of Senior Men's Justice of Honor Court. I will do my most to live up to the ideals of this office and the Honor Code at all times

POWER PLANT

Your future, and the future of America will be shaped by the kind of power generated in the college classroom

Before the deed, there is always the idea. A single great idea may develop more power than atomic energy.

Never in our history has the need for new great ideas been so pressing as it is today; never have we been under such stress to strengthen through education the spiritual, social and scientific foundations of our American way of life.

Yet the very core of our brainpower plant —the college classroom—is being seriously weakened by two factors: a faculty salary scale that is driving gifted teachers into other fields; and an overcrowded condition that is worsening steadily. Applications will double in less than ten years.

As a nation, and as individuals, our destiny is being determined by the quality of learning and inspiration produced on our campuses. Can we allow these conditions to continue?

Support the colleges and universities of your choice. Help them in their efforts to pay their faculties better, and to expand their facilities.

The returns will be greater than you think.

If you want to know more about what the college crisis means to you, and what you can do to help, write for a free booklet to:

Senate Approves Insurance Plan

Insurance, bermudas, exam schedules, and street names were items on which the Student Senate accepted reports Wednesday.

After a short explanation by Secretary of Interior Pat Finlay, the Senate voted its approval to extend the present insurance program to include hospitalization.

$15 TOTAL

Initiated by the student insurance committee, the new policy will enable students who purchase the present accident insurance plan, sold for $4.90 a year, to purchase the hospitalization policy for an additional $10.10.

The policy is underwritten by the Continental Casualty Co. of Chicago, is handled locally by the John E. Hunt Insurance Agency, and is sold by student government.

The new program will cover student's expenses while hospitalized at school, at home, and while traveling, for a period of 12 months. This includes costs acquired while hospitalized in the FSU Hospital, up to $3 a day for room and board.

Payment for expenses other than room and board are provided for in the policy.

In other hospitals students may receive room and board payment up to $10 a day for 30 days per confinement. Other benefits are surgical fees up to $200, miscellaneous hospital costs up to $100, out-patient benefits up to $15, and physician's visits when confined in a hospital up to $90.

OTHER STUFF

In other action Senate okayed Pat Mickler's final report on naming campus streets. She recommended immediate erection of street signs as soon as the Board of Control approves the names.

Senator Ronnie Clark announced that the "Bermuda shorts" bill was signed Tuesday. "I would like to thank the committee and Women's Senate for their help on this matter," Clark said (see story page one).

The Senate also accepted a committee report concerning attempts to obtain a "dead day" between final exams and the last day of classes.

OFFICIALS SEEK OPINION ON NEW STUDENT UNION

University officials are seeking student opinion on the proposed Student Union, Dean of Students R. R. Oglesby told the Flambeau this week.

The Student Union would be a building to house conference rooms, student offices and meeting rooms, recreation areas, dining facilities and other student services, an expanded Longmire-Student Center combination.

Dean Oglesby, President Strozier and other University officials are anxious for students to express their feelings on whether or not to have such a Union, what to include in it and where it should be located.

President Strozier and his council will have extended meetings within the next few weeks to discuss FSU's next "Fifty-Year Plan." They will re-do a plan of the University with regard to location and layout of future buildings.

At this time they will talk over their own and student ideas for the Student Union.

The president's council includes Vice President A. B. Martin, Business Manager Rod Shaw, Dean of Faculties Charles Davis and Oglesby.

Funds for the Union may come from federal housing grants, according to Oglesby. FSU is partially financing married and single housing through the federal government now, he said.

Such a loan from the government could be paid back at a 2.75% interest rate over a 40-50 year span, lessening the strain on the University budget.

To Get Married

Guthridge Leaving Post As Foreign Advisor Here

By MARCY SEITZ

Looking for the Foreign student advisor? She's a hard person to locate.

Down in the basement of Longmire past a coke machine and a cigarette machine, around a few corners and through the Student Lounge is located a small office that is quiet only from 5 p.m. to 8 a.m.

The rest of the time the office of Miss Joan Guthridge, advisor to foreign students, buzzes constantly from the ringing of telephones, the clatter of typewriters and the coming and going of students.

WEDDING BELLS

Now, to the regret of her students, but to the great joy of 1st Lt. Frank Rodkey, United States Air Force, Miss Guthridge is returning to her native Kansas where she plans to be married on June 28.

The prospective bridegroom is stationed at Big Springs, Tex., as a jet pilot instructor and is a graduate of the University of Kansas.

After the wedding Lt. Rodkey and his new wife will return to Texas until December at which time he will be discharged. He plans to open his own business in Pittsburg, "without an 'h.'"

Miss Guthridge's plans for the future include going back to college to finish her master's degree.

"But first, I'm going to be a housewife," she said, "and learn how to cook!"

"We are going to be very unglamorous," the advisor continued with a smile, "and just live calm, ordinary lives."

LIVE WITH BOXER

This calm ordinary life will include a brand new boxer puppy which is now in the possession of Lt Rodkey. "He's promised to have the puppy completely trained for me by June," said Miss Guthridge. "But if he does, I don't know which of the three of us will be more surprised."

Waterskiing, even in the plains of Kansas will also have a place in the couple's lives. "Frank loves to ski," she said with a laugh, "But I'm afraid I'm still just audience."

Poised and efficient, Miss Guthridge this year has worked closely with Dr Melvene Hardee, coordinator of counseling, and the deans of students, men and women and their staffs.

Barely over five feet tall, pert Miss Guthridge sits behind a big cluttered desk and despite a large black sign behind her that reads, "Anyone who remains calm in the midst of all this confusion simply doesn't understand the situation," she efficiently directs and handles student foreign affairs.

A newcomer to FSU this year, the foreign student advisor was born in Pittsburg, Kansas. "That's Pittsburg without an 'h,'" she gravely explains.

The daughter of the sunflower state was raised in Parsons, Kansas, "which is right around the corner from Pittsburg" with a younger brother Bill. Bill is now in his second year at Kansas State University in Manhattan.

Education runs in the family and the foreign student advisor inherited her knack for teaching honestly from her father, Mr. Wallace Guthridge, who is now Superintendent of Schools in Parsons.

All of the credit doesn't go to her father though. Miss Guthridge is a 1954 graduate of the University of Kansas where she received her BA degree in Personnel Administration.

Her interest in FSU was sparked the following year which she spent on campus as a non-academic Danforth graduate, assisting the University Chaplain and religious centers in student personnel work.

Miss Guthridge was one of 20 college graduates sponsored by the Danforth Foundation in St. Louis that year for such work throughout the country.

In 1955 it was back to Kansas for more schooling—this time at Kansas State Teachers' College where the counselor remained for two years as a graduate student and as a member of the staff.

In 1957 Miss Guthridge returned to FSU as foreign student advisor. "The job was open," explains Miss Guthridge. "It seemed like a wonderful opportunity and I was anxious to take it."

Miss Guthridge is the first woman to hold the responsible staff job, which was created in 1954 to answer increased foreign student problems in a fast growing university.

"I have loved this year," she confided with a twinkle in her eye. "Although I must admit the first few days were nerve racking to say the least. My first counselees' knowledge of English was about as brief as mine was of their language. But we all adjusted eventually."

Miss Guthridge is ever-enthusiastic about her foreign students. "It's been a fabulous opportunity for me.

"I've learned so much from them," she said with a laugh, "that I think they have helped me more than I have helped them."

This is one time her students are apt to disagree with her, for her counselees feel Miss Guthridge has been a tremendous help to each in a country where many things are strange and new.

"The main difficulty I've had," she said gravely, "is explaining to the students that there is no ham in hamburgers."

Donations Urged Far Campus Chest

Day students and married students are urged to make their donations to the Campus Chest drive today, from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. in front of the Mecca, according to Beth Bowen, Campus Chest Chairman.

Miss Bowen also states that donations from faculty and staff members of the university will be appreciated at this time.

Campus Chest week began Wednesday with donations from sororities and fraternities. The amount totaled in this portion of the drive has not yet been computed.

The committee would like to express its appreciation to the sororities and fraternities for their cooperation and generosity during their part of the campaign, adds Miss Bowen.

Coffee Concert Will Feature Lab Band

This Sunday's Phi Mu Alpha concert, featuring the FSU Lab Band, will also include works by Beethoven and Paul Bowles played by an octette and two instrumental quartettes.

The Lab Band, which will be the last event on the program, will be featured in a half hour of big-band jazz, with all arrangements being done by students.

Beethoven's "Rhondino for Wind Octette" will open the program and will be played by two flutes, two clarinets, two bassoons and two horns. Dixon Redditt will conduct.

Paul Bowles' "Music for a Farie" will have Mike Hipps on trumpet, Dixon Redditt on clarinet, Frank Cooper on piano and Ramon Myer on percussion.

Beethoven's "Three Equall for Four Thombonea" will feature trombonists Dale Weaver, John Alexander, John Marcellus and Lyman Hammond.

The Lab Band will present the final section of the program with its 17-piece ensemble, dealing in more subjective music.

No Atom Struggle, Prophesies Wylie

By JIM McINTYRE
Flambeau Associate Editor

There will be no nuclear catastrophe, said noted ...hor Philip Wylie yesterday, primarily because the ...ssians are winning the cold war without force.

...lie, speaking to the press at ...ome of Library Science Dean ...s Shores, said that the United ...es is not even in the cold war ... that the Russians are far ahead in most phases of the diplomatic battle.

The controversial author is considered to be an authority on various phases of nuclear physics, including the effects of fall-out radiation.

Wylie described the possible effects of an unleashing of Strategic Air Command forces, saying that official military reports to Congress indicated that annihilation of the entire populace of the northern hemisphere was possible from fall-out and radiation resulting from bombs dropped in Russia.

BLASTS STRAUS

Wylie blasted the present administrative policy in the nuclear area, saying that AEC Chairman Lewis Straus "knows nothing about physics.

"He has no more capacity to be what he is," Wylie said, "than I do to be an authority on Martians."

Wylie then attacked Dr. Edward Teller, a nuclear physicist who was largely responsible for the development of the atom bomb and who now serves on the General Advisory Committee to the AEC.

"The American people," he said, "think that since Teller is an expert on physics, he knows about everything.

"His advising the AEC on radiation effects is like asking Babe Ruth about foreign affairs."

Wylie called for a general awakening on the part of the American people to the present predicament by saying that "what we need to do is realize that the Soviets are racing ahead with one objective: to destroy capitalist America.

"WE'LL BE LICKED—"

"Unless we, as a people, realize what measures we will have to take in the next 20 or 30 years, we will be licked in the ideological struggle," he said.

Wylie cited as the reason for his prediction that there would be no "hot" war, the realization on the part of both countries that a total conflict would mean total annihilation in less than 24 hours.

The Russians are winning the ideological struggle in Asia and the rest of the world because of their dedication, Wylie said.

"World communism to the Russian is equivalent to heaven for the Presbyterian," he said. Wylie's father was a Presbyterian minister.

"I don't think the Russians want to continue nuclear testing," he said. "They know as we do that nobody can calculate what damage can be done by a bomb."

Wylie was on campus to present the annual Philip Wylie Awards to two outstanding students in library science. The awards were presented at a banquet last night, with Wylie speaking in the Library Lecture Hall shortly afterward.

...tudents Appeal ...ournalism Fate

A last-ditch appeal on behalf ... the abolished Florida State ...versity School of Journalism ... be made before the Board ... Control at their meeting ...rsday.

...n a letter to the Board, pre...ed by a group of journalism ...dents, several points were ...ught out in favor of the ...ool's continuation.

NOT A PROTEST

According to Bob Wolfenbar..., spokesman for the students, ... appearance before the ...rd is "not a mass protest, but ...rmal appeal."

They intend to ask first for ... reinstatement of the school, ...lfenbarger stated. If this re...st is refused, their alterna... request will be the extension ... the closing date of the school ... one to three years "in or... that this year's freshmen ... graduate with a degree in ...rnalism."

The main stress of the appeal, ...rding to Wolfenbarger, will ... the location factor. "We can't ...phasize enough the fact that ...lahassee provides the best ...tion for journalism in the ...te," he said. This argument ...ased on the fact that federal, ... county, and city governments are all centered in Tal...hassee he added.

The appeal also points out ... the FSU journalism school ...fers a larger selection of ...ses, both basic and special... than any other in the ...te." They cited, supporting ...mples.

ECONOMIC FALLACY

"The idea of maintaining eco...my by abolishing the school ... is a fallacy," Wolfenbar... stated. "It would cost near... as much to have just one ...ool as it would to continue ... The letter to the Board ...ed this statement on the ... that eight members of the ... journalism faculty have ...re and so cannot be re...ed from their positions.

...conclusion, the appeal re...ts that the Board "review ... decision to abolish the FSU ...ool of Journalism in the light ... a more comprehensive survey ... committee of journalism edu...s approved by the faculties ... both state universities."

Battle Looms For Senior Class Prexy

Eighteen remaining class, court and senate offices will be filled in run-off elections today, in the last political endeavor of the semester.

In primary elections last week, 37 offices were filled. At the same time, the Student body passed a constitutional amendment prohibiting honor justices from sitting in on examinations for the purpose of detecting cheating.

Polls will open at 9 a.m. today and will close at 5 p.m., with the exception of the West Hall poll, which closes at 2 p.m.

Graduating seniors will be eligible to vote only for court offices. The entire student body is also eligible to vote for court offices, while class officers may be voted on only by members of the respective classes.

SAME POLLS

Polling stations are in the usual places—library, Bryan Hall, Seminole Club, Westcott, Student Center, and West Hall.

Drawing the most attention in the run-offs will probably be the contest between Bill Clendinen and Phil Knight for the senior class presidency.

Other run-offs for class posts include: senior social chairman: Rita Nelms and Dean O'Sullivan; Junior class treasurer: Nona Carpenter and Kay Hall; junior men's senate: Ralph Champers, Bob Nedley, and Charles Van.

COURT OFFICES

Court offices to be filled are: junior men's judiciary (three vacancies): Dave Dale, Larry Dannelly, Duni Nelson, John Niedenthal, Fred Powers and Jack Ryder.

Junior women's judiciary (three vacancies): Patsy Baird, (three vacancies): Anne Easterday, Monty Gillham, Marilyn Harris, and Marilyn Miller.

Junior women's honor court (two vacancies): Mary Bell, Nancy Jones, Betty Jean Price, and Ann H. Williams.

Tickets On Sale

CBS To Broadcast Spring Formal Dance

Columbia Broadcasting System has announced its decision to broadcast the Sammy Kaye "Swing and Sway" dance band on a nation-wide hook-up as it plays for the Spring Formal Saturday night.

Very few tickets have been sold either for the dance or for the concert which will be held at 4:30 the same afternoon, according to Graham Teschke of the Westcott Ticket Office.

The concert will be held in Westcott auditorium, with tickets available for 75 cents each. Special combination tickets for the dance and concert will be sold at $2.50.

AT THE GYM

The formal will be held at the Men's Gym from 9 p.m. until 1 a.m. The admission is $1.50 per couple.

The Kaye band, brought to the campus by the junior class, is at present playing a long engagement in New York. Guy Lombardo and his Royal Canadians will substitute for Kaye the night that he plays here.

The Spring Formal is new to the FSU campus. Originally the Junior-Senior Prom, it was only for those two classes, but has now been opened to all classes.

A long-playing Columbia record album will be presented to the winner of the band-leading contest at the concert. Kaye will select the contestants, two women and two men, from the audience.

LEAD ON—

After an interview on the stage, each contestant will be given a chance to lead the famous Swing and Sway band.

The contest—titled "So You Want To Lead A Band"—is a Sammy Kaye audience-participation feature.

Since the band will follow every movement of the baton, many interesting situations might arise.

Kaye will re-introduce each contestant, and the winner will be chosen by audience applause. He will receive a souvenir baton as well as the record album.

58-59 Budget Before Senate

Next year's budget will go to Senate for approval tomorrow, with the Student-Faculty Finance Committee recommending its passage.

The most important change is the the Theater Dance Group being completely cut from the new budget.

Limited performance capacity this year, in supplementing music and theatre production, was cited as the main reason for the cut.

Smoke Signals will receive only half of this year's funds, possibly cutting the publication to two issues next year. Secretary of Finance Jack Taylor said that this was a "probationary measure" which may be lifted after next year.

NO CLASS GIFT

The annual $500 gift to the university from the senior class was eliminated, and several minor cuts were made from other requests.

Taylor stated that these measures were deemed necessary by the committee to make the budget balance. "We're allocated $80,275 for next year, and requests totaled $87,121." He added that active operating reserve would total approximately $7,000.

Publications will draw more out of the budget to cover added operating expenses. The Tally-Ho will receive an additional $4,000, and the Flambeau an increase of $2,000, which will cover rising printing and binding costs.

The budget will be presented to Senate by Taylor, who will elaborate on this year's changes.

Taylor will speak before Senate tomorrow in presenting the new budget with proposed changes.

Art Moore To Emphasize Cooperation, Participation

The key words of Art Moore's philosophy for running student government next year are "cooperation" and "participation."

"Student government has no absolute power," the Student Body President-Elect points out, "but it can work for its aims through cooperation with University officials and participation in policy-making.

"With tact and diplomacy, we will try to branch out into every area of administration pertaining to students. I don't mean that student government should jump out and demand that its views be accepted, but it should certainly voice its views.

"For example, we should be concerned not only with better food and dorm facilities, but with the overall curriculum and the scheduling of the curriculum.

"We have a new opportunity, I feel, to make our views heard. I think that student government in the next three years will be made or broken on the basis of how quickly it jumps at this opportunity."

Moore listed several specific areas in which he plans to take action next year.

UF GOODWILL

Already formulating plans is an FSU-UF Goodwill Committee. This committee, Moore says, is working to promote a "healthy atmosphere" for the first football encounter between FSU and the University of Florida next fall.

They will encourage sororities and fraternities to slate joint weekends with their Gainesville counterparts, to establish friendly relations between the groups.

ODK members from the two schools will also hold sessions together. Moore has contacted Auburn and Georgia Tech, traditional rivals, to find out how they are solving their problems.

Moore also plans to work for the "proper administration of student insurance." The plan offered next year is such a beneficial one, he feels, that all efforts should be made to encourage students to purchase the policy.

A thorough study of women's regulations is in the offing. What Moore terms "reasonable recommendations" for the revision of women's rules, will be made at the first of next year.

"I feel sure that some reasonable, not drastic, changes will be made," he says.

LOAN STUDY

Also on the agenda is a study of the present scholarship and student loan program. Moore says that a "more liberal attitude" is needed in the administration of such aid, with an eye to attracting unattached funds to the program.

The Speakers' Bureau, which has been expanded this year, should continue to grow. "A plan might be worked out for speakers to go to high schools in addition to service clubs to recruit high school students to come to FSU," Moore states.

An FSU lobby committee, to function in the Spring session of the state legislature, is being established. The members will do research and confer with University officials to determine legitimate monetary requests for next year. They then will present these requests to the law-making body.

Study of the honor system will be continued. During Orientation Week, the honor court justices will present a "good" program explaining the honor system, designed "to make a strong impression" on the new students.

Senior Class Buffet Supper Cancelled

The Senior Class buffet supper scheduled for graduation day has been cancelled, Bill Weaver, senior class president, said.

Sponsored by the Florida State University Alumni Association, the buffet has been so popular in the past campus facilities cannot now accommodate it.

Weaver said he was advised by FSU Alumni President, L. B. Vocelle, of Vero Beach.

Vocelle said the Association would plan some other activity for next year's seniors. He said the buffet was meant to serve as a final social event honoring the seniors and to acquaint them with how they can serve their alma mater through the Alumni Association after they leave the University.

Vocelle said the cancellation for this year's buffet met with the approval of the 1958 Senior Class officers.

Dave Tumin, assistant attorney-general and president of the Leon County club, urges all interested persons to attend. Transportation will be available at Longmire at 7:46 p.m.

CULTURE TEST THURSDAY

The General Culture Test scheduled for last Thursday, has been reset for this Thursday night at 6:45 in room 124 Science.

1c-A-Minute Night Friday

Florida State coeds will have a chance to stay out an extra hour Friday night, when Mortar Board sponsors another "Penny-a-Minute Night," the second this year.

Paying a penny for every minute taken over the regular 12:30 curfew, they may stay out as late as 1:30 a.m., according to Jan Kaminis, Mortar Board historian.

"This is the last weekend before exams, and we hope that as many coeds as possible will take advantage of Penny-a-Minute Night," Miss Kaminis said.

WHO PAYS?

Questioned as to who customarily pays the pennies, the girl or her date, Miss Kaminis answered, "There's no set custom—sometimes the men do, and vice versa."

As has been the practice in past "nights," coeds wishing to participate must sign out for 1:30, and indicate their desire to take part in the event. "I want to emphasize the importance of signing out for late privileges," Miss Kaminis added. "Failure to do so will be considered a judiciary offense."

Both old and new Mortar Board members will be stationed in the women's dormitories Friday night to collect pennies.

Proceeds from Penny-a-Minute Night, according to Miss Kaminis, will benefit Mortar Board's scholarship fund and the annual Mortar-Board-ODK Leadership Conference, held each fall.

Campaign Letters Trite

After two alections and two runoffs (each preceeded by two issues of the Flambeau), students doubtlessly ere tired of seeing campaign letters taka up so much space of the newspaper.

SO ARE WE. Further, we question just what good they do.

All the letters are ebout the same. They Inform you that there is en election Tuesday, that they ere running for office, that they era interested in student government, and thet they would sppreciate your vote.

CANDIDATES USUALLY include their record in the letters too, going beck to thair high school ectivities if necessery to impress you.

Tha letters are too long, too similar, end too trite.

WE DOUBT IF enyona in the process of decision reads them. And if they ere reed, we feil to see how anyone cen make up his mind from them. It is more likely that only tha candidate, his friends, and perhaps his opponents, reed his letter.

When you have 136 candidates running for offica es we had this election, it becomes quita e burden of the Flambeau to print all campeign letters. It probably is quite a burden on the students to resd them and still keep their sanity.

IT APPEARS that some changes will heve to ba made in our policy of printing cempeign letters. Perheps if only candidetes for importent offices will be ellowed space, and their letters will be saverely edited for elimination of triteness and repetition, the student would be better served.

No Coordination Shown

Lest night e stending-room-only crowd packed the Librery Lecture Hell to heer Philip Wylie, noted author, lecturer, and critic of our generetion, speak on "What is an educstion?"

Tha Library Lecture Hall can herdly contain more than 250 persons, even when packed. It certainly was not edequate to hold the lsrge number of faculty, steff members, and students who wish to heer the famous man.

THIS IS POOR planning. It is not the feult of thosa who invited Mr. Wylie to tha campus, the Library Science School, es they meda every attempt to obtein another of our spacious auditoriums. It is, however, e sign of lack of cooperation or coordination between departments within the university — e lack which should be rectified.

It is not every day that someone es interesting and es famous as Philip Wylie comes to Florida State. When such an event does occur, every effort should be made to give everyone an opportunity to hear whet he has to say.

Don't Impose Requirement

A front page story in lest Friday's issue of the Flambeau brought to students' attention proposed changes being considered in the College of Arts and Sciences.

Of particuler interest is the proposel that all students gain proficiency in a foreign language in order to graduata from the College.

NOW FOREIGN lenguages are definitely culturally broadening but we think that it is a mistake to force them on all students in the university's largest college.

Language appeals to certain students. To others it makes little or no appeal. The appeal that it make depends for the most pert on the future plans of the student. Many students have had enough languaga in high school to satisfy them, while others wsnt more, foreseeing the many jobs in foreign countries open to Americans.

BUT IT MUST BE remembered, in the interests of those who do not wish to proceed further with languages, thst one is not really learning anything new when he is taking a language course. Rather he is merely learning how to express himself in new symbols. Many students would rather devote their time to actually learning something new.

It will be a mistake for the College of Arts end Sciences to impose a language requirement on all students within the college. Students who are mature enough to come to college are mature enough to determine for themselves whether taking a language is in their own best interests.

An Observation

Student Prexy Foresees Changes

Editor's Note: This is tha first of two articles that outgoing Student Body President Arnold Greenfield is writing. The articles giva his views on changes taking place at Florida State University as seen both through personal experience and through service to student government.

By ARNOLD GREENFIELD

Students at this university in the next few years will have the right to expect much in the way of modernistic changes. We have for the last several yaars been in a period of tremendous physical growth; today our enrollment has more or less stabilized, but the erection of new buildings goes on. Over the long run it is probable that housing, elassrooms, laboratories will eontinue to be developed at a faster rate than that at which our atudent population here will grow. These facts seem hard to deny.

SOMEWHAT MORE SUBTLE and important is tha academic picture. It is no secret that at present our university is not overly intellectually taxing. The recently adopted more stringent entrance requirements, a continuing influx of younger and/or more able faculty members, a great deal of progressive academic planning, and a multitude of other factors should eombine to gradually develop FSU into en institution of somewhat greater scholarly distinction.

My main object of concern at the moment, however, is a ehange of an even more subtle sort. I perceive a ehange of atmosphere here that will be intangible, but, the modified atmosphere very definitely will have its tangible manifestations.

FLORIDA STATE HAS had a certain charm, some of its customs may accurately be described as quaint. I think we hava a physically beautiful eampus, we have many traditions steeped in the grace of days past, culturally we are well developed in numerous aspects, on the whole it is reasonably quiet here—sometimes almost serene. I'm not trying to sound artistic, but I do appreciate these qualities which are noticeably lacking on many other campuses.

It is really too bad that these positive feature of our school's atmosphere are not without their related evils. Tradition alone does not generate these evils; a lag in social innovations eannot be explained solely in terms of habit. Personalities here also make their contributions to the slightly antique atmosphere which pervades eampus life.

WE HAVE ACCUMULATED an almost fantastic maze of rules, regulations, folkways, eustoms, taboos, social atandards, bits of "knowledge for college," etc. Tha spirit that these ara designed to perpetuate is very desirable, when interpreted in modern terms. I believa we ara trying to behave in a manner considerad proper for civilized and reasonably polite adults. The problem is that tbe atandards may demand conduct proper for genteel ladies of the South in the latter days of the 19th century.

There are those of us who believe that truly proper standsrds sra those which coincide with the better habits of contemporary life, most definitely not with the habits of the West Florida Seminiary in the 1890's. I think that few would argue this point. However, there are some rather influential individuals here who are able to rationalize every outmoded convention with which we sre saddled.

THIS HAS VASTLY complicated the task of Student Government. The process of frustration has been more or less as follows: Students in positions of leadership formulate suggestions for modifications of the prevailing social practices, they then pass them along to the administrative officials responsible for the welfare of young women attending FSU, the reasons for the existing practices are carefully "explained" to the students, and little or no action is taken.

The presumption has all too often been that if some rational explanation for the cause of a atudent grievance is provided, the malcontents should fold their tents and quietly steal away. Often forgotten has been the real problem eausing the eomplaint, and the rational arguments in favor of the ehange.

IF I HAD TO MAKE one criticism of the FSU administration, after working closely with them, it would be that in certain areas of social regulations the officials are inclined to rationalize rather than seriously eonsider alterations in the currently accepted practices. This should not be construed as a personal attack on any one individual, because many members of the ataff auffer from this weakness.

By this mechanism an atmosphere is preserved; but, it is now time to eliminate the unwholesome and outdated features of this atmosphere. Fortunately, some of the highest officials in Westcott do seem to recognise the tendency of some of their subordinates to rationalise bad rules. I predict that in the next few years this recognition will more and more be translated into action, as a matter of fact this is already starting to happen.

Student Government officials will make great strides in this area in the immediate future if they are alert and aggressive, and, at tha same time, responsible and mature in their suggestions for change.

Compares Education To Sharpening Scythes

By LAWRENCE PERKINS

GREETINGS:

I am a little concerned about the recent attacks on School of Education. As the affair trickles through my ...sciousness, the hue and cry is that more attention should be ... to subject matter and lass to technique of educatioo.

I am glad to hear this, beeauso there are untold advantages to the present system. It seems to me that in this ease thera is a elose parallel to the provarbial harvester's scythe. Teaching technique of education is equivalent to sharpening the scythe and teaching subject matter is equivalent to using tha scythe to harvest something.

Now my great-uncle Edwin U. Catioo had a fine stand of wheat, end he was so proud of it that he and his crew spent the whole working day sharpening their scythes. They had to hire two small boys just to run baek and forth to the hardwara atoro buying new scythes to replace the ones they ground away. It was a stirring sight to watch tha sparks fly.

WELL SIR, WHILE they wero whetting and grinding away, that wheat erop went to seed and got erossed with somo other strains of wheat. Nest year the same thing happened, and tha nest. By golly, all by itself out there in that wheatfield, a new wonder strain developed that was a natural for the breakfast food people. The atalks made wonderful eardboard boxes, and the pigmont in the leaves was just the thing to make ink for the labels.

The state agricultural extension aervioe wanted to make Uncle Ed an award, but unfortunately the poor old fellow had atarved to death in the meantime, and a real estate dealer had turned his wheatfield into a subdivision. However, that is beside the point. IF he had lived, he would have beeo famous.

IT SEEMS THAT another eomplaint is that educatioo majors should be taught more subjects that they will teach in the schools. By golly, we can fix that. Let's teach education in the schools! Then the little toddlers can reach each other the things they pick up on TV and in comic book classics. This would be right in line with the trend to teach less English and mathematics and history and more finger-painting, self expression, and group stomping and screaming.

Answers Letter Of Mississippi Editor

By EMMETT JARRETT

The letter of Mr. Charles Dawkins of Mississippi Southern College is interesting for several reasons. First for its content, since it seems to represent the attitude toward the race problem of many people in the state of Mississippi, and second, by the very fact that it is printed in this newspaper.

IT MUST BE POINTED out that the letter of a man who denies to a fellow editor the right to present both sides of an issue is printed in a paper dedicated to the principle that this is essential to good journalism, and whose policy on this issue can hardly be called segregationist. This is freedom of the press.

The content of the letter is strange. In a nation committed to the ideals of democracy, we find a member of the press, whose freedom from restraint is essential to democratic government, suggesting that it would be unfortunate if tha vast majority (80%) of the people elected county officers.

Mr. Dawkins should remember that we do live in a eonstitutional democracy where freedom is more important than class or group interests. Where he chooses to emphasize the "unity of whites", the American people hava long ehosen to emphasize their ... tional unity, and the ... should not be far away ... we shall reach a state of ... ization in which the inte... of humanity as a whole ... permanent.

Baseball Gods Were Frowning

The baseball gods smiled and then frowned upon Jack Bristol, Florida State's senior lafhander, Friday night at Centennial Field.

For 8 2/3 innings, Bristol held the Rollins batters hitless But in the ninth, with two outs and two strikes on the Tars' Ronny Brown, the spell was broken as Brown lashed a single to right field.

Bristol struck the next man out to end the game. For the Seminoles, it went into the record books as a win—their tenth straight For Bristol, it was his fifth win, but it was probably the most heartbreaking win he ever received.

If any pitcher ever deserved a no-hitter, it was Bristol. He had pitched masterful ball the whole game striking out 13 and walking only four. At one point, Bristol struck out five men in succession.

When asked if he realised that he had the no-hitter going Bristol replied, "I sure did, I felt real strong early in the game and if ever I pitched a no-hitter, I said tonight would be the night.

"My fast ball was moving real well and my curves were breaking sharp. I had the stuff, all I had to do was use it.

"When Brown came up I noticed that he stood up in the front of the box. All same I had been throwing my fast ball by the guys who stood up near the front and figured I could get it by him then

"I tried to throw the fast one inside on the handle but it must have drifted out towards the middle of the plate where he got a real good piece of the ball.

The 250 fans showed their disappointment when Brown got the single and it must have hit Bristol like a ton of bricks too.

"Sure, I was disappointed," said Bristol, "but it was just one of those things.

"I kept telling myself if they got a hit, they got a hit, there was nothing I could do then, but try for the one-hitter. After a pitcher holds a team hitless past the fifth inning the pressure increases and the pitcher tries to mentally prepare himself in case a man does get a hit."

With an ever optimistic outlook Bristol said, "I still have a chance to get my no-hitter. I may pitch one game against the Georgia Teachers next weekend and if we get into the tourney I'll have a chance there."

All we can say is best of luck. It couldn't happen to a nicer guy or a better pitcher.

LITTLE RICHARD Howser, FSU shortstop beats out an infield hit against Rollins, Saturday. The Tars' first baseman is Jim Johnston. FSU won, 7-6.

Baseballers Gain Tenth Straight Win

Await NCAA Tourney Bid

By FRANK RAMOS

Moving a step closer to the NCAA District III baseball tournament bid, Florida State's Seminoles notched their ninth and tenth straight victories, dumping Rollins twice last weekend, 7-1 and 7-6.

Not expected to receive word from the NCAA selecting committee until after the series with Georgia Teachers, the Seminoles upped their season's record to 8-5 with their weekend victories.

Using a six run uprising, the Tribe came from behind Saturday to defeat Rollins, 7-6.

TRIBE RALLY

All-America shortstop Dick Howser poked a two-out, two-run single to climax an up-hill rally which saw the Tribe send 12 men to the plate in the eighth inning

Howser started the rally off with a leadoff triple to deep center and was sent home by rightfielder Mike Copps' single A double by catcher Bill Westendick scored Copps and brought on a new Rollins pitcher

Following a single through the box by leftfielder Gerry Philp, Pinch-hitter Gene McCormick slammed a hit to left which brought on another Rollins hurler.

Another Tribe pinch-hitter, Neil Martin, responded with a sacrafice fly to keep the rally going Owen McCarron then singled to left and Charlie Rodgers was then hit by a pitched ball

WINNING RUN

Howser, up for his second turn, promptly chased across the tying and winning runs with a Texas League single to right.

Tommy Garcia, who came on in relief in the eighth, gained the win, his fourth against one loss.

Combining the one-hit pitching of lefty Jack Bristol with a 10-hit attack the Seminoles downed the Tars, Friday night, 7-1.

Bristol had a no-hitter for eight and two-thirds innings, when Rollins second baseman Ronny Brown got a clean single to right-center to ruin the no-hit bid

FIFTH WIN

While gaining his fifth win, the senior southpaw struck out 13 and walked four

Leading the FSU offensive attack with two hits apiece were Howser, Philp, and Ray Baezell.

Rollins only run off Bristol was unearned, coming in the second inning on a walk, a passed ball, and an infield error

McCarron Is As Healthy As His Batting Average

By PHIL ROYCE

Owen McCarron, Florida State's flashy centerfielder, is a healthy man to have around.

This fact about the 5' 9" Nutley, N. J. resident is attested to not only by his lusty batting average but by his doctor's bill of health.

"Mac's" batting average, through last Saturday's game with Rollins, stood at .362, which looks healthy any way you read it. And his "Doc," in this case, Seminole Trainer Don Fauls, describes McCarron as a specimen "perfecto."

"I've never had to do anything for him. I wish we could have more like him. We'd never have any worries."

McCarron, who has played four years of varsity ball, laughingly admits however, that he wasn't always in such good shape. "While playing baseball in high school, I once had a bruised thumb nail."

The speed of Owen constitutes such a threat to rival teams that Notre Dame coach Jake Kline was once led to remark "When McCarron comes up, I just tell my players to throw the ball home no matter where it's hit."

McCARRON

The Rollins coach must have been thinking the same thing following Friday night's fracas, won by FSU 7-1.

HOLDS RECORD

Owen's speed, that carries him the 90 feet to first base in 3.2 seconds, brought him the Tribe's stolen base record this year. Steal number 15 came several weeks ago against Stetson and broke the old record of 11 set in 1919.

As a freshman member of the team, Owen appeared in 12 games, starting two. His average? "I only hit .167 that year." But better days were soon to arrive for the 21-year-old batchelor.

"Mac" started every game as a sophomore and compiled a .320 average. As a junior, his name again appeared in the starting lineup every time and he hiked his season's average to .353.

Both seasons, Owen stole 10 bases.

McCarron relates that his biggest moment with FSU came when he broke the stolen base record. "Another thrill was playing with the team in the College World Series at Omaha, Neb. last year," Owen added.

Owen feels that this year's team has a good chance to win the regionals and go on to their second straight appearance in the NCAA finals. He won't be able to make the trip, however, as he has used up his eligibility.

LITWHILER PRAISED

Seminole Coach Dan Litwhiler is labeled by McCarron as tops. "He's been a great help to me—he's a fine coach," said Owen.

After he graduates this June, "Mac" hopes to play some pro ball. "Pro ball is serious business, but it's fun too. I've been playing ever since I can remember."

Kennedy Signs Landon Cager

Ray Swain, a 6-4 all-state basketball player from Landon High School in Jacksonville, signed a four year scholarship to attend Florida State, last week.

Swain broke the Class AA state tournament scoring record with 42 points in the quarter finals of the 1958 tournament at Gainesville. Altogether, he scored 640 points and hit about 45 percent of his shots last season.

FSU Coach Bud Kennedy said "We're very pleased to have Ray with us. We're quite impressed through the past two years with his basketball ability.

"We think he'll fit in fine with a splendid group of freshmen we have coming in this fall," Kennedy added.

Swain was the third man that Kennedy has signed this year. Earlier in the year, Kennedy signed John Tudor of Columbus, Ohio and John Richter of New York.

TOPS IN J. C.

Richter, 6-6, was the second highest scorer in junior colleges last season as he compiled a 28.8 average playing for Paul Smith College in New York

Tudor, also 6-6, playing for a Columbus high school, scored 50 points and pulled in 35 rebounds in one game last season.

Frosh Tracksters Rip Troy State

Led by Bill Archer, Florida State's freshman track team came from behind Saturday afternoon to defeat Troy State, 70-61

Archer piled up 21¾ points as he notched victories in the 440, the low hurdles, high hurdles, and the broad jump, as well as anchoring the winning mile relay team. He also tied for third in the high jump.

It was the winning of the last event, the mile relay, that clinched the victory for the Baby Seminoles.

Number two point man for FSU was weight man Charles Drago, who won the discus with a heave of 132 feet, 5¼ inches.

VOLLEYBALL TEAM COPS NCAA TITLE

Jazz 'Category' Hard To Define

By DONALD E. MICHEL

(Ed. Note: This is the second in a series on jazz and its place in the academic curriculum. Mr. Michel is the director of the FSU music therapy program and is an assistant professor in the School of Music.)

Jazz as a precise "category" of music is difficult to define, just as difficult as it is to try to place human beings into absolute categories.

Few persons can agree on what is and what is not jazz. Yet, most can make somed istinctions between jazz and some other forms of music, like "classical music"—or can they?

JAZZ LIKE BACH?

Can one really say that the rhythmic, movement-inspiring characteristic of jazz cannot be found in the music of such masters as Beethoven, Bach or Brahms? On the other hand, can we say that some jazz does not employ something of the ideas of these masters?

Some would make the distinction between jazz and classical music as being "serious" and "informal," but can we really say that the classical composers were always "serious", or that jazz is always "informal"?

Dave Brubeck, when he visited the campus two years ago and spoke to music students in Opperham, objected to this distinction. In fact, he, like others playing the style of music he does, stated that he often listened to the master composers' music for inspiration for his own music.

JAZZ HAS BEAT

To me, jazz is another part of music which does not need to be specifically set apart from all other types. It does have some distinguishing characteristics, primarily in that it generally carries a "beat", generally stimulates physical movement in response to the beat, and most often originate from "dance" music.

Yet, many of its characteristics are found in all music, and it employs much from all music in its performance. This may all sound a little confusing, because, like most other people, I believe I can distinguish between a jazz band and a string ensemble or a symphony orchestra. Perhaps this is where the greatest distinguishing characteristic may be found: in the medium of performance.

(To be continued Friday.)

At Reservation

Rules Will Be Strictly Enforced

By MARCY SEITZ

Small craft and swimming regulations at the Reservation will be strictly enforced in the future according to Jack Chevrette, head lifeguard.

Lack of adherence to the rules will result in loss of all privileges, Chevrette said. Students who fail to comply with the regulations will be reported directly to the Dean of Men.

TESTING

In order to use any small craft, students, faculty and staff must pass specific qualifying tests to the satisfaction of the waterfront director. This includes a survival swimming test, sailing tests for the skipper's rating, and ability to handle a canoe.

Testing will be held only in the mornings of the week-end.

"Because of our small staff," said Chevrette, "we cannot instruct anyone in the use of small craft."

Swimming from the boats is prohibited and all craft must stay 100 yards clear of swimming area. This, said Chevrette, is a Leon county law.

Small craft may not be beached anywhere on the lake other than the FSU landing. Any warning or recall signal must be heeded by immediate return to the boathouse.

Small craft may not be towed by power craft. Until such time as the proper facilities are provided and in the interest of safety, power boats of any kind will not be allowed to come alongside, to tie up, or to beach on FSU property at the Reservation.

"From the standpoint of safety," said Chevrette, "it is most important that all swimming regulations be followed."

ENCLOSED SWIMMING

Swimming will be permitted only inside the concrete enclosure. No swimmer will be allowed to board craft anywhere but at the small craft launching site.

The safety of all children is the sole responsibility of parents. No child under seven years of age may be unaccompanied in the water.

Complete lists of all swimming and small craft regulations, according to Chevrette, are posted at the Reservation.

"These regulations," Chevrette said, "comply with Leon county laws and have been approved by the Camp Committee. They have been made for the safety and protection of all, and we ask your cooperation in observing them."

"Copies of the rules are available at the boathouse," he added.

Other members of lifeguard staff are Davis Atkinson, assistant in charge of small craft; Tom Millard, assistant, in charge of the swimming area; Leonard Koeth; Tom Armer; Tom O'Connor; and Mary Ann Reeves. Substitutes are Frank Knight, and Dick Mitchell.

"The staff and I are pleased with the way the program is going," said Chevrette. "We've had good crowds anywhere from 100 to 200 people each time. I feel that in a few years this program will really be something big."

Wright Wins AKPsi Award

Paul A. Wright, graduating senior majoring in Baking Science and Management, was presented the Alpha Kappa Psi scholarship award at the business honorary's annual birthday banquet Friday night in the Suwannee Room.

At the fraternity's birthday dance Saturday evening at the Tallahassee Women's Club, Mrs. Karen Nelson Brown was crowned the 1958 Sweetheart of Alpha Kappa Psi by Jim Julian, president of the Beta Psi Chapter.

The scholarship award is presented to the male student pursuing a degree in the School of Business Administration who has attained the highest scholastic average for three years of collegiate work at FSU.

Mrs Brown, wife of Bill Brown, a graduating member of the honorary, was cited for her participation in helping the organization in gaining the Alpha Kappa Psi efficiency rating award last year.

LIBRARY HOURS

Special library hours will be observed Sunday, for students writing term papers and studying for final exams, according to Charles Walker, Registrar.

The library will remain open from 2 to 10 p.m., instead of the usual 2 to 5 hours.

Flick Slate Ends With 'All Quiet'

"All Quiet on the Western Front," the last campus movie of the year, will be shown in Westcott tonight at 7.30.

This will be the only screening given the two Academy Award winner, which stars Lew Ayres and Louis Wolheim.

The movie, termed "the greatest picture in history" by some critics, is a grim saga of war as seen through German eyes.

It is the story of the adventure of seven young school boys who enter the Imperial Army in 1914 and learn of fear, filth and dust during the four years of the war.

The gripping battle scenes are relieved by war humor. The movie is a J. Arthur Rank production.

ELECTION RESULTS go up on the bulletin board Tuesday night in the Education building. Some were glad, others sad.

Board Votes No

Journalism School Ends June 1959

By JIM McINTYRE

The Board of Control voted here yesterday to discontinue the Florida State University School of Journalism on June 1, 1959, despite a plea by President Robert M. Strozier that the deadline be extended to August of that year.

Strozier's move for extension was made "to give some special courses in the summer for individuals to whom degree commitments have been made." The Board's action was based on budgetary considerations.

Board Chairman James Love of Quincy, explaining reasons for the action, said that it would be awkward to extend the school into a new fiscal year and another biennium.

Both the fiscal year and the two-year period upon which state finances are based will begin July 1, 1959.

STUDENTS APPEAL

Earlier in the day, a group of students in the FSU Journalism School, headed by Junior Bob Wolfenbarger, made an appeal to the Board for reconsideration of the entire controversy, including the report made by the Board's consultants.

The students, who asked extension of courses until 1961 if the Board persisted in the abolition course, based their appeal on the facilities available for journalism education in Tallahassee.

"Tallahassee is the only city in the state that provides a ready-made laboratory for journalism students," Wolfenbarger said, pointing to interviews with various governmental officials "from the Secretary of State down to local police officers."

Love said that he recognized the resources available in Tallahassee, but felt that the recommendations of the consultants should be followed.

EXPRESS SYMPATHY

After Miami Board Member William Gaither had expressed his sympathy to the students, saying that the Board "knew a certain amount of hardship would be involved," Chairman Love expressed the Board's appreciation of the students' appearance.

Wolfenbarger told the Board that if the appeal was denied, the students would appeal no further.

The appeal was denied as the Board reconvened at 2 p.m., along with Strozier's request that the curriculum be extended to August, 1959.

The question of tenure for Journalism School faculty members was discussed at some length on the basis of Strozier's four-page recommendation.

All adjustments will be made within the university by administrative officials, with various faculty members assuming responsibilities in other areas related to their own fields.

The advertising program, which has been a shared field with the School of Business, will continue with the present faculty in that school.

The radio-television curriculum, also a shared affair, will be transferred "to appropriate divisions." A unified program of instruction is expected to be developed.

The Board commended the FSU group for its presentation, with Executive Secretary Broward Culpepper saying he had never had dealings with a group of students who conducted themselves in a more gentile and courteous manner.

"This is what we call the 'tone' of Florida State University," Strozier retorted.

New Dawning

Students Say Great To 'Naked Knees'

By DIANE GODIN

With the second Saturday dawning on the new "naked knees" policy, the time has come to see just how the campus is surviving under this revelation in regulation.

Last Saturday morning, the women's dorm doors were thrown open and they came bounding out in broad daylight, with what propelled them in full view . . . . LEGS.

Student reaction did not vary on one point: "We think it's great!" But there were invariably "buts" following that statement, the main one from women being "Why can't we wear them every day?"

In the Corner, a booth of men students watched a Tuesday-costumed raincoat-swathed co-ed walk by, and added their approval to Bermudas on Saturdays. Roy McCollum, a junior, said, "I don't see how they got it . . . It's amazing." They agreed that it was not appropriate dress for class. "No short-shorts," added a senior Stuart Gould.

A contrast to this viewpoint was offered by a Vet, who prefers "short" shorts. He thinks that Bermudas are an ugly fashion. "You never see anyone in France wearing them."

This brings to mind the first comments when Ronnie Clark introduced his recommendation on lifting the Bermuda ban "with modifications" to Student Senate. It seems some thought this meant "modifying" the Bermudas into Bikinis.

Speaking of politics, one student said she was "very glad that such an action has finally been taken. Now student politicians will quit campaigning on this ridiculous platform." This came from Gloria Meltzer, a graduating senior who had much to say on the subject.

She felt that the approval was simply to "pacify" the students, and diverted their attention from the more significant changes needed in our present standards and rules.

She also added, "Has anyone considered that fact that Bermudas look like pedal-pushers on some short girls and like Jamaicas or shorts on tall girls?"

Freshman girls were afraid of commenting on the situation to the Flambeau for fear of losing the privilege of wearing Bermudas on Saturday. Seniors were less reluctant on voicing opinion. A fashion-major, Maggie McLean, made the remark that the new policy "would certainly revolutionize rulers as well as rules. They should be marked at intervals to indicate Jamaicas, Bermudas, pedal-pushers, etc."

Elaine Giles, a married student, added, "Is an extra inch of legs a sin?" She went on to say that since she was out of town last week, she finds the whole thing hard to believe. "I'll believe it when I see Dean Warren in a pair."

Certainly the greatest proof of approval came last Saturday at the appearance of so many co-eds comfortably clad in their Bermuda shorts. As a male freshman aptly put it, "Man, it's cool."

Senate Passes New Budget; Three Changes

By VIRGINIA DELAVAN

The 1958-59 Student Government Budget was passed by Senate Wednesday with three recommended changes.

A $2,000 increase in Flambeau allotment was cut in half, on recommendation of the paper's business manager. Of this cut, the Senators voted 18-11 after extended debate, to give $250 to Men's Intramurals. The remaining $750 will go to Tally-Ho, upping their increase over last year to $4,750.

Don Talmon, Flambeau business manager said that increased advertising revenue would amount to an additional $1,000 earned by the publication this year, allowing this sum to be released from its budget for other use.

Student government will receive from student activity fees next year $60,275, the same amount received this year. After alloting money to some 26 organizations, $2,749 will be placed in the reserve fund.

The Senators spent an hour and a half discussing the budget. Confusion and lengthy debate on details, such as class reserves and the Spring Formal Fund, lengthened the session.

The Senate also approved Art Moore's appointment of eight new cabinet members.

They are Nancy Denham, secretary of interior, Gerry Gordon, attorney general; Don Reedy, secretary of honor, Laura Cheek, secretary of state; Sandra Rosenberg, secretary of elections. Barbara Watson, secre-

Knight Edges Bill Clendinen

Phil Knight's six-point victory over Bill Clendinen for the senior class presidency highlighted the results of Tuesday's run-off elections.

In the final balloting Knight received 231 votes to Clendinen's 225. The race for the sophomore class presidency was another close one, with John Bell defeating Vic Halbach by a 367 to 336 vote.

Other sophomore class posts filled were: vice-president, Barbara Youmans; secretary, Judy McMillan; and sophomore women's senators, Ann Moore and Penny Pickels.

In run-offs for other class posts, Dean O'Sullivan was elected senior social chairman, Kay Hall was elected junior class treasurer, and Charles Van was put in the post of junior men's senator.

Dave Dale, Fred Powers, and Jack Ryder are to fill court offices in junior men's judiciary. Anne Easterday, Monty Gilham, and Marilyn Harris will serve in junior women's judiciary. Filling two vacanies in junior women's honor court are Nancy Jones and Ann Williams.

Terrie Jones will serve on sophomore traffic court.

Sandra Rosenberg, secretary of elections, emphasized that final expense statements for all winning candidates, including both primary and run-off victors, are due in the elections office as soon as possible. Final deadline for the statement is next Tuesday, the date of installations.

Penny-A-Minute Slated Tonight

"Penny-a-Minute Night" will be held tonight for all Florida State women students, sponsored by Mortar Board.

Paying a penny for every minute taken over the regular 12:30 limit, they may stay out as late as 1:30 a.m. if they sign out for the extra time before leaving their dorm or sorority house, according to Jan Kaminis, Mortar Board historian.

Both old and new Mortar Board members will be stationed in the women's dormitories tonight to collect the pennies. Proceeds from the event will go toward Mortar Board's scholarship fund and the annual Mortar Board-ODK Leadership Conference held each fall.

Housing Contract Up For Review?

By WARREN GERARD

Dr Jack Rollow, director of housing, at a meeting with students last Tuesday, said that next year's housing contract will be subject to review and modification.

Although students living in residence halls were sent a copy of the contract earlier this semester, most students were not aware of its existence until last Tuesday's Flambeau story appeared.

Students living in undesirable off-campus housing not conducive to educational study could be removed and placed in university housing if room was available, stated Dr. Rollow. "Housing is a part of a student's intellectual experience," he said.

UNDERGRADS IN DORM

The university catalogue states that all single undergraduates are required to live in university housing as long as there is available room.

Art Moore, president-elect of the Student Body, said "The students should have been informed. At this time of the year students are busy with final exams, and full-time consideration can't be devoted to the problem."

Dr. Rollow stated he was not aware of what channels he should have gone through and regrets now he did not.

The contract, containing 12 clauses, states that the student must "accept the assignment for the entire academic year."

Student Senator John Van Beck pointed out that the contract contained such "demanding clauses" as "You are responsible," "You must," and "The University reserves the right." The contract offers no insurance for damage of personal property due to university failure or fault, he said.

3,700 MEN HERE

At the present time there are accommodations for 1,411 men in university housing and 3,700 men are enrolled at FSU, Dr. Rollow said. When the new dormitory is built, there will be accommodations for 570 more men; until then the contract will not be effective.

Reservations for university housing is filled for the next year, Dr. Rollow said.

Previously there has been a 5 per cent loss because of vacancies, stated Dr Rollow. This will not happen with the new contract.

"Attendance at FSU is a privilege. But if students did not sign the contract, admission would not be refused to them," he said.

Moore said the contract would be reviewed and modified before August of this year.

600 Tally-Ho's Out Today

Six hundred copies of the 1958 Tally-Ho have arrived and are ready for distribution, according to Evie Morris, Tally-Ho editor.

This is only the first shipment of the yearbook, Miss Morris pointed out, and are intended for those who are leaving campus early. Students who will be on campus for several days are encouraged to wait for a later shipment, which will arrive by May 28. In this way, those leaving campus early will be able to get a copy before leaving.

Distribution of the yearbook will be handled in the basement of Longmire from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. Receipts and identification cards must be produced in order to obtain a copy.

IT'S ONLY A PENNY-A-MINUTE, fellows for that extra hour with your date tonight. Proceeds go to Mortar Board scholarship fund.

Opening Tonight; Tickets Available

By GLENDA POWERS

Amidst a Paris Latin Quarter setting, Puccini's melodious opera "La Boheme" will be presented tonight and tomorrow night by the Florida State University Opera Guild. The production, being given in English, begins at 8:15 both nights in Westcott Auditorium.

With activity books or other proper identification, students may still buy tickets in Westcott for 50 cents; the price for the general public is $1.

FSU is not alone in its presentation of the romantic four-act opera. Throughout the country many groups, including the Metropolitan Opera Association, are performing "La Boheme" in honor of the centennial of Giacomo Puccini's birth.

The plot of the opera centers around a love story between Rodolfo and Mimi. As many young couples, they "break - up and make-up" until the climax, when Mimi accidentally overhears a conversation revealing a startling truth about herself.

Erbert Aldridge, a native Tallahasseean and former student in the School of Music, is cast in one of the leading parts in the opera. Aldridge plays the poet Rodolfo in tonight's performance. He sang a number of leading roles with the Atlantic Opera Company after leaving FSU, and while in the FSU School of Music he received his voice training under Betty Jane Grimm.

From Atlanta he moved on to New York where he joined the NBC nation - wide opera tours. Aldridge has appeared in numerous concert engagements including two Tallahassee recitals.

The leading tenor role will be sung tomorrow night by another Tallahasseean, Martin Lies, a sophomore. Lies has sung operatic roles in Jacksonville and was Jenik in the FSU production last year, "Bartered Bride."

COLLINS PRODUCER

Richard Collins is the producer-director of the show, while Robert Sedore is conducting the FSU Symphony for the performances. Both Collins and Sedore are members of the FSU music faculty.

The Choral Union under Herman Gunter is providing the chorus, and the Tallahassee Junior Chorus under the direction of Lois Schnoor is providing the children's chorus. Betty Jane Grimm is in charge of choral staging, and Edith Kaup is musical coach for the production.

Students playing the role of Mimi are Martha King, a junior from St Petersburg who has appeared as a soprano soloist with the Tampa Symphony and in several productions at St. Petersburg, and Shirley Paonessa, a senior from Clearwater who has sung in several operatic productions at FSU.

Musetta is portrayed by Ethel Donaldson, a junior from Palatka who was the soprano lead in last year's production of "Bartered Bride", and Patty McCarty, sophomore from St Petersburg who has sung musical roles in productions at St Petersburg High School and has appeared in operas at Chautauqua, N Y.

The part of Marcello features Lonnie Keene, junior from Palatka who has done a number of baritone roles in opera and musical comedy at FSU including Krushina in last year's "Bartered Bride."

Wesley Chesnut, a senior from Apalachicola who has sung FSU roles as a baritone in the productions "Bartered Bride" and "South Pacific," appears as Schaunard.

KLEID AS COLLINE

Steve Kleid, a bass-baritone who is a senior from Miami Beach, will be seen as Colline. He has appeared in leading roles in both musicals and plays, including "Oklahoma," "Bartered Bride," "Skin of Our Teeth," and "The Bigger They Come."

Quarters Set For Seniors' Folks, Guests

Housing accommodations on campus will be available for guests of graduating seniors, according to the University Housing Office.

Mothers and women guests of women students, and fathers and other male relatives of men students may be housed in the hall in which the student hosts live, provided there is room in the hall.

The student hosts will be responsible for finding space and seeing that the room is ready for occupancy; the hall officer may be consulted for possible vacancies.

Such guests must be registered in the hall office. No persons under 14 years may be accommodated.

Friday evening, May 30, is the earliest time guests may be admitted to the halls.

Married couples' parents of either men or women students, will be house in Reynolds Hall. Reservations may be made in the Housing Office, 107 Bryan Hall, beginning Wednesday, May 21.

Rooms will not be available until noon on Saturday, May 31. Guests should register in the hall office on arrival.

Linens may be secured for the use of guests. A deposit of $2 50 is required and may be paid in the Housing Office beginning Monday, May 26. A refund of $2.00 will be made when linens are issued.

Linens will be issued on Friday afternoon, May 30, from 2 to 4, and on Saturday morning, May 31, between 7 30 and 10 in room 107, Bryan Hall.

Chipola Slates Concert Today

The Chipola Junior College Glee Club will present a program of songs in Opperman Music Hall at 4 this afternoon, according to the FSU School of Music.

The thirty minute program will feature Betty Ann Bevis as soprano soloist. A sophomore from Malone, Florida, Miss Bevis was presented in recital this spring. She will sing "The Lass With the Delicate Air" by Arne and "I Saw the Swift Swallow Flying" by Dell Acqua.

Other numbers are a girls' trio, "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes" by Kern; a quartet, "Kentucky Babe"; "Unchained Melody" by North; "Comin' Through the Rye" arrangement by Simeone; and "Brother James Air" arrangement by Jacob.

Kathleen Cartledge will also sing a solo, "By the Bend of the River" by Edwards.

Miss Charlotte Dean is director of the group. Chairman of the Chipola Junior College Division of Music this year, she received her masters degree in music from Florida State University in 1951.

Miss Dean has been affiliated with various choral groups including the Harvard University Summer Chorus and the Riverside Church Choir of New York City. She is composer and arranger of a number of choral works which have been presented by various glee clubs and choirs.

Student Officers Installed Tuesday

All newly-elected student government officers will be installed at a banquet Tuesday at 6 p.m. in the Suwannee Room.

Barbara Burkhart, Chief Justice of the Honor Court, will swear in the new officials. Dean of Students R. R. Oglesby will address the group at 7:15.

Those who plan to attend are asked to pay their $1 50 fee by this afternoon in 214 Longmire.

'Hour' Features Les Jongleurs

Les Jongleurs, honorary dramatic organization, will present a reading of Maxwell Anderson's "Anne of the Thousand Days" at the English Coffee Hour this afternoon at 4 in the Westminster House.

Prior to the reading, in which student members of the group will take various parts, Assistant Professor Richard G. Fallon of the Department of Speech will discuss T. S. Eliot's "Three Voices of Poetry."

Marlene Matouk, president of Les Jongleurs, will open the program. Students taking parts are: Cromwell, Oliver Dixon; Henry VIII, Ron McCall; Anne, Isa Cohen; Smeaton, Bryant Simms; and Norfolk, Reggie Ivory.

According to Miss Matouk, Les Jongleurs plans to initiate a "Green Room" program next year, to be held Mondays at 3 p.m. Similar to the English Coffee Hour but sponsored by the Speech Department, its purpose will be the stimulation of interest in drama.

Study Budget Longer

Confusion reigned in Senate meeting Wednesday. In an hour and a half debate the 1958-59 Student Government Budget was prodded and poked by 30 well-meaning, but muddled Senators.

THE SENATE, as a whole, had no working knowledge of what the new budget contained. This resulted in involved debate on fine points, hassles over what is or should be done with class reserves, and contradictory explanations and "clarifications" from uninformed Senators.

Admittedly, the budget is a complicated document. Necessarily so, for it allots over $80,000 to some 26 organizations. Jack Taylor, Secretary of Finance, and his budget committee have done an admirable job of studying requests from organizations, balancing them against last year's expenditures and additional expected needs. They have tried to come up with reasonable allotments which will make the budget balance.

HOWEVER, THE SENATE has final approval on the budget. It is up to the Senators to make any necessary changes or amendments.

The budget affects all student government, organizations, classes and therefore, all students. These students deserve a thorough study of an act which will directly affect their financial operations for an entire year.

THE QUESTION OF "Bermuda shorts or no" was debated and investigated over a period of months. Yet the budget was run through in one meeting, in a haze of confusion, with no consideration given to many major cuts and increases.

It would be wise to appoint a committee of senators to sit in on budget committee discussions throughout next year. They would then be aware of the why's and wherefore's of the budget and could explain them to the Senate body.

It would also be a good idea to do things like the "big people" do and circulate mimeographed copies of the budget to all Senators in advance of this meeting so that they could talk with committee members or organizations with gripes..

At the close of the Senate meeting, Jim Apthorp introduced a resolution calling for study of next year's budget to begin a month before the last meeting. This resolution has very real value. It would allow time for careful thought and deliberation to be given this important measure.

Is Justice For Sale?

Most Southerners will not be too sad to learn of Negro Congressman Adam Clayton Powell's recent indictment on charges of income tax fraud.

However, there is more to the Powell case than meets the eye. The Justice Department has handled the case in a questionable manner — leading to the suspicion of political favoritism on their part. It is a case, we think, which deserves more attention on the part of citizens.

IN 1956 POWELL bolted the Democratic Part to support Eisenhower for re-election. After the election it seemed that the Congressman could breathe easier on the matter of the investigation of his wife's income tax returns, in return for his support of the winning candidate.

Last week a federal grand jury in New York indicted him for allegedly helping his wife evade payment of $3.700 in income taxes in 1951.

FORMER U. S. Attorney Thomas Bolan testified to the grand jury that he had been ordered by higher officials in Washington to drop the Powell case as it was "too hot to handle." Bolan added that he had no doubt that the order came directly from William Rogers—now Attorney General of the United States.

This week two more government prosecutors testified that they had been ordered to "sit tight" and "do nothing" about the investigation of Powell's alleged income tax discrepances.

The same testimony revealed that the files on the Powell case had been secretly transported from New York to Washington last fall.

NOW THE JUSTICE Department comes forward to say that the whole thing is being considered "an internal matter" by the department. Further the department refuses comment on the whereabouts of the files on the Powell case.

We beg to differ with the Justice Department. The Powell case is not an internal matter. Matters concerning the violation of the laws and the administration of the government departments are matters which concern all citizens and ones which should be brought to their attention.

ADDING INSULT to injury, the Justice Department has now launched an investigation—NOT of Powell's guilt or innocence, NOR of the reasons why the indictment was delayed to the point where the statute of limitations almost ran out—BUT of Bolan and others who testified before the grand jury about the department's efforts to drop the case.

What is going on? We don't know, but it looks like something is rotten in the Justice Department. We hope that the Justice Department is not selling justice in return for political favors.

The Critic's Corner

What Causes Sparse Crowds?

By DIXON REDDITT

Last Friday saw another presentation by what is probably the best performing group on campus, the University Singers under Dr. Wiley Housewright. This organization performs not only the very best music in the very best way, but they always approach and exceed those standards that we expect from professionals.

Through lack of judgment on somebody's part this important concert received virtually no publicity, and was consequently poorly attended. Those who heard the program however had the special reward of hearing a local group perform really well.

WE HAVE OFTEN been of a mind to speak several times of the gross manners of the campus audience, but hoping that these erring unfortunates knew no better we did our best to ignore them. Our patience has been tried now to its utter extremities. For instance, would the little old lady who brought her Civil Defense flashlight to the Singers concert, kindly refrain from flashing it all over the auditorium during the performance.

It is unfortunate to note that poor attendance at other recitals (Junior, Senior, and certificate) is only a symptom of a general illness. There are the same sparse crowds even when the events are publicized. Where are the School of Music faculty who as a governing body, require students involved to prove themselves adequate for such a presentation? They are not at the recitals and that is the important consideration. Where are the people who should be most immediately concerned, that is No. 1, the students of the teachers involved, No. 2 students and faculty in the same general field, voice, piano, etc. And No. 3, those students and faculty who can see the forest (of music) in addition to the trees (of their own performance media)? Apparently none of these groups are really vitally interested.

NOW IT IS possible that this lack of interest in such an important activity of the school of Music is caused in part by the fact that the standard of performance at these recitals is not uniformly high; some, in fact, are distinctly inferior. If there are other reasons for this dilemma, they should be sought out and eliminated.

At this point we could throw in a few choice comments about the thoughtless habit of people entering and leaving recitals during performance, and of course, the terrible lack of rapport between performers and audience at Tuesday afternoon recitals. But we won't. We move on to the Symphonic band concert (Wednesday night) where these factors were negligible because the concert was given in the amphitheatre.

IT IS DIFFICULT to make a transcription sound good, regardless of the medium from which, or to which it is transcribed. Some of the worst things we have ever heard have been orchestras playing marches. Director Whitcomb and his Symphonic band are to be commended in that they can now play "Pictures from an Exhibition" as transcribed from the orchestra score (which is of course transcribed from the original piano version) and make it sound good.

As the band was considerably improved over their last performance as regards intonation, balance and ensemble, an enthusiastic audience insisted on several encores and we offer our "bravo" along with theirs.

Languages Necessary To Students

LETTERS to the EDITOR

TO THE EDITOR

The editorial commenting upon the proposed foreign language requirement for graduation from the College of Arts and Sciences struck me as a rather strange reaction to a pertinent topic.

The editorial says: "Language appeals to certain students. To others it makes little or no appeal." Am I right in supposing then that the writer considers an education to consist only of subjects or ideas that "appeal" to us? That seems to be a rather high-schoolish approach. Is not education more than doing things or finding out about topics that "appeal" to us? Is it not also a process of discipline which we impose upon our thoughts and our intellect? (The latter after all is supposed to be found in more or less quantities among college students.) If we want to study only the things that appeal to us, we will become dabblers, if we want to study subjects that appeal to us "inrseeing the many jobs ... open to Americans . . .", we will end up as hopeless materialists."

IT IS AT A university where we have a chance to encounter various fields of knowledge that we should acquaint ourselves with these fields, whether they "appeal" to us or not. One must have a bit more than a basic knowledge in many areas of the arts and sciences, one must have struggled with the old and new facts and ideas in these fields, before one has the right to accept or reject them. This examining of a body of facts and ideas, the struggle of investigation, the ultimate acceptance or rejection and then the readiness to build one's own ideas or add facts which one has found oneself—those are the ingredients of an education! To follow only the rather erratic path of pursuing knowledge which "appeals" to us will never make us educated.

Another statement which struck me as very strange is the one that "one is not really learning anything new when be is taking a language course." Is it not new, to encounter the ideas of people belonging to countries and cultures other than our own? Is it not new to be able to read the works of philosophers, artists, scientists and politicians in their own languages?

IN THIS AGE OF shrinking distances and far-reaching means of mass communication it is more than ever necessary for us to know not only our language, but at least one other one, to enable us to find out more about people with whom we have to live more and more in proximity, and whose ideas violently clash with our own. It is also important that we be able to exchange our ideas and ideals with them, because never has the need for understanding other people's conceptions and interpreting our own to them been greater than now.

English is my foreign language (German being my native one) and from the day I was able to read English I have encountered many "new" facts and "new" ideas with which I could have never become acquainted in German.

Does Gold Key Tap All Worthy Men?

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE MEMBERS OF GOLD KEY:

I have been on this campus now for almost three years, and in that time have never written a letter to the editor. The other day you tapped eight students into your honorary.

In my opinion your choice did not take in everyone that should have been tapped, making it a poor selection. I spoke to Student Body President Arnold Greenfield regarding qualifications needed. I was informed that a 2.3 overall average is required, participation in significant activities, leadership traits in activities, and other noteworthy work — but that the group is not supposed to deal in personalities when choosing.

BUT BY YOUR ACTIONS (your choices), you have shown me that it is a farce. It seems that all Gold Key is turning out to be is a "pick your buddy because he's a good guy" organization, whereas the students who give their time to student activities year after year are forgotton, and in some cases their work will never be recognized because they are graduating seniors.

You hold your tapping meetings when at least five members were not in attendance. Would you postpone the meeting until they could be present? Of course not. Would you hold a special meeting to tap again? Of course not.

I know many of you very well and consider you my friends, but perhaps after this letter you will not regard me as such. But principle is involved here and I am not willing to let it pass unnoticed. What is right is right. To me you have nothing to be proud of.

LARRY BLOCK.

New Housing Contract Nebulous And Negative

By NANCY HANNAFORD

The 1958-59 housing contract students have been asked to sign in order to live in university residence halls next year tends to be somewhat of a grate. As a matter of fact, it doesn't fall too far short of being outrageous.

The annual commitment for men students, for instance, is needlessly binding. Instead of commiting themselves financially for a semester at a time, they are, upon signing this year's contract, obligated to live in a dormitory for the entire year. Many off-campus apartments are vacated second semester, and students living in dormitories because there were no off-campus vacancies at the beginning of the year have a valid reason, usually financial or for study purposes, to leave university housing and move into Tallahassee.

JACK ROLLOW, director of university housing, states that this annual commitment will gain money for the building of a new men's dormitory. He also added, however, that other residence halls have been added without this measure.

During a meeting held last Tuesday afternoon, to discuss the contract, students were reviewing with Rollow any ways in which men signed up for residence halls might avoid their commitment and move off-campus. Was there any way they could leave their dormitories? they asked. Rollow offered affably: "You can always die."

STUDENT BODY President Arnold Greenfield shot back, "But sir, there are some of us who want a little more privileges than that." There was general laughter among the students. There was also a steely agreement.

Another unpopular clause in the contract pertains to damage to personal property. "The University is not liable for loss or damage to your personal property. . ." In short, if a water pipe bursts and a student's hi-fi set goes floating out the door, there would be no reimbursement. The same would apply to a faulty electrical outlet or to a blown-up radiator.

THE ELEVENTH proposition contained in the contract states that "The University reserves the right of entry by authorized personnel." Who is authorized? When are they authorized? Why are they authorized? This leaves rather a wide margin, doesn't it? Counselors, J. C.'s or Housefellows, dorm officers, housemother, maid, janitor, honor court, campus police, Dean Warren, the Coca Cola bottle collector?

Then, if a student objects to the above clauses, by refusing to allow his room to be entered, for instance, he might be kicked out of the dorm. Quoth housing contract: "You are not entitled to refunds, if you are . . . removed from University housing for violation of principles and policies on conduct and procedure."

These examples are hypothetical, granted, and perhaps a little exaggerated. They do point up, however, some of the ridiculous measures the housing office is legally able to take under its 1958-59 contract.

GREETINGS!

Wolf Weir is taking Hs-503 (Advanced Demonology) semester, and he swears that he overheard a group of de[...] arranging the one-day checking out of reserve books at the library. "Nobody can study a book in one evening," said demon with curved horns, "and hanging around the [...] until checkout time will spoil his whole study schedule [...] fix it up that way."

I AM SURE that Wolf is mistaken, because they had the same system last semester. Actually, as usual, it has been possible to prove that the system was arranged with nothing but our benefit and improvement at heart.

I didn't really understand the system until I tried to find out who had put Krober's Anthropology on one-day reserve and found out that nobody had. Yet there it was, and nobody's name but mine all the way down to the bottom of the checkout card. It was really done, surreptitiously, by the second junior genius in charge of whiz-bang reading skill.

"SOME OF THESE lads now in college," said the S. J. G., "will undoubtedly wind up in vine covered cottages, where they can smoke their pipes by the fireside, pat their wooly sheep dogs on the head, and read the literature in their fields at leisure. Bully for them!" The S. J. G. uses language like that sometimes. "But others will be in fields like nuclear physics where the new works are coming out so fast that before their nerveless fingers can grasp a book firmly, it must be snatched away from them and replaced by the newest new work. Unless we think of something, none of them will ever get past the acknowledgements. And yet other students will get into fiercely competitive fields like the Texas oil industry where a fast eye in over somebody else's shoulder may bring in a new oil field to the surprise of one and all. But," and here he squared his shoulders and bit resolutely into his pipe stem, "we can prepare them."

HE CEREBRATED, using his patented cerebrating machine. "Hmmm. The best study hours are from about 5 p.m. until about 10, I should say. Now, nobody who can help it will study in a crowded room when he can study in his own room." His smile widened. "So we take all the books they have to read and fix it so that they can't get them until—um. We can't make it 10, because the library is closing then." The smile faded. Prexy Cites Reasons For Existence Of SG

Student activities when commented upon are subject to cr[...]cism on many counts. The average student is inclined t[...] relatively apathetic about those activities in which he does [...] participate. When his interest is momentarily kindled it is [...] too frequently because he has been moved to the critical.

STUDENT GOVERNMENT officials, myself included, generally believe that the organization's attempts to benefit the group would be fortified by more student interest. Many of the so called "student leaders" resent the fact that most non-officeholders seem to mention Student Government only when they have something to complain about. Thus a major topic for discussion among student officials is always, "How to promote and or build interest in Student Government."

Obviously, I feel that this is a worthwhile goal. If I did not I would not have spent so much time in the Longmire Building during the last four years. However, I must admit that I have become thoroughly convinced that too many of us have gone about building Student Government in the wrong way.

Those student representatives who are so prone to scream when criticised have no business holding office. First it seems a truism of democracy that citizens have a right to belittle that which they have created. Secondly when the critical questioning comes from the press, the commentators are very definitely exercising a legitimate function. As long as newspaper editorials retain some vestige of responsibility, no truthful comment may really be considered unwarranted.

THIS YEAR A particular problem arose when certain student Senators felt that their group's activities had been overly ridiculed by the Flambeau. The most severely derogatory comments seemed to be aimed at the Senate's plan to "promote Student Government." Although this is certainly desirable from my point of view, I think it is possible to go about it in the wrong way. More exactly stated, it is a misguided philosophy of Student Goverorment which leads to attempts at promotion by artificial means.

Student Government was adequately promoted this year, I hope. If this is true it was not because of any list of things to do for promotional purposes, but rather because of the concrete achievements of our organization. I invite the reader to scan the analysis of cabinet members' activities, which appears elsewhere in these pages. If these activities were worthwhile, then they served to promote Student Government. A Sports Editor Reminisces

It's been a short four years.

And it's been an eventful four years in the athletic history of this university. Departments have come and gone, sports have come into their own, then disappeared.

If you'll permit a little reminiscing, I'd like to enumerate just a few of the things which happened—things which have made my connection with athletics here some of the most interesting four years I've ever known.

Among other things, I saw.

. . . Florida State go big-time in football and basketball, making all sports now major-college. . . . the long-awaited gridiron clash with Florida finally got on the schedule, with the aid of the state legislature. . . . at last, a home game with Miami, but as yet no victory. . . .

. . . One athletic regime go by the boards, another established over a year later. . . . a football department come and go, and a basketball, baseball, golf, tennis, swimming, track and gymnastics department come and go, as the athletic committee's were ended 14 months after it began. . . .

ALL-AMERICANS

. . . FSU's first major-college all-American football player, Lee Corso, end a highly successful career which included selection as "back of the week" nationally by the International News Service . . . FSU's first all-American baseball player, Dick Howser, who included among his feats a school batting record of 422. . .

. . . a 5-10 guard who resembled a boxer more than a basketball player rewrite the cage record books for the school—Jimmy Oler. . . . possibly the school's best court team ever race to a 22-4 record, including a trip to the NAIA second round. . . the basketball team "graduate" with a schedule including West Virginia, Xavier (O.), Okla U. and other powers. . . . and the king of all cage squads, Kentucky, on the slate next year. . .

. . . entrance and exit from the Florida Intercollegiate Basketball and Baseball Conferences, with titles in both sports. . .

. . . the Seminole baseballers make two straight trips to the NCAA District playoffs, one to the "College World Series" . . . the beginning of the Florida State invitational baseball tournament, with two team titles and a tie for first for the Seminoles. . . the start of baseball competition with Florida, but thus far only one win in four tries. . . the first no-hitter in FSU baseball history (Frank Slusser against Miami, 18-0, April 18, 1958) . . . several Seminole ball players graduate to the professional ranks. . . a likeable southpaw (Tony Avitable) smash the school's strikeout record—and a strapping redhead come close to breaking that mark the following year. . . . both went on to pro ranks. . . .

BEAT FLORIDA

. . . a fired-up track team post its first dual victory over Florida, and go on to post its first unbeaten season including a Florida AAU victory. . . . track records fall like match sticks during that same season, including the mile, half-mile, javelin, 440 pole vault, mile relay. . . . the most thrilling track meet I've ever seen even though we lost to Florida, 87-64 (1957) . .

. . . possibly the best college swimming team in the southeast for four years. . . . three tank victories over Florida, including one this year right after the Gators won the Southeastern Conference title with the most points in history. . . . FSU's second all-American swimmer, Ernie Stock. . . . the possibilities of better things to come with a freshman this year breaking the existing standards in three events—Buck Hiles . . . a great swimming coach at work, with a 72-17-2 mark to show for his era here. . . .

. . . one of the nation's outstanding gymnastics teams rack up title after title . . . several individual championships in the . . . a team victory over the Swedish Olympic team which will go down in history. . . . a National AAU crown in 1955 . . . four years of gymnastics competition with no losses in dual competition . . .

. . . the Seminole golfers chalk up two straight Florida Intercollegiate titles. . . . the golfers finish in the top 10 nationally for two straight years. . . . a Seminole golfer, Ed Jenkins, break the Tallahassee Country Club course record with a sizzling 62—and an FSU transfer student tie that mark a few weeks later . . . the initiation of the golf series with Florida, with two victories in 1956 . . .

. . . the end of volleyball at Florida State. . . . and could they go out on a better note than with a national championship? . . . a long string of Florida AAU championships in the sport. . . . and several all-Americans thrown in for good measure . . .

. . . three successful tennis seasons in four tries, a good average in any league . . . possibly FSU's best tennis player ever, . . . Schaus. . . . again, the initiation of competition with Florida in another sport, but not victories to show as yet. . . one of the top tennis teams in the nation, the University of Miami. . .

SAW MUCH MORE

. . . and I saw much more, all of which could not possibly be enumerated in the space available. . . . I saw many athletes come and go, and I saw many outstanding achievements bettered, and many go down in the record books which may last forever. .

. . . and I found out that college athletics was far from being sports any more, that in reality it was a business now. . . . and I saw the NCAA finding that out quickly also, and other schools reprimanded. . . . and I wondered if someday the axe might fall here. . . .

. . . and now others will follow, and observe and wonder, . . . and they will look back and remember when—when FSU reached the big time . . . and they will go, and the ticker tapes will keep ticking, and the NCAA will keep probing—and through it all college athletics will undoubtedly survive, maybe as a sport, maybe as a business . . .

. . . and the ticker tapes keep ticking, and the NCAA keeps probing. . . .

Mural Program Saw Changes During 1957-58

By JIM HOGAN

(Editor's note: Jim Hogan is intramural director. In the following article he has presented most of the changes that took place in the intramural program here at FSU during the past school year. He also comments on the success of the program.)

With the playing of the all-star softball game next Tuesday, another year of intramural activities will draw to a close.

The success of this year's program can only be found in the minds of those men participating in the activities.

The program took on somewhat of a new look, when the need for a combative activity was filled by adding wrestling to the long list of activities.

In its first year of actual competition, wrestling drew approximately 75-80 participants and about 300-400 spectators over the four nights of competition.

Next year should also find some changes being made. It was decided by the intramural board, that the fraternity and dorm-independents would have a split in their policy making boards. This was attributed to the fact that these two bodies didn't always have similar problems.

It was also decided to revise the program to the extent that all sports will be divided into two point categories, 75 and 150 points, instead of the customary 50, 75, 100 and 150 points. This will alleviate some of the book keeping.

Another change of significance is the fact that the intramural office will now have power to schedule all activities, with the subsequent approval of the board members.

All in all it has been a good year with a close race developing in both leagues. In the fraternity league the SAE's and PDT's battled all the way down to the wire, with PDT coming out on top.

In the dorm league the Newman Club came from behind to nip Magnolia and Penthouse in the final standings.

WHERE SHALL WE PUT IT? This is the question posed by Scott Harpe (left) president of Phi Delta Theta fraternity, as he looks at the intramural trophy recently won by PDT for compiling the most points during the 1957-58 season. Gil Smith, intramural chairman is also puzzled.

Seek Eleventh Straight Against Georgia Teachers

By FRANK RAMOS
Assistant Sports Editor

On the verge of setting a school mark for consecutive wins, Florida State's Seminole nine will close out the regular season against Georgia Teachers tonight and tomorrow.

Baseball coach Danny Litwhiler has selected righthander Fred Kenney (1-2) to go to the mound tonight at 7:30 at Centennial Field. He plans to use his three senior hurlers, Frank Slusser, Jack Bristol, and Tom Garcia in tomorrow's finale at 3:30 on Seminole Field as the Seminoles try for consecutive wins, 11 and 12.

KENNEY

The Tribe possesses a 14-1 lifetime mark with the Teachers and have won the last 10 contests between the two teams.

While waiting word from the NCAA selecting committee, the Seminoles hope to move their season's record to 20-5 at the Teachers' expense.

Litwhiler doesn't plan any extensive changes for the weekend series but has said, "I might try something as far as replacing McCarron in Saturday's game.

McCarron has used up his eligibility and won't be able to play any post season games if the Seminoles receive a bid.

At the present time, the speedy centerfielder is the leading Tribe hitter, batting .363

TEAM BATTING .285

FSU has a healthy team batting average of .285 with five regulars hitting better than 300. Hitting 324 and leading the team in runs scored is all-American shortstop Dick Howser.

Howser is also tied with sophomore catcher Bill Westendick (.340) for the doubles lead. Each has six two-baggers. The school mark is nine.

Mike Copps is the leading run producer with 23 and is batting .316. Copps is also within the RBI record of 29. Leftfielder Gerry Philip heads the homerun department with three.

PITCHING GREAT

Slusser's 7-0 mark is tops in the pitching department. He is closely followed by Bristol (5-2) and Garcia 4-1.

Bristol possesses the best earned run average, a meager 1.38 for 65 innings. Slusser's ERA of 1.40 for 64⅓ innings is a close second. All totaled, the Tribe hurlers have a combined earned run average of 2.41.

Bristol holds an eight strikeout edge over Slusser, with 50 for the season. Garcia is in third place with 42.

Penthouse, SAE Cop Softball Titles

Ronnie Green pitched a 8-0 shutout against Newman Club to win the Dorm-Independent softball championship for the Penthouse Gang.

Losing pitcher was Remick for Newman, who had worked back up through the "losers bracket" of the double elimination tournament for a second chance for the title.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon, with Bob Nellums on the mound, kept their tournament slate clean by trouncing Alpha Tau Omega, 8-1.

Nellums was also the hitting star of the game by slugging a three run homer in the sixth. Bubba Boynton was the losing pitcher.

The all-Star game will be played next Tuesday after all ballots for all-Star players are counted and the teams are announced.

First Undefeated Track Team Broke Twenty-Eight Records

Florida State's track team broke 28 school and track records and tied two more during the 1958 track season.

It was their own way of recording that the team was the greatest in Florida State history and possibly the best in the Southeast over recent years.

Coach Mike Long's Seminoles piled up a total of four dual victories without a defeat and walked away with titles in the Florida Relays, the Coliseum Indoor Games and the Florida AAU.

In addition, they came up with outstanding performances in the nationally recognized Penn Relays and the Atlantic Coast Conference Indoor Games.

Sophomore Jim Casteel of Avondale Estates, Ga., was the outstanding point producer for the Seminoles with a 90¼ total. He set two new records himself and was a member of a relay team that set two other marks.

Casteel set a new school record in the 440 when he ran the event in 48.0 at the Florida AAU meet and he set a new Florida State track record in the same event with a time of 48.5 against Miami.

Casteel was never beaten in the 440 this season.

CONLEY UNBEATEN

Senior Mike Conley, unbeaten in the mile and two mile runs, set new school and track records in those events and was a member of three other record-setting relay teams.

The Gainesville athlete set school track records in the mile with a time of 4:14.2 against Miami and he set school and track records in the two mile. The school record was 9:50.3 during the Coliseum Indoor Games and the track record was 10:01.0 run when the Seminoles broke a 36-meet winning string of Roanoke College.

Senior Jack Terwilliger of Dade City established new school and track records in the 100 and 220-yard dashes and was a member of four record setting relay teams.

Terwilliger's time in the 100 was :9.6 and in the 220, he clipped the wire at 21:1 seconds.

One of the most impressive records set by an FSU athlete during the season was accomplished by Jerry Henderson of Pensacola. He threw the javelin 227.5 feet against Miami to establish new track and school standards. Henderson's 227 plus heave is believed to be an all-time Florida record for a collegian in the state.

WON IN PENN RELAYS

Henderson won the javelin in the Penn Relays against some of the nation's outstanding athletes with a toss of 217 feet, 1 inches.

JIM CASTEEL, FSU trackman who scored 90¼ points during the season. He was undefeated in the 440.

Three Athletes All-American

Three athletes from Florida State were named to the first-team all-American volleyball squad last week.

The men were chosen after the NCAA tournament, which was won by the team from Florida State, Thursday.

Fehmi Zeko, James McFatter and Marvin McLean were the Seminoles that gained the first team berths. Joe Rogers, Duane Eby and John Miller, other members of the squad from FSU, were named to the second team all-American.

For Zeko, it marked the third straight year that he has been named all-American. He made the team for the first time in his freshman year, which made him the first freshman ever to receive the honor.

tary of student events; Diane Godin, secretary of student welfare; and Don Ramsden, secretary of finance.

The secretary of organizations is yet to be appointed.

Since this was the last weekly meeting of Senate this year, five standing committees were dissolved after final reports from the chairmen.

These included the Student Art Series, Day Student Lounge, Reapportionment, Housing and Journalism School Study Committees.

There is strong evidence that the Journalism School report by the examiners in April was fallacious, Senator Dayton Roberts, committee chairman, announced.

The FSU chapter of the AAUP (American Association of University Professors) has joined the students in protesting the dissolution of the school.

They are asking the Board of Control to continue the school for three years, to allow freshmen enrolled in journalism to graduate with a degree in that field.

On Roberts' recommendation, the Senate added a vote of confidence to the appeal

Budget appropriations for the coming year are as follows:

Junior Class, $500, Sophomore Class, $525, Freshman Class, $675; Senior Class, 000 (the Senior Class gift of $500 to the University was abolished and a move in Senate for its reinstatement failed).

Collegians, $820; Cheerleaders, $956, Flambeau, $21 845; Forensics, $2,300; Choral Union, $500; Men's Intramurals, $1 750, University Symphony, $1,170; Smoke Signals, $2,300 (half of what they asked).

University Picnic, 000 ($1,000 was allotted for the picnic last year. This year there is $250 in the reserve fund earmarked for this) Student Government, $4,285 ($200 less than this year).

MORE BUDGET

Student Travel, $2,000, Tally-Ho, $30,045, Women's Glee Club, $250, Women's Division of University Recreation Association, $1,360, Graduate Class $750

Tarpon Club, $795; University Recreation Association, $950, Spring Formal Fund, $1,000; Student Artist Series, 000 (Student Artist Series had an unencumbered balance at the close of this year of $1,000. It is supposedly not a money-making or money-losing organization)

University Singers, $1,250, Theatre Dance, 000 (Next year this account will go before the Student Budget Committee for further consideration).

Speakers' Bureau, $1,500; Student Reserve, $2,749.

Scholar House Ready Next Fall

Eighteen freshmen and three upperclassmen will move into Florida State University's first "scholarship house" for women next fall. Recipients of residence scholarships awarded by the Southern Scholarship and Research Foundation, the women will pay no rent during their college careers, but will share in the cost of utilities and do their own cooking and housekeeping.

"Freshmen receiving scholarships are all in the upper ten per cent of Florida high school seniors scholastically," said Dr S. T. Lastinger FSU Professor of Education and third vice president of the Foundation.

Other requirements of scholarship recipients, according to Dr. Lastinger, are "an inability to finance a college education alone, the complete endorsement of their high school faculty, and a willingness to assume the responsibilities of cooperative living, while keeping up their grades."

Nearly all of the women made between two to three times the minimum score on the twelfth grade test required for admission to FSU.

In awarding the scholarships to the eighteen top seniors, preference was given Florida west coast residents. This was in accordance with the terms of a grant of $30,-000 from the William G Selby and Marie Selby Foundation of Sarasota.

"Students will save from 500 to 600 dollars per year by living in the house," added Dr Lastinger, explaining that a student can attend FSU for 400 to 500 dollars a year by having a residence scholarship. They will do their own cooking, buying groceries in wholesale lots and eating on as little as five dollars a week, according to Dr Lastinger. "We ask them to pay their share of the utilities, such as light, heat, and water," he added.

Although the scholarship house, located at 620 W Pensacola, is the first such unit for women on the campus, it is not the first cooperative living project sponsored by the Foundation at FSU. Thirty-one men students, recipients of similar residence scholarships from the Foundation, have been living in "co-op" units near the campus during the past year, according to Dr. Lastinger.

FSU students who will live in the new women's unit as counselors next fall are Nancy Patterson, an English education major and Sandra Rust, a chemistry major both of Tampa; and Ardis Beland, an elementary education major from Sarasota. "The scholarship house will be under university jurisdiction and a residence counselor will be appointed," said Dr. Lastinger.

The Southern Scholarships and Research Foundation, sponsor of the residence scholarships, is a non-profit tax exempt organization chartered by the state of Florida. It has as its project a "joint - work - scholarship" plan which places a college education within the reach of worthy and needy students, unable to finance their educations alone.

In addition to giving the recipients rent-free housing, the Foundation assists them in finding summer employment. In most cases the summer earnings and residence scholarships enable the students to obtain a college education with no outside financial assistance.

Enjoys Heated Discussions

PBK, Joe Neggers, Likes Jazz

By PAT SENN

Where do you find the "typical" Phi Beta Kappa on campus—the library? lost in the glowing apparatus of a chemistry laboratory? basking at the feet of great scholars? No, more than likely if the Phi Beta Kappa is Joe Neggers, you'll find him sitting in his favorite booth at the Mecca.

Joe, a junior, is already taking graduate courses in math. Well acquainted with Dutch, French, German, Greek, and Latin, he is currently studying Russian.

LIKES HOT JAZZ

But as has already been inferred, his academic life doesn't hamper his social life. Joe likes a heavy smattering of dates, heated discussions at the Mecca, and "hot jazz."

However, there are a lot of things he likes to do by himself—a habit he learned at three and four years old when he was completely on his own to find, day by day, food to exist on in his war torn country of Holland.

Sometimes Joe just likes to sit watching and listening to others. He sketches with charcoal and plans to oil paint when there's more time and more money. He's well versed in both art and music.

Joe hasn't seen much of America since his family came here in February of 1955. He's working now as a student assistant to the math department and finds similar jobs to keep his summers busy and money coming in. He visits his family at their home in Morristown, New Jersey, once a year.

Joe was the middle boy in a large family, and when the Negger clan got together in the Netherlands, it was difficult for even as mathematically inclined boy as Joe to count them all.

When Joe came to America, he was just finishing the fourth year of a Netherlands six year high school plan. The high school he attended had a very accelerated academic program that only the intellectual cream of the crop could attend. (There were less strenuous and trade schools for other students.)

There was little chance for electing courses—six languages, chemistry, physics, fine arts, etc, were all rigidly prescribed. With forty hours of school, six days a week, there was little time for dating and even less money for would-be Romeo's. Joe's main diversion during this time was soccer, which he played several hours a week.

Joe couldn't understand and was slightly curious why the Flambean would want to write a story about him. In his words he's "just average"—average in height, build; longish candy colored hair; nothing outstanding about his features; not too active in school activities. Was it all just because of a few extra brains?

Brains — yes, but a little more than that. Joe has the type of back bone that kept him going through the up-rooting of his country by Nazi Germany, his transportation into the "rock and roll" of America university life, and all the loneliness that came with it.

This is the type of back bone that makes us proud he's here.

TBS And KKP Hold Weekend

Tau Beta Sigma and Kappa Kappa Psi are sponsoring their annual band weekend tomorrow and Sunday.

Tomorrow, majorette tryouts will be held on the field in front of the Geology Building at 1 p.m. Those participating will be high school girls entering FSU next year and girls now working with the majorette corps.

Sunday there will be a picnic from 1 to 5 p.m. at Silver Lake. Price is 75c and tickets must be bought in advance from Tau Beta Sigma members. Cars will leave from the Music Building at 1. Anyone interested may attend.

Scullions Pick New Officers

Scullions, the FSU society of hotel and restaurant management majors, met Tuesday night to elect officers and advisors for the fall semester.

Following the dinner given by the Scullions to close out the spring semester, the following officers were elected: president, John Butler; vice-presidents, Jack McAneny and Martin Potter, corresponding secretary, Margie Wells, recording secretary, Al Haeger; treasurer, George Leshefka. Ashby Stiff and Colonel Welch were chosen as advisors for next year.

A banquet for the senior members of Scullions was held in the Dining Hall Lab last night. Each graduate was presented with an engraved Alumni Endowment Blank, with stamped return address envelope. The new officers were also installed at the banquet.

Ugly Man Award At Spring Formal

The Alpha Phi Omega fraternity will present a trophy Saturday evening at the Spring Formal to the winner of the Ugly Man Contest.

Proceeds from this contest go into a scholarship fund for deserving students.

APO wishes to thank all the organizations who took part in the contest and all the students who showed an interest in voting for Mr. Ugly.

The fraternity will award $300.00 in scholarships to incoming freshmen next fall.

Churches Plan Events For Grads

By ANNETTE McINTOSH

This is the final week of activities in many of FSU's religious houses, as they bring the year to a close by honoring graduating seniors, establishing their councils for the coming year, suggesting plans for the summer that will involve both incoming freshmen and present religious members, and enjoying the closeness and nostalgia of last meetings.

WESLEY FOUNDATION

The Wesley Foundation has been recognizing its seniors in various ways. The annual Senior Banquet was held Wednesday night with 35 people attending. The theme, "A Look in the Crystal Ball," was carried out by a program which involved a revelation of the seniors' activities a few years hence, by that famed fortune-teller, Martha Dreadin.

A breakfast for the seniors will be held at the Foundation at 8 30 a.m Sunday, May 26, before the Baccalaureate Service at 11 a m.

This Sunday morning the seniors will be noted at both the 9 and the 11 o'clock services. Then the High School seniors from the four Tallahassee Methodist Churches will share the spotlight Sunday evening.

"Da Vinci, Move Over" is the topic for Forum Hour at 6 15 p.m Sunday, as the study of "Christ and the Fine Arts" is continued with a look at religion and modern art. Pat Lord is in charge.

Looking forward to next year, the date of the annual Pre-School Retreat has been set for September 10-12, two days before school opens. It will be held at the Reservation. The purpose of the Retreat is to plan next year's program for the Foundation. Anyone who would like to attend can pay a pre-registration fee of $2.00 at the Foundation now.

GAMMA DELTA

A cook-out in Lafayette Park, across from Epiphany Lutheran Church will precede the business meeting and topic study of Gamma Delta, Lutheran student religious association. Rides for the Sunday night meeting will be provided in front of South Cawthon at 5 40 p.m. There will be a final meeting of the Gamma Delta executive council at 5 p.m., according to Delphia Johnson, president.

THE GREAT CAP AND GOWN CONTROVERSY

It will soon be cap and gown time again, so let us, without delay, take up the vexing question: which side of the cap should the tassel hang on?

For many years the practice was to hang the tassel over the front of the cap. This practice was abandoned in 1948 when the entire graduating class of Northwestern University, blinded by tassels hanging in their eyes, made a wrong turn during commencement exercises and ended up at the Great Lakes Naval Training Center where, all unwitting, they were inducted into the submarine service for five-year hitches.

Let us take up the Vexing Question:

There is a growing body of opinion which holds that the tassel should be worn on the same side you keep your Marlboro Cigarettes on. Thus a quick glance will show you where your Marlboros are and save much time and fumbling.

This makes a good deal of sense because when one wants a Marlboro, one wants one with a minimum of delay. One does not relish being kept, even for a second, from the heaps of joy, the barrels of pleasure, the scads of content, the loads of glee, the lumps of ecstasy, that one gets from that filter, that flavor, that flip-top box.

There is another group, small but vocal, which insists the tassel should hang over the back of the cap. The tassel, they say, is a symbol like the bullfighter's pigtail, signifying honor and courage.

They are wrong. Bullfighters wear pigtails for only one reason: to keep the backs of their necks warm. Do you have any idea what a draft a bull makes when he rushes past you? A plenty big one, you may be sure.

In fact, upper respiratory infections, contracted in the wake of passing bulls, is the largest single cause of bull-ring fatalities. I have this interesting statistic from the Bullfighters Mutual Insurance Company of Hartford, Connecticut. Incidentally, Hartford, the insurance capital of America, is a delightful city and well worth a visit if you are ever in New England, as northeastern United States is laughingly called. Try to make your visit in spring when the actuaries are in bloom.

But I digress. We were talking about what side to wear the tassel on. An ingenious solution to this problem was proposed not long ago by Humboldt Sigafoos, perhaps better known as "The Quoit King of Delaware." An early forbear of Mr Sigafoos was granted a monopoly by King George III, on all quoits manufactured in Delaware. Somehow this royal patent was never rescinded and from that day to this, every quoit made in Delaware has been a Sigafoos Quoit.

Well sir, Mr. Sigafoos suggested that the way to solve the great tassel controversy was to starch the tassel so it stood upright and hung on no side of the cap at all. But I'm afraid that sly Mr. Sigafoos was only seeking to broaden his market because after graduation, what can you do with an upright tassel except hurl quoits at it?

The makers of Marlboro have no opinion about what side to hang your tassel on. But with cigarettes, they say firmly: Stay on the light, mild, tasty side . . . with Marlboro, of course!

Tarpon Club To Perform In Mexico

By MARCY SEITZ

Fifteen members of the Tarpon Club will leave FSU June 2 for a week's stay in Monterey, Mexico, according to Meta Viohl, president of the swimming group.

The FSU water ballet team has been invited by the Instituto Technologico de Monterey to give water shows in and around Montery for the week of June 2-13.

The Tarpon Club members will give the same performance as their annual show held here in March.

"Mexirama" is the theme of the production, which is an American interpretation of the culture and life of Mexico

BY BUS

Leaving here by University bus will be members Sherry Brown Nan Chamberlain, Ann Elvery, Beth Elvery, Eleanore Frail, Dottie Hatton, Kathy Knops, Lucy McDaniel, Pat Malseed, Maria Moras, Virginia Reynolds, Lynn Strickland, Meta Viohl, and Jeonnie Wood. Faculty members included will be Miss Glynice Smith, club sponsor, Miss Ann Lankford; and Dr Herbert Lacayo, associate professor of modern laungages

Although this is the first such trip to Mexico by the Tarpon Club, the groundwork for the idea was laid last year while Miss Viohl was attending summer school in Monterey.

At this time, Miss Viohl, who is directing this year's show, organized and trained American and Mexican students from that University for a water ballet show which was held in August

This was the first of such shows to be held in Monterey and, because of its success, plans were made for the Tarpon Club to present a production "en masse" this year.

ALL SHARPED UP. The Collegians in their new blazers will perform with the Zeta Tau Alpha sorority in a joint concert Tuesday night in Opperman Music Hall.

Significant Projects Completed By Executive Branch Cabinet

By MARTHA VEVERKA

"There were many new or especially significant projects completed by the executive branch (cabinet) of student government," recently reported Arnold Greenfield, student body president.

According to the president, these projects included abolition of the Sophomore Car Ban, creation of the Infirmary Board with student members, expansion of Student Speakers' Bureau, and broadening of the Student Artist Series program.

Also included was cooperation with the business office concerning Morrison's and road and traffic problems, creation of a Hall of Fame display, Family Weekend, new style Campus Chest drive, and improved Student Insurance program.

"In addition to these concrete accomplishments already demonstrating the effectiveness of student government," Greenfield said, "FSU students can be proud of the fact that the administration is becoming increasingly more friendly toward student participation in significant areas of university life."

He added that under President Strozier's administration, student government has had the opportunity to expand into areas where student demands have previously had no effect.

CABINET REPORT

Greenfield gave the following report on each of the Cabinet members:

Art Moore, attorney-general, has compiled revised statutes, represented FSU at a Miami student government convention; visited Georgia Tech, Auburn, Emory, Rollins, Miami and the University of Florida either for student government here or for Southern Universities Student Government Association and acted as host for a SUSGA convention held at FSU.

Bob Johnson, secretary of organizations, has assisted in the preparation of the student directory; supervised chartering of new organizations and has disbanded inactive ones still listed on the records; worked on Family Weekend and the Artist Series Committee.

Joan Harmon, secretary of elections and Sandra Rosenberg, new elections secretary, administered fall and spring elections.

Sylvia Kearson, secretary of student events, helped secure Fred Waring and "Damn Yankees" for Student Artist Series presentations this year; administered selection of "Who's Who in American Universities"; and was responsible for the coordination of Campus Chest and Family Weekend.

INFIRMARY BOARD

Dick Crawford, secretary of student welfare, served on new Student-Staff Infirmary Board working of health problems, assisted in promoting the Blood Bank for students on campus; worked on cafeteria improvements; served on the Student Insurance Committee, and participated in planning Job Getting Seminars.

Joyce Weatherup, secretary of honor, conducted the first analysis of the Honor system; prepared and distributed honor information; and held honor emphasis meetings in dormitories, sororities and fraternities.

Priscilla Moss, secretary of state, acted as official hostess for student government at Homecoming, Who's Who Tea and a Student Government reception She also worked on the presidential inauguration reception; and represented FSU at conventions held at Miami, Auburn and the University of North Carolina. Presently she is working on a banquet for installation of new student government officers.

Jack Taylor, secretary of finance, has been responsible for administration of over $100,000; approved fund raising projects; supervised spending present funds; audited accounts of groups receiving activities fees, and has assisted in the preparation of next year's budget.

Pat Finlay, secretary of the interior, served on the student insurance committee and on the Student Travel Service providing information for vacations and trips home, assisted in publicizing opportunities for foreign study and travel; and is currently preparing displays honoring all past and present members of the Hall of Fame.

Lab Band Concert Set Tomorrow Night

"Music to make you forget exams" will be the general theme of tomorrow night's Lab Band concert, to be held in the amphitheatre beginning at 8 15.

Larry Raines, spokesman and promoter for the group, said yesterday that the band's music is guaranteed to make any and all students forget the approaching academic crises.

"In fact," Raines said, "our music will make them forget most anything."

The Lab Band, a 17-piece conglomeration of various and assorted big-band jazz devotees, is making its second and final appearance of the year, under the sponsorship of Phi Mu Alpha

Standout Seniors

KAMINIS

CULLOM

Kaminis, Cullom, Are 'Outstanding'

By DIANE GODIN

Jan Kaminis and Bill Cullom were two surprised people when the closely-guarded secret of their choice as Outstanding Seniors was announced at the Spring Formal Saturday night.

Miss Kaminis, a Phi Beta Kappa with a double major in political science and public administration, said she "couldn't think of a thing to say—I was so surprised."

Miss Kaminis was also chosen as outstanding senior at Hillsborough High in 1954

This year's outstanding seniors have served successive terms as Vice-President of the Student Body Both attend the Methodist church, and it was at Trinity Methodist in Tallahassee that Collum first met his wife, the former Caryl James.

Just discharged from Ft. Benning, Collum came to FSU on a Thursday and met his wife in Sunday School that week They were married in June following the former vice president's sophomore year, and while Collum has been attending school, Mrs Collum teaches third grade at Kate Sullivan Elementary.

Collum, a native of Huntsville, Alabama, served two years with the paratroopers and two years in Washington working in fingerprinting before coming here on a football scholarship.

His football career was short-lived because of a neck injury received during his first year. Unable to play he went back as a trainer the following year.

Currently working at Lewis State Bank thirty hours a week and attending five classes, the business management and finance major regrets having less time to participate in student affairs.

Miss Kaminis says that she "never knows what to participate in. It's hard to decide with so much to do. I tried a lot of things, then it just snowballed" Besides participating in student government, Miss Kaminis is active in honoraries, sorority, church, and still likes to play tennis when she has time.

As for the future, Miss Kaminis' immediate plans are to work for her dad this summer. She also hopes to gain some experience in a law office, for this fall she plans to enter law school at the University of Florida "Even if I never practice, I'd like to become a good citizen," the vice-president said.

FSU will be fortunate to have Collum staying here to work as an administrative assistant while continuing classes in graduate school, with plans for a Masters degree. This carries out his ideas of the importance of college life and the "opportunity and experience of working with people."

Quorums Show Interest

Healthy Criticism Has Spurred Student Senate, Says Veep

By MARTHA VEVERKA

"Although Student Senate has received a lot of criticism this year," said student body vice-president, Jan Kaminis, "I feel that it has been healthy criticism and has spurred the senators on, helping to keep them alert to student needs."

Miss Kaminis pointed out that this is the first year that Senate has had a quorum at each meeting. She added that she felt this to be a good example of the interest and participation of the senators in student government.

"We were elected by the student body and so are responsible to them," she pointed out. She said that, with this in mind, all of the senators have tried to do the best job possible.

In discussing Senate projects, Miss Kaminis said that the new Bermuda shorts ruling which permits women students to wear sports attire on Saturdays only was brought about in great part by Senate committee work.

The result of another Senate committee suggestion was the final examination schedule revision. The report, which was accepted by the examination committee, called for scheduling biology and history exams later than the first day in the examination period. It also asked for moving the women's physical education exams earlier in the week. The committee suggested that lighter examinations be held on the first day in order to give students more time to study for the heavier ones

FOOD COMMITTEE

A Senate committee was set up to work with Morrison's Food Service and served as a liason between students and cafeteria executives. Complaints from the students were taken to Morrison's representatives who then worked on the problems.

Recently, according to Miss Kaminis, a list of possible street names for the campus was submitted to President Strozier At the last Senate meeting President Strozier sent a report stating that, with a few possible changes, the list would be sent to the Board of Control for approval. The naming of streets would alleviate confusion and especially aid visitors on the campus, she said.

Senate also passed a resolution to abolish the Horsecollar Rule, which stated that partial credit is lost when students miss classes on the day before and after a holiday. A committee has been set up to consider the ruling and is presently working with faculty members to consider a change.

A revision of the "Who's Who" selection procedure was passed through Senate, raising the scholastic requirements.

"The selection process was made so that fewer grade slips-ups will be made in the future," Miss Kaminis said

The Senate investigation committee aroused considerable student interest in Smoke Signals, the FSU literary magazine The proposed bill called for abolishing the magazine next year. The Senate bead said she felt that the investigation was benifical, even though the bill failed to pass. She felt that as a result possible changes will be made in the magazine's content

An honor committee was set up working with a similar cabinet committee. This group was responsible for conducting the honor poll.

Other accomplishments include the purchase of Junior Counselor keys by student government, conducting safety campaigns prior to holidays and semester breaks, and sending of several senators to inter-collegiate conferences throughout the year.

Senate also reviewed execution of laws by the executive bead, the student body president, and sent letters to the State Board of Control requesting that the sophomore car ban be listed

It recommended that improved heating and cooling systems be provided on the Westcott auditorium stage and in the men's gymnasium

A Campus Christmas Carol Sing has been suggested for next year on Landis Green

"We have had wonderful cooperation from Dean of Men Donald Loucks, chairman of the faculty review committee," Miss Kaminis said, "as well as from Dean of Students R R Oglesby and Business Manager Rod Shaw."

25 Arrested

Gators Get Grabbed; Hold Six-Hour Riot

Over 1000 University of Florida students took part in a six-hour riot on campus Saturday night which resulted in the serious injury of one policeman and the arrest of 25 rioters.

The riot, second of the weekend, came as a result of a recent crackdown by Alacbua County law enforcement officers on near-campus taverns, which traditionally sold beer to all university students regardless of age

Beginning at 10.30 p. m. in front of the bars along University Avenue on the campus' northern edge the riot spread to many parts of the campus and lasted more than five hours.

Buddy Williams, a campus policeman, suffered several deep cuts about his face when he was hit with a coke bottle shortly before the riot was quelled.

Police used tear gas to end the rioting.

Chanting "We want beer, we want beer" the students moved from one point on campus to another. Both men and women participated, according to Gainesville Police Chief W. D Joiner.

Joiner said that the riot became vicious in its waning hours as men from fraternity houses and dormitories joined it

Several Gaineaville policemen reported minor injuries in fighting the rioters.

Twenty-five students were arrested on charges of inciting to riot and unlawful assembly The former charge is a felony. Several of the students arrested were also charged with assault and battery, disorderly conduct, and the use of profanity

University authorities have indicated that they will let the civil authorities handle the cases. "They were given adequate warnings," Dr. J. Wayne Reitz, president of the University, told newsmen

Each student was held on $500 bond. The prisoners were held in the county jail

The riot reached its peak about ... 30 a m Sunday morning, according to eyewitness reports After Williams was knocked out with the coke bottle, the fight seemed to go out of the students, the reports continued.

Flambeau Bids Fond Farewell

DEAR STUDENTS:

Goodbye

We are too feeble to utter another word—except, perhaps, good luck to the graduates, see you next year to the undergrads, and thanks to everyone for your cooperation with our efforts.

This is the last Flambeau for the year, the next regular edition will be published on Friday, September 19, 1958, during orientation week.

Several Flambeaux, however, will be published during the summer session. Charles Guthrie, a member of the staff this year, was appointed summer editor at a recent Board of Publications meeting

The 1957-58 Flambeau staff will gather for the last time for its annual banquet at the Silver Slipper tonight Dr. Elston Roady of the Political Science Department will address the nostalgic-type group

Once again, aloha. It's really been

THE STAFF

Interested FSU students have formed an organization to publish a literary anthology of the best writing on campus next year According to Mark Austin and Emmett Jarrett, spokesmen for the organization, the first issue should appear in December, 1958

"This publication should do a great deal for the prestige of Florida State University since—as far as I know—it will be the first such college anthology published in the South," Austin said.

"Also, it should help student writers," he said, "because we intend to send it to several New York publishing houses."

SELF-SUPPORTING

The publication is seen as self-supporting, to depend on subscriptions taken by students and others Subscriptions will be available during September, 1958, at FSU.

One issue will be published each year at a cost of 50 cents. The anthology may be used as a text-book in creative writing classes if instructors so desire, according to Dr. Francis G. Townsend, head of the English department.

The student group will be sponsored on campus by Sigma Tau Delta, English honorary, which will aid the staff in publication and distribution.

"I believe that this endeavor, which has originated among students and been generously encouraged by members of the university faculty and staff, could possibly grow into another Southern Review in time."

'GOOD MATERIAL'

"We intend to publish only good material," Jarrett said, "and if there is no good material, we will not publish!"

The provisional staff includes Mark Austin, editor and managing editor; Sean Cleary, fiction editor; Nancy Hannaford, essay editor; and Emmett Jarrett, poetry editor. Other positions will be created and filled as the necessity arises.

A faculty advisor will be invited to participate, subject to the approval of his department head.

Manuscripts will be chosen for publication by the staff and advisors, who will constitute a self-perpetuating board of trustees.

Tarpon Club To Perform In Mexico

By MARCY SEITZ

Fifteen members of the Tarpon Club will leave FSU June 2 for a week's stay in Monterey, Mexico, according to Meta Viohl, president of the swimming group.

The FSU water ballet team has been invited by the Instituto Technologico de Monterey to give water shows in and around Montery for the week of June 2-13.

The Tarpon Club members will give the same performance as their annual show held here in March.

"Mexirama" is the theme of the production, which is an American interpretation of the culture and life of Mexico

BY BUS

Leaving here by University bus will be members Sherry Brown, Nan Chamberlain, Ann Elvery, Beth Elvery, Eleanore Frail, Dottie Hatton, Kathy Knops, Lucy McDaniel, Pat Malseed, Maria Moras, Virginia Reynolds, Lynn Strickland, Meta Viohl, and Jennie Wood. Faculty members included will be Miss Glynice Smith, club sponsor; Miss Ann Lankford; and Dr Herbert Lacayo, associate professor of modern laungages.

Although this is the first such trip to Mexico by the Tarpon Club, the groundwork for the idea was laid last year while Miss Viohl was attending summer school in Monterey

At this time, Miss Viohl, who is directing this year's show, organized and trained American and Mexican students from that University for a water ballet show which was held in August.

This was the first of such shows to be held in Monterey and, because of its success, plans were made for the Tarpon Club to present a production "en masse" this year.

ALL SHARPED UP. The Collegians in their new blazers will perform with the Zeta Tau Alpha sorority in a joint concert Tuesday night in Opperman Music Hall.

Significant Projects Completed By Executive Branch Cabinet

"Music to make you forget exams" will be the general theme of tomorrow night's Lab Band concert, to be held in the amphitheatre beginning at 8 15.

KAMINIS

CULLOM

Kaminis, Cullom, Are 'Outstanding'

By DIANE GODIN

Jan Kaminis and Bill Cullom were two surprised people when the closely-guarded secret of their choice as Outstanding Seniora was announced at the Spring Formal Saturday night.

Miss Kaminis, a Phi Beta Kappa with a double major in political science and public administration, said she "couldn't think of a thing to say—I was so surprised"

Miss Kaminis was also chosen as outstanding senior at Hillsborough High in 1954

This year's outstanding seniors have served successive terms as Vice-President of the Student Body Both attend the Methodist church, and it was at Trinity Methodist in Tallahassee that Collum first met his wife, the former Caryl James.

Just discharged from Ft. Benning, Collum came to FSU on a Thursday and met his wife in Sunday School that week They were married in June following the former vice president's sophomore year, and while Collum has been attending school, Mrs Collum teaches third grade at Kate Sullivan Elementary.

Collum, a native of Huntsville, Alabama, served two years with the paratroopers and two years in Washington working in fingerprinting before coming here on a football scholarship.

His football career was abort-lived because of a neck injury received during his first year. Unable to play, he went back as a trainer the following year.

Currently working at Lewis State Bank thirty hours a week and attending five classes, the business management and finance major regrets having less time to participate in student affairs.

Miss Kaminis says that she "never knows what to participate in. It's hard to decide with so much to do I tried a lot of things, then it just snowballed." Besides participating in student government, Miss Kaminis is active in honoraries, sorority, church, and still likes to play tennis when she has time.

As for the future, Miss Kaminis' immediate plans are to work for her dad this summer. She also hopes to gain some experience in a law office, for this fall she plans to enter law school at the University of Florida. "Even if I never practice, "I'd like to become a good citizen," the vice-president said.

FSU will be fortunate to have Collum staying here to work as an administrative assistant while continuing classes in graduate school, with plans for a Masters degree. This carries out his ideas of the importance of college life and the "opportunity and experience of working with people"

Flambeau Bids Fond Farewell

DEAR STUDENTS:

Goodbye

We are too feeble to utter another word—except, perhaps, good luck to the graduates see you next year to the undergrads, and thanks to everyone for your cooperation with our efforts.

This is the last Flambeau for the year; the next regular edition will be published on Friday, September 19, 1958, during orientation week.

Several Flambeaux, however, will be published during the summer session. Charles Guthrie, a member of the staff this year, was appointed summer editor at a recent Board of Publications meeting

The 1957-58 Flambeau staff will gather for the last time for its annual banquet at the Silver Slipper tonight Dr. Elston Roady of the Political Science Department will address the nostalgic-type group

Once again, aloha. It's really been

THE STAFF

Interested FSU students have formed an organization to publish a literary anthology of the best writing on campus next year According to Mark Austin and Emmett Jarrett, spokesmen for the organization, the first issue should appear in December, 1958.

"This publication should do a great deal for the prestige of Florida State University, since—as far as I know—it will be the first such college anthology published in the South," Austin said.

"Also, it should help student writers," he said, "because we intend to send it to several New York publishing houses."

SELF-SUPPORTING

The publication is seen as self-supporting, to depend on subscriptions taken by students and others Subscriptions will be available during September, 1958, at FSU.

One issue will be published each year at a cost of 50 cents. The anthology may be used as a text-book in creative writing classes if instructors so desire, according to Dr. Francis G. Townsend, head of the English department.

The student group will be sponsored on campus by Sigma Tau Delta, English honorary, which will aid the staff in publication and distribution.

"I believe that this endeavor, which has originated among students and been generously encouraged by members of the university faculty and staff, could possibly grow into another Southern Review in time."

'GOOD MATERIAL'

"We intend to publish only good material," Jarrett said, "and if there is no good material, we will not publish!"

The provisional staff includes Mark Austin, editor and managing editor; Sean Cleary, fiction editor; Nancy Hannaford, essay editor; and Emmett Jarrett, poetry editor. Other positions will be created and filled as the necessity arises.

A faculty advisor will be invited to participate, subject to the approval of his department head.

Manuscripts will be chosen for publication by the staff and advisors, who will constitute a self-perpetuating board of trustees

Quorums Show Interest

Healthy Criticism Has Spurred Student Senate, Says Veep

By MARTHA VEVERKA

"Although Student Senate has received a lot of criticism this year," said student body vice-president, Jan Kaminis, "I feel that it has been healthy criticism and has spurred the senators on, helping to keep them alert to student needs."

Miss Kaminis pointed out that this is the first year that Senate has had a quorum at each meeting. She added that she felt this to be a good example of the interest and participation of the senators in student government.

"We were elected by the student body and so are responsible to them," she pointed out. She said that, with this in mind, all of the senators have tried to do the best job possible.

In discussing Senate projects, Miss Kaminis said that the new Bermuda shorts ruling which permits women students to wear sports attire on Saturdays only was brought about in great part by Senate committee work.

The result of another Senate committee suggestion was the final examination schedule revision. The report, which was accepted by the examination committee, called for scheduling biology and history exams later than the first day in the examination period. It also asked for moving the women's physical education exams earlier in the week. The committee suggested that lighter examinations be held on the first day in order to give students more time to study for the heavier ones

FOOD COMMITTEE

A Senate committee was set up to work with Morrison's Food Service and served as a liaison between students and cafeteria executives Complaints from the students were taken to Morrison's representatives who then worked on the problems.

Recently, according to Miss Kaminis, a list of possible street names for the campus was submitted to President Strozier. At the last Senate meeting President Strozier sent a report stating that, with a few possible changes, the list would be sent to the Board of Control for approval The naming of streets would alleviate confusion and especially aid visitors on the campus, she said.

Senate also passed a resolution to abolish the Horsecollar Rule, which stated that partial credit is lost when students miss classes on the day before and after a holiday. A committee has been set up to consider the ruling and is presently working with faculty members to consider a change.

A revision of the "Who's Who" selection procedure was passed through Senate, raising the scholastic requirements

"The selection process was made so that fewer grade slips-ups will be made in the future," Miss Kaminis said

The Senate investigation committee aroused considerable student interest in Smoke Signals, the FSU literary magazine The proposed bill called for abolishing the magazine next year The Senate head said she felt that the investigation was benifical, even though the bill failed to pass. She felt that as a result possible changes will be made in the magazine's content

An honor committee was set up working with a similar cabinet committee. This group was responsible for conducting the honor poll.

Other accomplishments include the purchase of Junior Counselor keys by student government, conducting safety campaigns prior to holidays and semester breaks, and sending of several senators to inter-collegiate conferences throughout the year.

Senate also reviewed execution of laws by the executive head, the student body president, and sent letters to the State Board of Control requesting that the sophomore car ban be listed.

It recommended that improved heating and cooling systems be provided on the Westcott auditorium stage and in the men's gymnasium

A Campus Christmas Carol Sing has been suggested for next year on Landis Green.

"We have had wonderful cooperation from Dean of Men Donald Loucks, chairman of the faculty review committee," Miss Kaminis said, "as well as from Dean of Students R R Oglesby and Business Manager Rod Shaw."

25 Arrested

Gators Get Grabbed; Hold Six-Hour Riot

Over 1000 University of Florida students took part in a six-hour riot on campus Saturday night which resulted in the serious injury of one policeman and the arrest of 25 rioters.

The riot, second of the weekend, came as a result of a recent crackdown by Alachua County law enforcement officers on near-campus taverns, which traditionally sold beer to all university students regardless of age

Beginning at 10:30 p. m in front of the bars along University Avenue on the campus' northern edge the riot spread to many parts of the campus and lasted more than five hours.

Buddy Williams a campus policeman, suffered several deep cuts about his face when he was hit with a coke bottle shortly before the riot was quelled.

Police used tear gas to end the rioting

Chanting "We want beer, we want beer" the students moved from one point on campus to another. Both men and women participated, according to Gainesville Police Chief W. D Joiner.

Joiner said that the riot became vicious in its waning hours as men from fraternity houses and dormitories joined it

Several Gainesville policemen reported minor injuries in fighting the rioters.

Twenty-five students were arrested on charges of inciting to riot and unlawful assembly. The former charge is a felony. Several of the students arrested were also charged with assault and battery disorderly conduct, and the use of profanity.

University authorities have indicated that they will let the civil authorities handle the cases. They were given adequate warnings, Dr. J. Wayne Reitz, president of the University, told newsmen.

Each student was held on $500 bond. The prisoners were held in the county jail

The riot reached its peak about 3 30 a m. Sunday morning, according to eyewitness reports After Williams was knocked out with the coke bottle, the fight seemed to go out of the students the reports continued.

A Farewell Editorial

Editor's Note: It is a Flambeau tradition that the graduating editor writes a farewell editorial in the last issue of the year. Here Charlet Poitevint gives her impressions of Florida State University after four years as a student and a Flambeau staffer.

Ordinarily farewell editorials in this newspaper heve been written with the intent of evalueting the university— of criticizing the bad points, lauding its good ones, and making predictions for the future.

However, a task of this sort overwhelms this editor.

It is impossible for me to express my feelings toward the experiences I heve gained et FSU without showing signs of sentimentalism, nostalgia, and gratitude.

I DO NOT BELIEVE FSU is e greet university. But I have faith thet it will become a great university within a few shert yeers. It really can't miss although a few factors—a streak of anti-intellectualism and remnents of FSCW—are holding it back.

The equipment is here, however. We have the physical plert to house us and excellent leaders to guide us. We are blessed with outstanding faculty members who make learning en exciting challenge. There is an "air of excitement" here which only needs to be dug from its isoleted corners end spreed over the campus.

We are very lucky to heve e very fine President with the ebility to mold e greet university out of the basic qualifications we possess. His ideals should inspire every faculty member and every student to make FSU e place for academic growth, as well as one for growth of the individual personality.

But we heve plenty of opportunities for personel growth too. Student leeders on this campus ere given the chance to play an important role in university policy-making. Administretors such as Dean Oglesby displey tremendous faith in studente end there are professors and deans who put the student's welfere foremost in their minds.

IT IS UP to the students to live up to this faith. Sometimes we succeed; sometimes we don't do so well. At this time of the year one of the most frequent comments heard from greduating seniors is. "I wish I had studied more."

Professors need not be despondent because etudents neglect their classroom duties. and perhaps, students should feel so much regret at not taking edventege of all their learning opportunities.

IF THE PROFESSOR hes fertilized the student's mind just a little, if he has presented eny kind of a challenge, the student's desire for learning will manifest itself long after graduation and influnce him throughout his life.

I am grateful to heve been exposed to some very inspiring people since I came here four years ago, quite innocent of what college really meant. Knowing such people has been an invaluable experience to me and has influenced me personally perheps more then my ecademic endeavors.

To name them ell would be to repeat a great many on the list of my cohort, Jim McIntre. But a few will stand out for something special: Dean Oglesby for his kindness end understanding, Dr. Paul Piccard for curing me of illusions of white supremacy, Dr. Ben Rogers. Dr. Jackson Ice, Dr. James Prothro, and my old Flambeau boss Martin Dyckmen for sheer intellectual stimuletion, Miss Merthe Cobb for meking Gilchrist more like home than any other dormitory in which I lived.

LIKE MOST STUDENTS who heve devoted meny hours to en extra-curricular activity, I feel that e great deal of my educetion came from the Flambeau.

While not trying to advertise, the Flambeau can be quite interesting and educational. This year we have not copped the honors received previously, but I think we have done the job we set out to do: to put out a newapaper for the students and the college community.

We have tried to present issues and encourege controversy between our reeders. I only regret that circumstences made it impossible in one instence of reporting the news.

This is not my philosophy, nor Flambeau policy, but on e college paper e newapaper's function is not the same as a city paper's. A college paper has duties to concerns other than publishers, and when it is in the best interest of those personelly involved our policy has been not to publicize.

IF I THOUGHT this was the time for criticism, I might attack my only pet peeve—women's rules. The philosophy of those who formulate the policies pertaining to women is to me. and to a great number of my classmates, outdated, provincial, and Victorian.

Women students at FSU mature in spite of the reguletions. not beceuse of them. College students should not live in an unrealistic society. The college community should expose the student to life, not protect him from it.

I am very optimistic, however, end predict a chenge elong these lines within a short time, so there is no need to go into detail.

I THINK ALL seniore have approximately the same feelings along about this time of their college careers, so I need not express them. Sooner or later each student will suffer the same pangs of having to leave the security of the college cempus.

I can only repeat the trite phrase—it was quite en experience.

Tells Why He Left Sports Desk

Today marks my third paper as official managina editor. and believe me it feels strenge working on the news side of the paper after three years of sports.

In fact it gives me the feeling of beine somewhat of a traitor Oh. occasionally I would substitute for the previous menaging editor when he was out of town and hendle the make-up. but I alwaya knew I'd return to the sports page

BUT NOW it's strictly news I remember all the insults from the people of the news side about our page being the first one done end off to the printers.

And. of eourse. it was always the first page to be proofed about 5:30 p. m. or 6 00 end I would always make it a point to say goodnight to those still working on the paper. From what I understand, occasionally they wouldn't get through until after 7:30. or sometimes later.

So now the shoe is on the other foot—it's my turn to look at the sports staff leave early while I'm still up to my ears working with the printers.

BY THE TIME this column is reed I may be having my first discussion with a dissatisfied customer. Thera are times when empty apace is abundant and everything goes in: however, I'm sure the times will be many when our ever aggressive advertising staff will outdo themselves and give me some very tieht (loaded with ads) pages.

That's when the fun begins. or should I say the arguments start. And I hate to say I'm sure there will be some.

THERE IS A LITTLE saying on the Flambeau wall (we have more than one because we have a very clever staff) which reads — all the news thet fits . . . we print!' But let me assure all ye that desire publicity, that is not the ease

The selection is based on timeliness end newsworthiness, with nn favoritism So if you're not satisfied. you want more for your money and you've got an axe to grind, don't deley' run' do not welk to 213 Longmire (our hineout) and let's araue

By now someone might be wonderine why I deserted the sports page and switched over to the news

You see, the pay is higher.

Prof Gives Him Crying Towel

By LAWRENCE PERKINS

GREETINGS— and goodbye! (Hail and farewell, to those in the classics department)

I just got back from a conference with my faculty advisor. Dr. Baird Fengs He gave me the loveliest cryina towel I ever saw It is lavender, and the designs and intertwined letters are in pink embroidery.

He gave it to me because we were talking about my final examination schedule. It seems that because I am a graduating senior, all of my final exems fall between the 22nd and the 25th—all of them. No exemptions (well, almost none), no boning up time. no nothina.

"YOU SEE," he said. settling his glasses on his nose, "with undergraduates in the English Department. it is fairly certain that we are dealing with students who will come back next term even if they flunk a few little courses here and there. Causes a lot of red tape—need more class cards at reaistration, take up more classroom space, have to have more copies of the Flambeau printed — if we don't get them on through. All sorts of thinga Have to give the students a chence, you see. Give them a chance."

I had to admit that it sounded logical. "But what about us graduating seniors," I asked timidly.

"Aha!" he chortled, and the sunlight gleamed on his spectacles. "With the graduating senior its different. There you have a group of students who have sent out invitations. had their names in the home town papers and the Flambeau, and gotten a set of silver teaspoons from their maiden aunt. Do you think for a minute that they will be back after they flunk?"

I THOUGHT ABOUT my box of silver teaspoons from Aunt Emily. "No sir, I don't suppose so."

"Good. Then you understand." He flashed his spectacles at me again.

"But sir, what about the science majors They exempt their finals if . . ."

"Science majors are important," he said, firmly closing the door.

My roommate Plutarch P. Pentameter has no such problems. His older brother Petrarch P. Pentameter put him wise, end he is majoring in micropalaeobotany. Just before he gaily skipped out to ascertain how many college degrees there are in University Circle, he tossed me a copy of a graduation poem he wrote for the occasion:

VILLANELLE OF THE
SENIOR CLASS

For us, the class of nineteen fifty-eight,
A day of laughter, happy smiles and grins,
Today is time! Today we graduate!

So put the books away. Luxuriate
At end of quizzes, papers, aspirins
For us. the class of nineteen fifty-eight.

We take the final sum; evaluate
The years of academic discipline—
Today is time! Today we graduate!

Each senior face should glow and radiate.
A world has ended, but a world begins
For us, the class of ninteen fifty-eight

For each of us a busy future waits,
And endings here are other origins.
Today is time! Today we graduate!

Pronounce the solemn baccalaureate
And send us forth like noble palladins!
For us. the class of nineteen fifty eight,
Today is time! Today we graduate!

Opera Performance Good In Many Ways

By DIXON REDDITT

The performances of La Boheme last Friday and Saturday were both so good in so many different ways that everyone was frankly surprised and rediantly happy.

The annual opera at FSU (and other schools, here and about) usually is good experience for the performers, but hardly an artistic triumph. Added to this doubtful recommendation, was the fact that the dress rehearsals had not been all sweetness and light. However, in the performences almost everyone buckled down and there were the moments of downright pleasurable delight not found in a "usual" performance. Of course, there are always those other moments.

It was interesting to note the not so subtle variations in the interpretations of the principal roles (Friday night, Martha King, Elbert Aldridge. Patty McCarty, and Saturday, Shirley Paonessa, Martin Leis, Ethel Donaldson.) Friday night, after a hesitant orchestral opening. the cast stormed on with more confidence than we have seen in some time. The audience was completely devastated King-Aldridge generated a great deal of dedicated intensity which culminated in a high "c" at the end of the first act. Moreover this mood was communicated to the pit orchestra and there were a few great moments of togetherness.

Friday night the orchestra had not yet found all the right notes. (well, not Saturday night either, although there were more of them) but this did not stop the general brilliant effect. Before we leave the orchestra (never to return in this article.) let us praise (to the sky) the hornina artistry of Miss Olivia Worley; such ridiculously good and accurate playing

Saturday night we heard a more lyric. less exciting Mimi and Rodolfo who explored the less obvious nuance of the parts. One example of this difference will suffice. in the fourth act, Miss King reserved her traditional coughing for one mighty whoop just before she "passed on," while in the same scene Miss Paonesse, remained thoroughly tubercular, even coughina in the midst of melodic lines. Both portrayels taken in the broad view were effective and authentic. just different. Both Rudolfo's seemed to have the same feeling about Mimi's, but Ethel Donaldson with her more brash Musetta might have fit better on Friday, but this is conjecture.

This is the first time we have heard principals and supporting players here really project in anything like a true operatic style; they could be heard almost all the time, which is as much as can be said for singers in the Met. Lonnie Keene, Steve Kleid, Wesley Chesnut were almost unfailing in their characterizations. Each played a very valuable part in carrying the plot along, and Kleid's coat song in the last act was one of the nicest little bits in the opera.

There are so many facets of this huge production which deserve nothing but praise, from the excellent lighting effects end stage sets which were suggestive of the mood of the entire opera. The weakest part of the production was the chorus. A little more rehearsal might have resulted in a performance closer to the intentions of the composer.

The large portion of the evening was a credit to the hard work of Producer-Director, Richard Collins and Conductor, Robert Sedore.

People Make College Years Interesting

By JIM McINTYRE

It's been a long four years. It's been discouraging and challenging and inspiring and perspiring and exasperating and enjoyable.

When you look back over it, you wonder what you have learned. You wonder if some of the A's should have been ... and vice-versa. You wonder if grades are any indication of ... you have learned.

YOU WONDER IF it has been worth the time and money, considering all the time you have goofed off when ... could have been learning. and you can't quite come to ... conclusion.

There are things you wish you had done end things ... wish you hadn't done. There are people you are glad you ... and some you almost wish you hadn't run into.

There are several negative things about Florida State University that one feels obligated to point out. but many positive things must be said also.

ON THE NEGATIVE side of the ledger are those things ... some people are working slowly to correct.

There are the leadership honoraries, who honor student accomplishment, but many times honor only student friends.

There are the rather decadent women's rules. which ... develop a mature woman graduate without giving her an opportunity to make a decision of her own without serious consequences.

THERE IS THE lack of interest in things academic on ... part of the general student body and the lack of init... shown by many professors.

There is the lack of contact with the other academic community in Tallahassee end the resultant lack of understand...

And there is the overbalance amount of money spent ... athletics where students are primarily spectators.

BUT WITH ALL that, these years at FSU have been ... with good things, too.

There is the beautiful campus that shines in comparison with other universities you visit.

There is the attitude among most of the students and faculty members that "We may not have arrived. but we're g... there"

There is the contagious charm of the school which has ... a phenomenal reverse-adjustment to coeducation.

AND THERE ARE the people who go to make up the ... versity, both faculty and students. They have been the ... memorable parts of the entire experience

There is Dr. Robert M (Bullet Bob) Strozier. who has g... the university an opportunity to lift its head end gain a ... perspective; who has mede the administration a part of ... everyday life of the campus. rather than something you ... read about.

There is Dr. Marian Irish. who teaches her students a ... about constitutional law and foreign policy. but teaches ... more about life.

There is Dr. Anna Forbes Liddell, who teaches concern ... ultimates and the ability to make a joke of any adversity

AND DR. JACKSON ICE. who has been severely crit... for making students think about their religion. but who nevertheless continues to lead them down a pathway that inc... thinking as a part of religious experience.

There is Dr Elston Roady. an humble and devout man ... has had no student leave his classes without being much m... aware of some of the realities of power politics.

And Dr James Prothro, the crew-cut author of a well-kn... book who always seems to have time for a sly comment w... sly grin to a student.

AND DR. VINCENT THURSBY. who teaches political th... and European government, but goes beyond these fields to ... students a respect for education and the new vistas to be f... within the covers of great books.

And Dean Louis Shores of the Library School, who is ... much as anyone. interested in the academic growth of Flo... State University.

There is Dr Lynette Thompson, who taught me human... 101 quite some time ago, but whose respect for the clas... cultures I shall never forget.

AND ALLAN THOMPSON. who pulled me through a seme... of humanities with a reasonable lace of pain and who has c... tinued to provoke me to some thought in conversations ...

And Dr. Weymouth T. Jordan, who taught me a respect ... the culture of the old South: and Dr. George Lensen w... despite my adversity to Chinese names, managed to instill me a respect for a culture much older than ours.

There is Vice-president A. B. Martin, the man with ... budgetary headaches who always has time for a smile and greeting in a Texas drawl.

Two Parties Merge

DEAR STUDENTS,

Heving realized the likeness of ideals and the determination to reach the same goals, the Collegiate and University Parties have jointed forces. This will insure a prompt and effective realization of a strong two party system at Florida State University that has not existed before.

The long sought after voting strength needed to capsize the presently dominant group now lies in the NEW COLLEGIATE PARTY. However ... does not mean that the ... is over, rather the work ... just begun.

We hope that you, the students, will take an active interest in this new step toward greater Student Government.

Sincerely yours,
BRUCE BROWN,
Collegiate Party Chairman

Baseballers Record 20-5 Season

Best Athletes Hard To Pick

According to tradition, in the final issue of the year, the [Flam]beau sports department presents its choices for the year's athlete in each sport in the FSU athletic program.

Not being anxious to strike out on new paths, we would like to go along with custom and present our choices for the top athletes. We will probably get some argument on our selections, but since there is no other organization on campus to make the choices, we'll offer ours.

Although the football team did have some good moments such as holding a strong Miami eleven to seven points the first half and scoring on the nation's number one team, Auburn, the Seminoles finished with their first losing season under Tom Nugent.

From here, the outstanding football player was Bob Nellums. Nellums was the team's leading scorer for the second consecutive year. He started off the season playing terrific ball at the end position. Then at mid-season he was switched to fullback and did an equally good job.

RHAM A SPARKPLUG

The choice in basketball was tough, but we finally decided on Hugh Durham, the flashy junior guard who won this honor last year.

Junior college transfer Burt Deckle, who was the high scorer this season, pushed Durham for the pick, but we feel Hugh played the role of team sparkplug.

In gymnastics, the nod goes to the big "Swede," Larry Malmlin. Malmlin was the high point scorer for Hartley Price's squad this season. We are sorry to note that Malmlin will not return in the fall.

Ken Abbott, the Birmingham freestyler, is our nomination in swimming. Heading one of the best swim teams in FSU's history, Abbott set the school records in the 50 and 100 yard freestyle and won those events consistently all season.

WO IN BASEBALL

For the third year in the row, we have chosen two places in baseball. No one will doubt that Frank Slusser, the senior righthander who pitched FSU's first no-hitter and finished the season with a 8-0 mark, should be chosen for the baseball honor.

We feel however, that senior centerfielder Owen McCarron cannot be overlooked. The little speedster played four years of varsity ball and finished this season with a .365 batting average to lead the team.

During the year, he also broke the stolen base record. It was hard for us to pass up such men as Jack Bristol and Gerry Philp who turned in outstanding performances all season.

By playing below-par golf most of the season, Bob Shave gets the nod for top linkster. Shave, a junior, finished fifth in the Southern Intercollegiate tourney and was low scorer for the Seminoles during the season with a 72 average.

In tennis, another repeat, Lex Hester. No doubt Coach Keith [Bedf]ord will miss Hester next year as Hester has been the one or two man for the past two seasons.

RACK WAS TOUGH

Choosing the top men from the greatest track season in [FSU history] was like trying to split a hair with an axe. We finally [picked] two for top honors, seniors Mike Conley and Jerry Henderson.

Jim Casteel who was the top individual scorer during the season and Jack Terwilliger, senior dashman, were also considered for the honor. But since Conley and Henderson were both seniors and they both were consistent all year, we chose them.

Conley, probably the best collegiate distance man in the state was undefeated in the mile and two-mile this season. He holds the school mark in both events and has not been beaten in a dual-meet-mile in two years.

Henderson bounced into the public spotlight with his tremendous javelin throws. He set the school record at 217'5" and also won first place in tough competition in the Penn Relays.

We would have liked to pick at least three for top athlete of the year, but again, according to custom, we had to settle for one. There were so many outstanding performances during the year, that it was perhaps the hardest decision ever made.

After much debating and evaluating of merits we made our [choice] for the top athlete of the year—Frank Slusser.

EMINOLES GO AGAIN

Well it looks as if time is the only element between the Seminole baseball team and its third straight bid to the District Three playoffs in Gastonia, N. C., next month.

Danny Litwhiler's squad finished the regular season with a 20-5 record. The at-large bid is expected within the next few days.

From almost anyone's viewpoint, the Seminoles are the team to get the bid.

At the tourney, the Tribe will have to wade through some very tough competition. They will meet the top teams from the Atlantic Coast Conference, the Southern Conference and the Southeastern Conference.

At this stage of the game, it looks like either Clemson or Duke will represent the ACC. It might be West Virginia from the Southern Conference, but the SEC representative is still a slight question mark.

The usual representative is the team that wins the SEC title. This year it was won by Auburn, but the Tigers cannot play in post-season games as the result of a penalty imposed by the NCAA.

The runnerup team, the champs. in the Western division of the SEC was Alabama. But the Crimson Tide denied the chance to go to the tourney. That left the runnerup in the Eastern division, the next logical choice.

OW ABOUT IT GATORS?

That team happens to be the Florida Gators. Word comes from Gainesville that the Gators will have to vote among themselves if they want to accept the bid.

There is not much doubt in our minds that the Gators will accept the chance to go to Gastonia. The guess seems even more valid since the Florida coach Dave Fuller was over here scouting the Seminoles in their games against the Georgia Teachers.

If the Tribe and the Gators do get into the playoffs there is bound to be fireworks. Twice during the regular season Florida dumped the Seminoles but we feel the Tribe will take the Gators at tourney time.

No-Hit Game, Eight Victories Highlight Slusser's Best Year

A no-hit game and a record of 8-0 were highlights of Frank Slusser's senior year and became the basis for his selection as Florida State's Athlete of the Year.

Slusser, a righthander, won his eighth game of the season against the Georgia Teachers, Saturday. The win enabled Slusser to become the first FSU pitcher ever to win eight games in a season.

On April 18, Frank became the first FSU hurler to pitch a no-hit ball game as he held the Miami Hurricanes at bay. In the game, he struck out eight batters, including the last three in the ninth inning.

Slusser's eight wins include victories over Stetson, Miami (2), Auburn, Notre Dame, Wisconsin, Florida Southern and the Georgia Teachers.

FANNED 54

Out of the Tribe's last 14 games, Slusser pitched in seven of them. He struck out 54 men during the season, walking only 16. In 67 1/3 innings, Frank allowed 46 hits and 18 runs.

His earned run average was one of the lowest in the school's history, a sparkling 1.80.

Being named top athlete of the year is nothing new for Frank as he received that honor during his senior year of high school. During that same year he pitched two no-hitters, but he never thought he would get one in college.

Slusser's worth as a pitcher did not come to the surface until this season. As a member of the FSU frosh he had a 5-1 mark.

In his sophomore year Slusser did not pitch much and did not get any record. Last year he was 2-1 pitching behind Jack Bristol and Jerry Boxer.

At the beginning of this year he was one of the big question marks on the Seminole nine but after his two victories in the Florida State Invitational Tournament, Litwhiler began to work him more often.

The Nescopeck, Pa., senior stands 5-10 and weighs about 170. Despite his size, his "bread and butter" pitch is a blazing fast ball.

Slusser also possesses a sharp breaking curve and was throwing a palm ball some this past season. According to Slusser, his secret of success is keeping the ball low.

"Whatever pitch I throw, I always try to keep it low," said Frank. "My father always taught me to keep the ball low and since I've been here Coach Litwhiler has been telling me the same thing."

Slusser has not been approached directly by any major league team, but several clubs have showed interest. The Pittsburgh Pirates have followed him since his high school days.

Tourney Bid Due Within 48 Hours

By FRANK RAMOS

Florida State's baseballers closed out their regular season with a 20-5 record as they pasted the Georgia Teachers last weekend, 15-10 and 17-3.

By virtue of their winning record, the Seminoles expect the at-large bid from the NCAA Committee for the District Three Playoffs within 48 hours.

The Tribe received the bid for the past two seasons and this season they have the best record of any independent in the district. The playoffs will be held in Gastonia, N. C. the beginning of next month.

The winner of the playoffs will go to the College World Series to be held in Omaha, Neb. around the middle of June.

The Tribe set a school record for consecutive wins when they notched their eleventh and twelfth straight victories against the Teachers.

20 HITS

Frank Slusser nailed down his eighth win of the year Saturday against no losses as the Seminoles rapped out 20 hits, including four triples, and a pair of home runs to route the Professors, 17-3.

Slusser pitched the middle three innings allowing two runs on four hits. Senior lefthander Jack Bristol started for the Tribe and gave up one unearned run and only one hit in his three inning stint.

Tommy Garcia, who is ineligible for any post season games, kept the Profs in check for two innings and struck out three to bring his lifetime strikeout total to a record high of 161. He also slammed a bases-empty home run.

Leading the hit parade for the State nine was Mike Copps with two triples and a single in four appearances. Copps came within one RBI of the FSU record of 28 when he drove across three runs.

Closing out his FSU baseball career, Owen McCarron, the team's leading hitter, and holder of the stolen base record, rapped out two singles. McCarron, like Garcia, is ineligible for any post season games because he played ball as a member of the freshman team.

Johnny Sheppard, making his last home appearance, knocked out two hits in five appearances. Rudy Eigle, another senior appearing at home for the last time, struck out two in a one inning relief job.

Other seniors putting on their last performance for the home fans were all-American shortstop Dick Howser who got two RBI's with a single and a triple; Gerry Philp had a single and scored three runs.

Fred Kenney, usually a reliefer, went all the way Friday night as the Seminoles pounded out 13 hits off three Georgia Teachers to romp past the Professors, 15-10.

KENNEY WINS

Kenney spaced nine hits over the route as he struck out 10 and walked four to even his season's record at 2-2. He only allowed four earned runs.

Howser got the Seminoles off to a good start, when he belted his second inside the park home run of the season, to score three runs and put the Tribe ahead for keeps.

A home run by Copps gave him a share of the team leadership in that department.

Litwhiler sent six substitutes into the game in the seventh and eighth innings. One of them, reserve leftfielder Gene McCormick rapped out two hits in two trips to the plate.

Others to get two hits apiece were Philp, Bill Westendick, and Koch.

Remaining copies of the 1958 Tally-Ho, about 3,700 of them, are arriving in allotments of 600 a day, according to Evie Morris, editor.

The first shipment of 600 was delivered Thursday afternoon 11 days early, and was distributed Friday. Students who have not yet picked up their books may do so from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the Longmire Student Lounge.

The '58 Tally-Ho's may also be claimed in the fall.

Over 100 copies of last year's annual are waiting in the Lounge to be picked up, said Dr. Reid Montgomery, publications advisor. These are reserved books which purchasers have neglected to claim. Presentation of ID cards will be necessary to claim them.

Collegiate, UP Join Forces

As a result of several combined meetings this week, Collegiate and University Party officials have combined their political forces into one organization.

This action was taken on the basis of the realization that "party ideals and goals were similar and that, by joining forces, neither would have to sacrifice its basic goals but would be able to achieve its ultimate objective faster and more effectively," according to Collegiate Party Chairman Bruce Brown and University Chairman Gene Caruthers.

The executive committee of the combined parties has named Caruthers to the post of acting vice-chairman, replacing Kip Tehenor, who will not return to school next fall.

"As it is the aim of both parties to see a strong two-party system at FSU, this move will give the new Collegiate Party a majority of student votes," the two declared.

"My aim is that members of both groups will see the beneficial gain in this move and will seek only to operate harmoniously," Caruthers said.

"The whole student body will gain from this development through greater check and balance of student government at FSU," Brown stated.

SECRETARY OF FINANCE JACK TAYLOR'S big smile is probably one of relief, as he has finally finshed the big job of working out next year's Student Government Budget.

Says Therapist

Jazz Is Not Cure, But Functional Aid

By DONALD E. MICHEL

(Editor's Note: This is a continuation of the last in a series on jaaa and its place in the academic curriculum. Mr. Michel is the director of the FSU music therapy program and is an assistant professor in the School of Music.)

As a Music Therapist and a frequent participant in both jazz and symphonic type performing groups (I play base frequently with Professor Glotzbach's "G-Bach Quintet," and am a member of the University String quartet as well as participant in the University Symphony). I am interested in jazz as well as many other types of music.

In the first capacity (Music Therapist) I am greatly interested in the function of music for mankind, for Music Therapy may be defined as the employment of these functional values of music as the media through which a Music Therapist carries out specific treatment aims for patients. The music itself does not "cure" but it can be an influential "tool" in the hands of skilled therapists, under proper medical guidance, to form "therapeutic relationships with patients: for example, in helping a mentally ill person to regain confidence in himself and to better face his problems.

Jazz, as I think of it, with its primary basis in movement-provoking rhythms, and through its typical kind of medium of performance, i.e., relatively small, informal groups, offers many functional possibilities for use in Music Therapy. Within a small, improvising jazz group, there are many opportunities to exploit the possibilities for "non-verbal" communication between performers. Much in the form of general mood-tone, or feeling, can be expressed between members of such a group in their solo "breaks" as well as in their ensemble playing.

"BELONGINGNESS"

Then, there is the opportunity to build a group feeling, a "belongingess" feeling, among members of the jazz group, which is often important in therapy, especially for the mentally ill. Even in physical illnesses, the feeling of isolation from the main stream of living is experienced by the sick person. music—often jazz—can help alleviate this feeling, to relate the sick one back to the main stream of living.

An outstanding value of all music, expressiveness, can be realized easily in jazz. The chance to objectify, to "channelize" one's feelings — hostile, aggressive, guilty — whatever they may be, can be provided in music, and is especially available in jazz performance, as well as in just listening to jazz. It is easy to see how jazz, as one form, style, or type of music, can be functional—not only as a "tool" in Music Therapy, but in everyday living.

SUPPORTS PMA

There is much more that could be asid about jazz, and certainly much more about Music Therapy. The purpose of my speaking out at this time, however, is to support the performance and study of jazz (as a part of all music) on this campus. The "lab band" concert is a beginning, and one opportunity for many to observe at first hand the creative efforts of other fellow students, as well as the functional values of jazz.

This concert serves a very functional purpose in another way, and one which I heartily endorse, and that is to support the efforts of the campus professional music fraternity, Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia. This group contributes much to campus life, the highlight of which is the annual Campus Sing, in which everyone has a chance to participate. Phi Mu Alpha and the Lab Band deserve the support of everyone—as they give everyone a chance to "live a little" just before "dead week."

Finance Head

Taylor Explains Budget Allotment

Student government funds for the Theatre Da[nce] Group will be appropriated when a "definite, for[mal] commitment for next year's dance program is recei[ved,"] Secretary of Finance Jack Taylor said yesterday.

Taylor, referring to the elimination of the dance group from its usual place on the student government budget, said that funds will be allocated early next year if the group complies with the request.

The group was left off the budget as presented to Student Senate for failure to present any prospectus for next year's activities.

Kaye, Band Entertained By KS, AXiD

The Kappa Sigs played host to Sammy Kaye, famed band leader; Sandi Summers, currently appearing with the "Swing and Sway" band; and Manny Mathews, Mr. Kaye's manager Saturday night at the Kappa Sigma house.

Among the many guests present were four officers of the Theta Chi fraternity.

Mr. Kaye commented upon the fine interfraternity spirit displayed at the banquet. He mentioned that the Kappa Sig house was one of the finest frat houses he had ever seen, if not one of the finest in the nation.

• • •

Sammy Kaye's dance band members were entertained by Alpha Xi Delta sorority Saturday night with a bar-be-que in the back yard of the sorority house.

"The 'Swing and Swayers' really entertained us," exclaimed an Alpha Xi. "We even sang for them, too," she said.

The band remained with the sorority for a social hour until time to play at the dance.

• • •

Delta Delta Delta sorority members presented faculty members shiny, red apples as favors at their annual faculty brunch which was held Saturday at 11 a.m.

The brunch, which gave Tri-Delts and faculty members a chance to meet informally, out of the classroom, was attended by about 40 FSU faculty members.

• • •

The Delta Gammas held their annual Senior Banquet, honoring all their seniors, at the Tallahassee Dining Room last night.

Sue Shives was recognized as being the most outstanding senior to the sorority.

Following the reading of the 1958 class will the seniors presented a gift to the chapter.

Members of DG sorority who recently received honors are Deanne Guthrie and Doxie O'Neil who were tapped for Phi Kappa Phi, national scholastic honorary; and Judy Abrams, recipient of the Merck Chemistry Award, which is given to the two most outstanding chemistry students in each college.

Miss Abrams also recently received the Alpha Lambda Delta award for having the highest scholastic average in her class for four years.

Pay Checks Face New Deductions

Salaries of all university employees will be deducted for social security and the state retirement fund, the state comptroller's office told the university this week.

The deductions will affect all graduate and student assistants and other employees of the university. It will not affect the faculty.

Four cents from every dollar will be taken for the retirement fund and two and one fourth from each dollar will go for social security.

When an employee vacates a position, he may reclaim his contribution to the state retirement fund.

Deductions will begin July 1. Formerly student and graduate assistants were considered temporary employees and were exempt from deductions for these two funds.

The new policy was put into effect because of administrative difficulties with the old one, the comptroller's office stated. The new policy is allowed under laws passed by the 1957 legislature.

Music Educator's National Conference (MENC) will meet at 7 tonight in the Choral Room of the Music Building.

Business and plans for the coming year will be discussed.

FSU Integration Likely Under U.S. Court Order, Governor Collins Predicts

LeRoy Collins has pre-ed that the Board of Control lift racial restrictions on cants to the FSU graduate now that the U.S District has enjoined the Universi- Florida from restricting ad- on to white persons.

Federal Judge Dozier A. De- handed down the order here ing the Board of Control enforcing any policy, cus- or usage in the graduate of the state that have usly denied admission to es.

UP TO BOARD

Attorney General Ralph Odom said, however, that the Board of Control de- to open the doors of the graduate school to Negroes. separate suit will have to be to do so.

Judge DeVane's order appar- is not binding on the Board Control where admissions at undergraduate level are con-

'SEE NO REASON'

Gov Collins said in a Wednes- press conference: "I can see reason why Florida cannot ex- to obey the court's order difficulty."

To suggest anything to the ary is a reflection upon the will, mature judgment and pride of Florida citizens the men and women who prise the student bodies, the ties and the alumni of our universities."

Desegregation at the graduate has already been carried out number of Southern states out serious incident. Gov. ns said The governor also ed out that in 1955, the da Supreme Court held that is no legal basis for racial gation at the University of da Law School.

NINE-YEAR FIGHT

The Wednesday order by the court climaxed a nine-year drive by the National As- tion for the Advancement of red People to have Negroes itted to the all-white univer-

Gov Collins said Attorney Gen ard Ervin had exhausted legal means to prevent admission of Negro Virgil Hawkins to the University of Florida based on his lack of qualifications regardless of race.

'NO ALTERNATIVE'

Judge DeVane's order "was a very realistic one in view of the fact that he had no alternative except to follow the decision by the Fifth Federal Circuit Court of Appeals and the U.S. Supreme Court." Ervin said in a prepared statement.

The attorney general noted that in a memorandum opinion with the order, Judge DeVane said.

"The court recognizes that the defendants (university officials) have full and complete statutory authority to regulate admissions to the University of Florida and act in emergencies to avoid public mischief and to take necessary steps as will as provide for the orderly and peacable administration of the university."

SELF EXPLANATORY

"I think the order speaks for itself," said Dr. J. Wayne Reitz, president of the University of Florida. "Any specific comment would involve policy which I would want to discuss with the Board of Control."

Dr. J. Broward Culpepper, executive director of the Board of Control, said "The Board of Control in good faith will comply with the order.

In his news conference, Gov. Collins said he doubted that the decision handed down by Judge LeVane would be appealed. He said he didn't think an appeal would be advisable because the goals sought in the NAACP suit were much broader than those granted.

To bring the matter before an appellate court might mean another order with which it would be more difficult to comply.

Sen. Randolph Hodges of Cedar Key, a strong segregation supporter, took issue with the decision He called the order "a foot in the door that will lead, and soon, to the complete integration of our school system."

The senator's suggestion that a special session of the Florida Legislature be called in further attempts to maintain segregation at the Gainesville university was refused by Gov. Collins. "I have no intention of calling a special session, the governor declared.

Hodges said: "I believe we have enough votes to call ourselves into special session. I think we shoud do it, or we'll wake up some morning and find all our schools integrated."

The secretary of state must call the Legislature into special session upon petition of three-fifths of the membership of each house of the lawmaking body.

No one would estimate how many Negroes might apply for admission to the University of Florida this fall. The only Negro who has said he will attempt to enroll in the university law school is Virgil Hawkins, 50, of Daytona Beach who filed the original action in 1949 seeking entrance to the school.

He came to FSU in 1949 as an instructor in English and in 1952 was appointed director of the Bootstrap program at Eglin Air Force Base In 1954 he became director of the same program at Ramey AF Base in Puerto Rico. In 1956 he returned to Tallahassee to become assistant director of the entire FSU Bootstrap program

Equipment Value At $1,000,000

Nearly a million dollars worth of office machines are being used here during a three-week workshop on use of the machines which will continue through July 3.

This workshop is the first of this type ever held in Florida, William A Richards, assistant professor of business education, said. He is in charge.

One of the machines to be used is the IBM 650 computor which has just been installed at FSU.

Dr. Cottingham Is Guest Prof

Harold F. Cottingham, professor of education at Florida State University, will be a member of the guest faculty at the University of Southern California School of Education during the 1956 summer session, June 23-August 1, and post-season, August 4-30

Navy Research Gives Grant For Study

Florida State University announced a new grant of $29.825 from the Office of Naval Research for investigations of molecular energy levels directed by Dr Michael Kasha, professor of chemistry.

The grant brings to $103.116 the total research funds committed to the project in five years by the ONR. The Air Research and Development Command of the Air Force has provided another $92.288 in the same period, bringing the total to $195.4004

More than 25 scientific papers have been published by the chemist and students who have worked with him on the fundamental studies in FSU's Spectroscopy Laboratory. Fourteen FSU alumni who have worked with him on the research now are in laboratories over the world. Many helped pay for their schooling here with earnings from the ONR and ARDC funds. Five post-doctoral associates and student assistants now aid in the research.

Most of the federal research funds have been allocated to salaries and research expenses. Out of the new grant the university will use $6500 for a new instrument in the research. This is a high speed recording near infrared spectrometer which will enable the researchers to probe into a spectral regions not previously searched for molecular electronic processes.

The research program in spectroscopy deals with fundamental problems in molecular energy studies, including energy levels of molecules, transfer of excitation energy and the interaction forces within molecules.

Novel Critics Criticized By English Prof

Critics of Cozzens' By Love Possessed have been either too "extravagant in their praise" or "too adverse in their criticism" said Dr Griffith Pugh, FSU English professor, Wednesday.

Conducting the first in a series of six book reviews to be held in Longmire Lounge each Wednesday at 4:30 p.m., Dr Pugh, who is the book review editor of the National English Journal, called the book neither a masterpiece or the greatest American novel in years. "I'm impressed with the realism of the novel and its rejection of sentimentality. At the same time, however, I found the book slow reading because of its long philosophical passages."

In the discussion of this controversial novel by James Gould Cozzens, Dr Pugh commented that the action of 49 hours was covered in 570 pages.

Next Wednesday's review will feature a report on Robert Browning by Dr. Hudson Rogers, professor of English.

Female University Political Science Head

Dr. Irish Makes Mark In A Man's (?) World

By Marjorie Buie and Laurie Hearin

In a supposed man's world a woman has definitely made her mark. Dr Marian D Irish of FSU is the only woman who is head of a University political science department in the United States.

Teaching such subjects as American Foreign Policy, American Government, International Government and Constitutional Law Dr Irish also writes books and articles. At present she is working on the biography of Supreme Court Justice William O Douglas. Some of her articles have appeared in such magazines as the Saturday Evening Post, the Statesman and the Journal of Politics.

LIKED SINCERITY

"I liked my professor at Bryn Mawr" was Dr. Irish's given reason for going into political science "His sincere interest encouraged me to enter this field" Among her other accomplishments, she is the president of the Southern Political Association and is one of the few women to be on the Executive Board of the American Political Science Association.

Aside from the field of political science, Dr. Irish said she is interested in "classical music, cocker spaniels and stamps." Foreign students have learned to recognize her when they have just received letters from home for she has a reputation as a "foreign stamp collector."

LEADER IN FIELD

Dr Irish is considered one of the foremost leaders in the field of political science and has received many honors. Among these are a Phi Beta Kappa key, and honorary membership in Garnet Key, a Crowles and Block Fellowship at Yale and she was a scholar in politics and economics at Bryn Mawr.

Dr. Irish requires the best of her students but because of her willingness to dedicate herself to her students, she was chosen by the faculty as the "distinguished professor of the year" at FSU.

Summer Registration Tally Shows 3,054 Enrollment

Total For Same Period Last Year Hit 2,710 High

Despite near sweltering heat of better than 90 degrees in the Women's Gym, 3,054 students have already registered for the summer session at FSU.

The beginning enrollment is the largest ever recorded for the FSU summer school. Last year at this time, 2,710 students had been enrolled.

Final registration last year climbed to 3,068, but Registrar Charles Walker predicted the final registration this year will probably reach an all time high of more than 3,300 summer students.

The number of students registered for three, six or eight week courses, doesn't include the estimated 507 summer campers on the campus to take part in programs such as Math Camp, Music Camp and Science Camp.

A breakdown of the registration figures shows that girls still have the edge on boys where dating prospects are concerned. There are 1,724 men and 1,330 women registered Graduate students total 1,129 to date.

Orientation for freshmen this summer was held Saturday when the students took a battery of tests as part of their entrance requirements at FSU. Orientation period during a regular semester lasts a week.

No More Dancing With Girls

Wild Past Revealed In Old Flambeau

By Ernestine Barley and Judy Allen

"DANCING WITH MEN TO BE PERMITTED SOON!!"

This almost daring headline appeared in a 1934 edition of the Flambeau. Wonder why? At this time FSU was strictly a women's college and the rules here did not permit dancing with males.

The first large milestone in FSU history came in 1909 when the name of the college was changed from Florida Female College to Florida State College for Women.

Reynolds Hall was the new dorm in 1912-13 and was equipped with all the latest conveniences—such as steam heat

14 YEAR OLD FRESHMAN

Appearing in the September 28, 1934, issue of the Flambeau was a feature about the youngest freshman to enter FSCW. Mary McKinney was only 14 years old when she came to college to major in Latin and English.

Katherine Rauls, whose swimming ability became internationally known, entered FSCW in 1936 At this time fencing was the most popular extra-curricular activity of the women students

Perhaps some alumnae will recall the old day when a butterscotch sundae could be bought for 15c Their daughters today aren't so lucky for prices have zoomed sky high

DEAD CATS WORTH 25c

Some grads may remember the days here when anyone who brought in a dead cat to the city office of Tallahassee would receive 25c.

Social life on campus in its early days? Mrs. Doris Temple, librarian, remembers that when she went to school the girls had to meet their dates in the lobby of Bryan Hall because there was no other place available. The recreation room was in Reynolds Hall and after dinner the girls would go there to dance with other girls.

'DORMS ARE SAME'

While wandering through the halls of her former dorm. Mrs. Temple stated. "the dormitory atmophere and school spirit are still the same." The change that caught her eye was the full length mirror placed at the end of each hall. Upon noticing the girls playing radios, doing homework, and even doing exercises on the floor she remarked. "I declare the girls still act the same as we did"

The college rules were still the same in 1946 as they were in 1926, but there were a few minor changes the following year when the men began to invade the newly formed co-educational university. That same year in December, fraternities came to Florida State University. At that time the membership was limited to thirty students.

LONG HEMS DISMAY MALES

Soon after the change from a women's college to a coed university long hem-lines appeared One 20-ribbon veteran remarked in an early Flambeau: "We go over and risk our lives only to come home to find that what we fought for has been covered up."

Perhaps in fifty years the present fight for bermudas will seem just as funny and absolete.

FSU PRESIDENT ROBERT M. STROZIER

Dr. Strozier Plans Continued Growth

Dr. Robert M. Strozier will round out his first year as president of FSU this summer by continuing planning of expansion of the University.

Dr Strozier has repeatedly expressed his belief that this growing university offers an enormous educational challenge

Organizational changes during his first year here include the appointment of Dean Davis as FSU's first Dean of Faculties, and Dr. Orwin Rush as the new librarian. A new Dean of the Home Economics School has not been announced.

For the first time in its history, FSU has a director for the summer session — Dean Paul Reynolds of Arts and Sciences.

Another change is the president's recommendation that the university's deans each teach at least one class each semester. Dr. Strozier conducted a seminar in advanced French last semester

The sports program has been unified under Coach Nugent, newly appointed Director of Athletics, and his assistant, Don Veller

Two new dormitories, one for men and one for women, will be begun this year, and plans are being made to start construction of housing facilities for married students.

Marianna Trip Registration Being Held

Registration for a trip to Marianna Caverns for FSU Students Sunday is being held in room 19 in Longmire Building

The buses will go through the grounds at the Chattaboochee Mental Institution, then go on to the Caverns

Miss Marie Williams, trip organizer, announced that the transportation will be free, but an admission fee will be charged at the Caverns.

Massive columns in the Caverns form many rooms One which has tall columns like a pipe and a little altar is called the Cathedral Room. A "Mirror Pool", "Waterfall" in milky colors, and an "Irish aspling" are to be found in the caves, which will be toured on trails

Mathematics Is No Fear For This 40

While most people shirk from taking mathematics courses, this doesn't necessarily apply to the 40 students who are here at FSU taking part in the annual Mathematics Camp

This camp is sponsored by the National Science Foundation, and pays all the expenses of each student chosen to attend the camp.

This year, 1,100 applicants took the exam to qualify to attend the camp Out of all the applications the forty students were accepted.

The campers will be here for six weeks. This is the first year this university has had a camp of this kind.

Each student attends four hours of math classes each day They study set theory, modern algebra, geometry, and the application of math to ballistics They will also have the experience of operating the I.B.M. 650 Electronic Computer.

The grant of $9,300 by the National Science Foundation helps finance the Math Camp which is under the direction of Dr. Eugene D. Nichols

WIRE AND PLASTER SCULPTURE are in progress in this Florida State University workshop as 38 teen-agers work at FSU's annual Arts and Crafts Camp. Left to right are Sue Lewis of Clewiston, Philip Ponzoa of Miami Jackson High, Gina Bruno of Miami Jackson, Nancy Bolton of Clewiston High and Anne Willis of Coral Gables High.

'U.S. Beautiful Only In Song'

"America is beautiful only in song," commented Dr. Marian Irish. During a class discussion on national interest, the well known political science professor stressed that our nation is composed not of a homogenous group, but of many groups with conflicting desires.

She used as an illustration the immigration laws. Labor desired a very limited number of foreigners allowed into this country because they could be hired for such cheap wages. Management, for the same reason, wanted very loose rules.

The same might be said of our campus. The Administration has a difficult time, since the university is composed of so many conflicting groups.

What is right for one person is just the opposite for another.

But rules necessarily are made. A great deal of thought, several methods of handling a problem, and then the decision which appears best for the majority is made.

The ivy-covered walls are not as cloistered as one may think. Every phase of life will include these groups of conflicting desires and interests.

• • •

It has been most encouraging to see the group of Press Instituters on campus. The high school journalism students, with good training from home, have come here to learn more about journalism.

But this is probably the last summer that any group will have such an opportunity here. The Board of Control saw fit to close our School of Journalism, consolidating both state schools.

With as many high schools as this state has giving such excellent preparatory training in news work, it seems a shame that there are not more facilities for them on the university level.

It's difficult to understand how this decision of the Board could be in the interests of the state. Not only have many journalism majors here at the university been thrown into a state of chaos by this sudden yanking of the rug from under their feet—many will not be allowed to finish their training already begun here—but these youngsters have also been caught in the scramble.

We wonder if the small amount of money that will be saved is worth the sacrifice the consolidation will demand. Many courses will be continued here by merely dispersing them among the other schools.

Decision Finally Reached

Federal District Judge Dozier DeVane ruled Wednesday that the graduate schools at the University of Florida can no longer be racially segregated.

This ruling was met with varied opinions, but it offers a reasonable compromise to all but the most extreme radicals. It will not satisfy those who favor immediate and total integration; neither is it welcomed by those rabid segregationists who would defy law and government to defend the prejudices of the past. But to the great majority of us it is an acceptable beginning solution to the problem of segregation.

There are logical reasons for maintaining segregation on some levels. Yet, in being honest with ourselves, we must admit that our greatest objection is based upon the prejudice that has been imbued upon us these many years. We also realize that it is undemocratic to deprive any citizen of his full education opportunity, and we know that court decisions must be respected and observed.

This decision is a fair one. It does not call for any drastic changes. We fully agree with the words of Governor LeRoy Collins: "I can see no reason why Florida also cannot expect to obey the Court's order without difficulty. To suggest anything to the contrary is a reflection upon the good will, mature judgment and native pride of Florida citizens and the men and women who comprise the student bodies, the faculties and the alumni of our great universities."

Adams-Conflict Of Interest

By WILLIAM H. STRINGER
Chief, Washington Bureau, The Christian Science Monitor

WASHINGTON—The flurry over Sherman Adams should set Congress and the administration and all Americans pondering the more earnestly the situations where official probity is threatened and cozened by private interests.

The Adams case does not quite come under the usual conflict-of-interest statutes. And perhaps it's a good thing it doesn't, for these statutes are in about as confused and mixed up a state as any set of law, passed haphazardly from 1863 on, could be.

The Eisenhower administration has had vast difficulty in persuading able individuals to come to Washington and take high posts—because they would have to divest themselves of stock or pension rights. It has had this trouble filing sub-Cabinet posts and executive agency jobs, and sometimes the final choice has been a second- or third-rater in consequence.

The confict-of-interest laws are not at all concise as to who must divest himself of just what outside interests in taking a government job, and often the Attorney General's office must cogitate lengthily before it is able to give a tentataive ruling. The laws are similarly imprecise in saying which ex-government employee may safely engaged in what government dealing two years after quitting the buresucracy.

And where the laws are definite, they are often out of date and cannot protect the government against subtle forms of corruption—while unreasonably penalizing those who patriotically want to serve their country.

Fortunately, remedial action is being proposed.

Last month the Assocition of the Bar of the City of New York appointed a 10-lawyer committee to make a "comprehensive and balanced study" of the federal conflict-of-interest laws. This study is being financed by a $47,500 grant from the Ford Foundation The committee, chairmaned by Roswell B. Perkins, former assistant secretary of health, education, and welfare, now has organized itself and will be working steadily through this year and next.

Says Louis M. Loeb, president of the city bar association:

"Most of the conflict-of-interest laws were passed in earlier, simpler days. Now they provide loopholes for the unscrupulous and traps for the honest. I am persuaded that we can render a real public service by bringing order into his highly confused state of the law by determining in what way the law fails to guard against corrupt practices, by evaluating the impact of these laws upon recruitment, and by publicizing our findings."

• • •

The conflict-of-interest field is necessarily broad—and intricate. Some of the present laws aim to prevent government employees from receiving nongovernment income. Others forbid an employee to transact government business with any firm in which he has an interest. Others stop employees from prosecuting certain claims against the government for two years after quitting office.

Then there are a number of special statutes applying to special offices. And most departments and agencies have adopted their own special rules on the subject.

Only one statute applies some of these same prohibitions against members of Congress. This is not strange, because Congress has a general aversion to regulating itself. So it is lamentably true that while a defense official can't make contracts with a company in which he has stock, a senator with big oil and gas interests can lead the fight to enact a bill favoring those interests. And while a member of the Federal Communications Commission may not own radio or TV stock, a senator or representative belonging to a Congress committee dealing with radio and television may indeed own a radio or TV station.

Senator Richard L. Neuberger (D) of Oregon has introduced a bill to apply to members of Congress the same conflict-of-interest probity that affects government employees. His hopeful bill isn't likely to pass, however. When the New York City bar study is written, it isn't likely to make much mention of Congress.

The study group hopes Congress will enact the newly clarified and recoded provisions. This wouldn't happen if Congress found within those provisions vigorous rules applying conflict-of-interest penalties and prohibitions to itself.

Latest Hitchcock Thriller Creates 'Dizzy' Feelings

By LINDA ARNOW

"Where did you go?" "Out." "What did you do?" "Wander" seems to reflect James Stewart's philosophy of life in Alfred Hitchcock's production of Vertigo. Stewart, along with Kim Novak and Barbara Bel Geddes, meanders through a macabre adaptation of D'entre les Morts by the France masters of suspense, Pierre Boileau and Thomas Narcejac. ("Diabolique" and "Demoniaque")

Vertigo, which means a dizziness or confused state of mind, will leave its viewers with Vertigo. Or, as several bewildered movie-goers commented, "I don't think I could take much more of that."

Hitchcock, in typical form, weaves his twisted tale of murder, acrophobia (fear of heights) and reincarnation, to the delight of Bridey Murphy fans, in such a way that there are several possibilities for the endings. And Hitchcock doesn't resolve his story until the last scream is heard

Drawling, nasal-voiced Stewart plays the role of a detective who turned in his badge because he couldn't get more than a few feet off the ground Hired to shadow Kim Novak, the wife of a college friend, Stewart follows and falls for the vague suicidel blonde.

The one constant figure in the plot is Barbara Bel Geddes as Stewart's old flame and would-be new flame who fell for him years ago. But she seems doomed to the dismal life of drawing brassiers with cantilever construction. (Shades of Frank Lloyd Wright!)

Stewart is excellent in his role of a likable and conscientious but sometimes spinsterous private eye His naivity is refreshing but not always credible I wonder if bachelors are that naive, much less detectives

However, Stewart is consistent in his role. There are many minutes without dialogue in which the actor must convey his thoughts solely with his facial expressions and here Stewart is at his best. He is curious, concerned, suspicious, and amazed just by varying those tired lines in his face.

Kim Novak, in a dual role, appears in two-tone color as a brassy red-head and sophisticated platinum blonde. Her performance by itself is good, but when compared with Stewart and Bel Geddes' performances becomes only adequate This may be because she plays a gentile and aloof young wife and a frank working girl with the Cinderella story. These parts were more sterotyped than the other was and Novak did not seem to project personality int her roles as did Stewart and Bel Gaddas.

Hitchcock has gone all out for suspense with this diabolical plot and I think he overdoes it. In the beginning of the movie, I found myself impatient after

A Letter Home:

High Schoolers Bemoan Loss Of Journalism School

Dear Mom,

Just think, I'm going to college! Well, not really college but it's almost the same thing I have the same professors for Press Institute as the regular college students and live in the same buildings and go to the same classrooms.

It's all so fascinating that it's impossible to absorb it all in the two short weeks we'll be here. But I am going to try to get all the basic ideas of journalism that are possible I'll never have a chance like this again. Nor will any others, since the Board of Control has closed the journalism school here.

The future certainly looks dark and dismal since they are depriving us of the privilege of going to college in the state capital. As it will stand two years from now, if we want to go to college in Florida and major in journalism, we will have to go to Gainesville. Somehow, Gainesville doesn't seem to be as convenient as Tallahassee. The journalism student will be cut off from one of the best sources of news—the happenings and activities of a state capital!

Almost every other kid that I've talked to feels the same way I do They are all asking the same questions: Why? For what reason?

Some of the kids at Institute are just like me They have finally found the university that they want to attend after they graduate But we're out of luck The ones that will graduate next year will be just in time to have the doors of the FSU School of Journalism slammed in their faces And what's more, the poor students here who have already started will be kicked out the door before they can say one word about it. Some of them are lucky: they can finish by the time the school closes if they go to summer school Others are not so lucky and are right in the middle of their schooling

I am thoroughly disgusted with this situation. This has put a damper on my entire trip. I know that I won't be able to continue working on my career if I do come here, and like so many others, I want to so badly.

I guess I must be going. There are stories to write and things to do around my room Since there is no "maid service" we have to do our own cleaning—just like home!

Today's Youth Is National 'Big' Problem

By TERRY McCULLOUGH
FSU Press Institute

What is the biggest problem in the United States today?

Some people might say high taxes, school intergration, the cold war, or sputniks. Although these are important, one of our biggest problems is the youth of tomorrow

According to vital statistics released by the government, 46 per cent of all arrests for major crimes are persons under 21 years of age.

J. Edgar Hoover, Director of the FBI, has said that adult crime cannot be curbed until "Teenage Terror" is stopped. By this he means the restless teenagers who are motivated by a desire to do something What, they don't know Perhaps a thrill, anything to relieve the monotony and boredom. They are tired of school, tired of parents, and tired of directions. They want to be free, to break the bonds of regularity and of society. That's when they commit a crime and become juvenile delinquents.

We all still have a job to do. This small minority is likened to the proverbial rotten apple in the barrel. One rotten apple can spoil and ruin the reputation of us all.

These elements must be watched and guided in the pattern of good citizens It is our duty and responsibility as the leaders and citizens of tomorrow to help in our own way to formulate the next generation.

Mental Health, Gifted Children Topics Of Meet

Mental health and gifted children are the two primary topics being discussed at a meeting of 100 persons which will end here today.

A visiting authority on gifted children addressed the conference on gifted children at the opening session Wednesday on "The Gifted Child, the Schools, and Outer Space." He is Dr. Warren A. Ketcham, associate professor of psychology and coordinator of Psychological Services in the School of Education at the University of Michigan.

THE SUPERIOR CHILD

Dr. Ketcham also addressed the group last night in Opperman Music Hall on "The Community and the Superior Child."

After the address, a three-member panel discussed the subject. The panel was composed of Dr. Jane Franseth, of the Department of Elementary Schools, U.S. Office of Education, Dr. Daniel A. Prescott, Director of the Child Development Institute, University of Maryland, and Malcolm Johnson, executive editor of the Tallahassee Democrat.

'INDIVIDUALIZING'

Dr Prescott also appeared on another program which was concerned with "Individualizing Instruction" This morning, Dr Robert Gates and Charles High of the State Department of Education spoke to the group on "Florida and the Superior Child"

Dr. Ralph L. Witherspoon, director of the Child Development Institute, is in charge of the conference which deals with the gifted children of pre-school through teen-age.

A self- important young man strolled into the business office of a large clothing store stopped at a desk, and asked:

"I came here to establish a charge account — but I don't want to answer a lot of foolish questions Could you tell me where to go?"

"I could," replied the young lady at the desk, "but it wouldn't be polite."

It Makes Scents

It's a popular notion that the main ingredient [in] reaching a basic decision is "using your head." Ma[ybe] so, but not for women. While many may claim that [a] lady's choice is mere feminine intuition, more likely tha[n] not she's made up her mind by following her nose Liter[]ally.

Experiments have proved that whether a woman is choosing a brand of lipstick or selecting new curtains, it's her olfactory sense that helps make the decision. Actual tests made with stockings, some scented, some not, have shown that more women will buy the pair with the fragrance.

Then there's the case of Dr. Clarence McCarver, who raises chinchillas in Hattiesburg, Miss Seems that in mating the animals, the females rejected the males' advances so violently that the unwanted males were frequently nipped to death in the process Trial and error produced the answer. Dr. McCarver dabbed a little Old Spice on the males. Result: no fatalities since

The fact that women pref[er] men with good "scents" has en[]abled them successfully to mar[]ket their Old Spice shampo[o] men's deodorant, men's ha[ir] tonic and men's cologne in add[i]tion to shave cream and afte[r] shave lotion. All Old Spice pro[]ducts hint of a fresh, tan[gy] scent reminiscent of salty sea a[ir]. Women like it.

So for the man who feels th[at] all he needs is a shower an[d] shave to make him "irresistib[le]" to the lady in his life, we recom[]mend Dr. McCarver's prescrip[]tion for romance—a good dose of Old Spice, applied daily.

Little Men Boost Litwhiler's Legions

Danny Litwhiler isn't a little man himself, but the Florida State baseball coach lights up every time someone mentions little men.

The explanation is simple. In four years at Florida State, Litwhiler has been winning consistently with players that resemble Little Leaguers almost as much as they do college performers.

This year, with the exception of three or four six-feet-plus players, the Seminoles average about five feet, eight inches.

Described by one major league scout as "those fast little fellows from Florida State," the Seminoles appeared in their third straight District 3 NCAA playoff at Gastonia, N. C., June 5-7.

One Of The Smallest

One of the smallest players on the Florida State squad that won 20 of 25 games this season is Dick Howser, a do-everything shortstop who measures a fraction under 5-8 and weighs but 149 pounds. This little fellow from West Palm Beach, Fla., won first-team All-America honors last season and has a gaudy .373 batting average for three years as a collegiate star.

Four years ago, when this remarkable little fellow left his West Palm Beach home and stepped on the Florida State campus, no one was listening. No one dreamed this 5-7½-145 pounder would gain two of the most prized honors an athlete can get: (1) Amateur Athlete of the Year" in Florida (2) College All-American. When Howser was named by the Florida sportswriters the state's "Amateur Athlete of the Year" for 1957, he became the first college baseball player to receive such an honor in the Sunshine State.

"Dick is a major-league fielder right now," says his coach, former National League outfielder Danny Litwhiler. "He makes unbelievable plays out there."

"Sure, he makes errors," Litwhiler says, "But most of them are on ground balls that most shortstops couldn't get to."

Seminole fans have been amazed by Howser's fancy glove work for three years. And opponents have been amazed by his strong arm.

Howser has a habit of taking a split-second to get a firm grip on the ball after making a stop. When he eats the ball loose, it fairly whistles across the diamond.

Defensive poise is only one side of Dick Howser. He is also the team's toughest hitter, despite being a "marked man" by opposing pitchers who have heard of his exploits.

A righthanded hatter, Howser gets extra power from terrific wrist-action and follow-through. An adept fellow on the hit-and-run, Howser is capable of hitting the ball out of the park (eight home runs during his college career).

Other Small Seminoles

Among other Seminoles who have to stand on a stool to reach the cookie jar are second baseman Ray Bazzell and Catcher Sonny Sheppard, both 5-8; second baseman Jerry Donnaway, 5-7, and first baseman Charlie Pinkerman and outfielder Neil Martin, both 5-6.

Why does Litwhiler like little men?

"Get the small fellow and you'll have him for four years," the former National League outfielder says. "If Howser were 6 or over, he would have signed a professional contract two years ago.

"But scouts keep waiting for Dick to grow. They are afraid to sign him."

Florida State, with its little guys doing most of the thievery, stole 60 bases this season, more than two a game. And many of the small ones helped carry the batting load during the 1958 season.

"Little men have played a large part in baseball," Litwhiler recalls. "You need look no further back than Phil Rizzuto (5-6) of the New York Yankee dynasty. And Lloyd and Paul Waner (5-9 and 5-8, respectively) were built similarly to our own Dick Howser. No explanation of the Pittsburgh exploits of Big and Little Poison is necessary."

Florida State fans think of their "little" men when they recall Damon Runyon's memorable tribute to a tiny Chicago pitcher nearly 40 years ago. Runyon wrote the following after little Dickie Kerr won his second game for the White Sox in baseball's most embarrassing World Series, the World Series of 1919.

"Let the sawed-off, hammered-down, pint-flask sized men of the world hold their heads high above their inches today. A new Napoleon has arisen to the height of five feet seven to lead the bantam brigade."

FSU Stages Football Clinic

Football took over the spotlight in Florida's Capital City on June 12, when Florida State University unfolded it's fifth annual football clinic.

Over 500 high school and college coaches from Texas to New York were on hand for blue-ribbon instruction from head coaches noted for success. The five headliners were Paul (Bear) Bryant of Alabama, Duffy Daugherty of Michigan State, Sid Gillman of the Los Angeles Rams, Eddie Erdelatz of Navy and Murray Warmath of Minnesota.

NUGENT INSTITUTES

The Florida State coaches clinic originated during the spring of 1954, when head football coach Tom Nugent, who later became athletic director, instituted it as an annual event. The FSU clinic has since grown to be one of the most popular and best attended gridiron schools in the country.

The clinic started on Thursday, June 12 and ran through Saturday, June 14.

In the interim, a steady diet of football was served up with accent on modern trends and new ideas in the game. The program included more than 20 hours of lectures, panel discussions, question-and-answer sessions, and movies.

DAUGHERTY DISCUSSES

Michigan State's Duffy Daugherty, discussed the running phase of his Spartans' celebrated multiple offense. Sid Gillman of the Los Angeles Rams discussed tips on building a passing game.

Coaches came from every Southern state, with heavy concentration from Alabama, Georgia, and Florida.

The five clinic headliners were assisted during the clinic by Nugent and his Florida State staff of Bob Harbinson, Frank Toomey, Hugh Adams, Charlie LaPradd, Paul Odom, Lee Corso, and Herb Hughes.

FILMS SHOWN

Films of the 1958 Gator Bowl, Orange Bowl, and Sugar Bowl, Cotton Bowl, and Rose Bowl games were reviewed by the Coaches.

Visiting coaches stayed in West Hall, FSU's modern 11-story men's residence building.

The majority of the clinic was staged in the air-conditioned State Theater in downtown Tallahassee.

Females Bowl, Swim, Fence

Have you ever seen a birdie fly? Well, I have. Yes, and so have the twenty-four girls attending the 1958 session of the High School Girls Sports Camp. But badminton is only one of the many sports played by the girls.

They learned the tricks of Robin Hood in the archery class and Sir Lancelot became popular when fencing was taught. Bowling, volleyball, swimming, tennis and many other sports held the interest of the students as well as giving them a good time.

Dr. Katherine W. Montgomery is in charge of the camp which is being held on the university campus from June 18-21.

The girls spent a weekend at the FSU Lake Bradford Reservation where they went swimming and had a picnic. Another important activity which the girls will hold will be the annual banquet tonight.

Conley Breaks FSU Track Record In Champions Meet

In the Meet of Champions, held at Houston, Texas, on June 7, Florida State's brilliant distance runner, Mike Conley, took second place, only .3 of a second behind the winner, Bill Hodgson of Oklahoma.

Conley turned in a sparkling 4:05.7 mile in the Meet of Champions, only to be nipped at the finish by Oklahoma's Bill Hodgson. Hodgson was timed at 4:05.4.

Mike Conley

Conley's Houston effort was easily a Florida State school record. The lithe Gainesville, Fla., senior's best previous mile was a 4:14.1 in the Georgia AAU meet this season.

In the NCAA track and field championships held at Berkeley, California, on June 14, Conley finished eighth, while turning in a time of 4:11. In the NCAA meet, he ran against nation's finest milers, including Ron Delaney of Villanova, who won the contest with a time of 4:03.

Joining Conley in the blue-ribbon NCAA competition is teammate Jim Casteel, Avondale, Ga., sophomore quartermiler who has done the 440 in 47 seconds flat. Casteel finished fifth in the Meet of Champions 440, won by Ohio State's Glenn Davis with :46.8 seconds.

Conley, a six foot, 150-pound senior from Gainesville, Florida, has set two school records during his three years on the FSU track team. Conley set the mile record at Houston, 4:05.7, and in 1957 he turned in a time of 10:08.5 in the Two Mile run to set the other record.

Thailander Gives Views On Campus

Students should follow more strictly the university's rules and regulations for the future of the university commented Pirom Poolsawasdi, a native of Thailand.

Hesitantly at first, Pirom gave his opinion of FSU "It is a considerably fast growing university with a very friendly campus." He added that he feels rules should be strictly adhered to, in order for students to receive full value from their education, for students' benefit, and to keep the university's standard high. Pirom has observed that it is much easier to be admitted to a school in the USA than in Thailand.

In Pirom's opinion, American young people have so much freedom that they have less respect for their teachers and guardians at home than they should have. He also noticed that Thailanders are more conservative in comparison with US citizens.

Pirom has come to the USA on a science scholarship awarded him by his government. He is, at present, a senior at FSU, studying mathematics and physics.

He has completed besides his college courses a full year of elementary teachers' training in Dhonburi, Thailand. He hopes to teach math in a high school or university in the future, and is also preparing to teach elementary physics in case of need.

Thailand, previously the country of Siam, is located in southeastern Asia. Pirom exclaimed, "More than half the people I have met ask me where Thailand is!"

FSU Gives Corso Coaching Position

Lee Corso, former all-time great at Florida State University, was named to the Seminole's varsity coaching staff last week.

Corso, a 1956 FSU graduate, handled the backfield coaching chores for the freshmen Seminole squad in 1957 while still working on his Master's degree as a graduate student.

Besides being an outstanding athlete, Corso was also a student of considerable ability and made the Dean's list during his undergraduate days.

The 22-year-old, 5-11, 166-pound grid star garnered many honors during his four year stay at Florida State. Corso lettered for four years in football and was a three year man on the baseball squad. On the football field Corso accounted for more than 2,000 yards by virtue of his passing, running and pass catching. Being versatile, Corso alternated between halfback and quarterback.

In 1956 Corso won an honorable mention place on the Associated Press All-American squad and became the first FSU gridder to make All-American.

Corso was also selected as "Back of the Week" by the International News Service in 1956 because of his outstanding play in the North Carolina - FSU game. The Seminoles won the game, 14-0.

The former Miami Jackson grid star was the second Seminole to join the FSU varsity coaching staff. Corso joined Hugh Adams, former Little All-American tackle, in the Seminole coaching ranks.

"Corso has that rare ability of being able to impart knowledge," stated football coach Tom Nugent. "He's a good teacher and should have a fine future in coaching."

Seminoles Place 4 On Elite Team

Stellar shortstop Dick Howser and rightfielder-catcher Mike Copps of Florida State University were recently named to the NCAA District Three all star team.

Howser and Copps were joined by teammates Dale Korh and Frank Slusser who gained berths on the second team.

The trio of Howser, Copps, and Korh formed the nucleus of the Seminole's power at the plate along with since-departed Owen McCarron, switch-batting center fielder-second baseman. McCarron was ineligible for tournament competition because he participated in varsity baseball during his freshman year. McCarron, five feet nine inches, 155 pounds, hit a very respectable .384 to lead the Seminole squad during his final season.

Senior Dick Howser hit a .337 while juniors Mike Copps and Dale Koch hit .344 and .310, respectively.

HOWSER SETS RECORDS

Shortstop Howser set two all school records during his stay with the Seminoles.

During his sophomore year, 1956, he belted a spectacular .422, which is the highest seasonal average ever compiled at Florida State. In setting this record he also broke the mark for the most hits per season with .38. During his record-breaking season, Howser paced the FSU nine to a 24-5 seasonal tabulation.

Frank Slusser, the only Seminole hurler to make the NCAA squad, compiled an outstanding 8-2 record and was voted "Athlete of the Year" by the Florida Flambeau. Slusser, a bespectacled out-of-state import from Nescopek, Pennsylvania, ran his regular season record to 8-0 before receiving his defeats in the NCAA tournament held in Gastonia, North Carolina.

The five foot 10 inch, 170 pound right hander was the big gun of coach Danny Litwhiler's nine all season. He struck out a total of 54 while walking only 16.

SLUSSER HURLS NO-HITTER

Slusser became the first FSU moundsman to pitch a no-hit encounter when, on April 18, he stemmed the winds of the Miami Hurricanes. During this encounter he fanned eight batters, including the side in the ninth inning.

Mike Copps and Dale Koch, the two junior members of the elite group, were outstanding in all phase of batting prowess.

Both began the season slow and at the midway point boasted rather anemic plate averages. However, during the stretch drive, both were red hot with the hickory stick and finished going away.

Copps, a 19 year old Jacksonville product, lead the Seminoles in run batted in with 28. He also banged out 32 bingles which included six doubles, three triples, and three trippers.

Dale Koch, the FSU third sacker, took runner up honors in the RBI department. Koch, a native of Clearwater, rapped 31 hits with 100 at bats. This total included three homers. Koch possesses a sharp batting eye and struck out only four times during the season.

Howser Signs Pro Contract With Kansas City Athletics

Dick Howser, outstanding Florida State University shortstop followed four of his former Seminole teammates into the ranks of professional baseball by signing a contract with the Kansas City Athletics. Preceding him in signing professional contracts were infielder Phil Hunt and pitchers Dennis Midgette and Chuck Collier who were declared ineligible to participate in intercollegiate competition in 1958, due to these commitments.

After completing the 1958 regular season play with a .365 batting average, outfielder Owen McCarron became the fourth member of Coach Danny Litwhiler's nine to sign a pro contract.

Howser, a native of West Palm Beach helped spark the Seminoles to a respectable 21-7 season record and a berth in the district 3 NCAA tournament.

Howser hit .337 in his final season for FSU and lead the team in the field. His standout 1958 performances garnered him a berth on the District 3 NCAA all star squad.

In his junior year he was selected on the National Baseball Coaches Association's All-American squad.

Howser has never fallen below a .325 batting average for 74 games as a Seminole.

He belted .422 in 26 games as a sophomore, banging out 38 hits. Both marks are still school records. He drove home 29 runs—another school standard—last season while hitting .364 in 25 games.

Against tougher competition this season, Howser batted .325 and led the club in doubles (8), runs (29) and walks (21).

His three-year totals show 95 hits (27 for extra bases), 92 runs, and 72 runs-batted-in for 74 games. He has the club's sharpest eye. He has worked pitchers for 69 walks and has struck out only 14 times as a Seminole.

Howser signed for a reported $22,000.

School Plays Host To Boy's State Sun.

Florida State University will play host to about 500 high school juniors arriving Sunday afternoon for a week-long session of the American Legion-sponsored Florida Boys State.

The boys elect a governor, Cabinet and Supreme Court on Thursday after a campaign between the two political parties into which they will be divided—the Nationalists and Federalists.

The first general assembly of the group is set for Sunday at 7:15 o'clock in Westcott Auditorium. On Monday morning the boys will begin caucuses for offices in the 16 cities into which Boys State will be organized.

Afterward there wil be special schools of instruction for the Boys Staters in law, community development, peace officer work, government and social economics, civil service and legislative procedure.

In addition to state and city officers the boys will elect officials for eight counties and a state legislature. The house and senate of the legislature will elect speakers and will transact legislative business at the capitol beginning on Wednesday.

New Buildings To Consolidate Two Schools

Among the most recently constructed Florida State University buildings are for the School of Education and the School of Business.

For the first time the School of Business is to be consolidated in this three-story, air-conditioned brick building. Previously, the school was housed in several buildings. The new building has a student capacity of 2,000 and cost $1,087,000 to build.

One of the features of the building is the fact that it was designed for the comfort as well as the education use by students. The walls in the main entrance are distinguished by colorful mosaics of industries and large display cases are designed for exhibits of Florida businesses and indutries.

Other features are a student-faculty lounge with adjoining kitchen, a periodical reading room, guest offices for visiting businessmen, an elevator, and provisions for the student business professional organizations.

The pleasant atmosphere of the building, created by soft colors and drapes instead of venitian blinds, is designed to test the value of comfort and color as psychological factor of business on students.

The School of Education has been under construction for 16 months and will be completed October 1. The school, a four-story brick building with space for nearly 2,500 students cost $1,250,000

Like the School of Business, this is the first time that the School of Education has been consolidated into one building. This building provides for the training of prospective teachers in all fields and grade levels except in physical education.

Dr. Ivan Johnson, director of art education, who was partly respoosible for the moving of the school into the new building, says that the building should satisfy the needs of the school for the time being, although the lecture rooms, with a capacity of 180 people, are "already crowded."

The building has an exceptional feature in its original schulpture by a member of the Indiana University School of Art. The Child Development Center, also in the building, will study the actions and possible cure of problem children.

The emphasis in the construction of the new building, said Dr. Johnson, is to cut out the ostentatious, and put it to instructional use. The only deviations from this principle were the building of student-faculty lounges, and exhibit space in the main entrance. The school has all modern furniture and facilities, and a fourth floor library.

NEW BUILDING—The new 35 classroom School of Business houses the entire business staff for the first time in the school's history. Sixty consultation rooms are also included in the building.

'Sack' Dress Good For Feed Visitors Agree

The sack dress is strictly for feed storage in the opinion of most of those interviewed by 4-H girls who attended a week-long short course at Florida State University.

The girls' newspaper, the Cloverleaf, came out June 12 with quotes from a score of adults and teen-agers among the 600 who attended the short course. The general idea was that sacks are best used to bag corn or potatoes.

FSU President Robert M. Strozier was one of those who frowned on the sack. "Why hide beauty?" asked the University President.

Some other opinions? Joes Busby, assistant director, Florida Agricultural Extension Service stated, "Sacks look good on corn."

Miss Sara Horton, home demonstration agent from Wauchula said "They look cute on 18-year-olds when they have a bow in the back, but—"

Miss Emma Stevenson, home demonstration agent from Panama City, "The sack dress looks just like a sack"

The Pasco County group of 4-H girls, "Some of them look like feed bags and should go back to the farm"

Miss Anna Mae Sikes, state home demonstration agent for Florida: "I think they are very nice for people with good lines or for people that have things to cover up."

Cabins Available

Bradford Reservation Open For Sailboating, Canoeing

There aren't any Indians at the Seminole Reservation around, so you can rest assured that there's a whooping good time waiting for you in the cool waters of the Reservation on Lake Bradford.

Only full time University students who have paid an activity fee are given free access to the camp's facilities. Non-student visitors are required to register $1.50 camping fee for each day spent at the Reservation. In addition, charges are made for use of boating craft to those not having paid the University activity fee.

Summer recreation for campers includes canoeing and sailboating, while swimmers may use the enclosed safety area. Lifeguards are on duty during regular swimming hours.

The camp is open to faculty, students, and their visitors on Fridays from 3 to 7 p.m.; Saturdays 1 through 6 p.m., and on Sundays, 2 until 6 p.m.

To insure safe boating and swimming, only those students who have qualified through tests will be allowed use of such. No power boats will be permitted in the PSU area of the lake until further provisions have been made.

Tests for sailboating and canoeing will be given during the following hours at the lake Fridays from 2 until 3 p.m. and Saturdays from 12-1 p.m.

If you're in the mood to rough it, here's a thought. Why not spend a couple of nights in one of the five cabins built for outdoor living at its finest. There's room for 200 Some of the summer campers in the past have taken to the woods for a few weeks, cooking their food over barbecue pits.

The horn blowers from music camp are headed for a day of fun in the sun at the Reservation on Saturday. Then come the missile experts and chemists from the science camp.

Girls owning white bathing suits are warned to leave them at home and wear something dark, since the cypress roots of the lake leave a brown film.

Water conservation officials have cleaned the lake and made it safe for all water activities scheduled at the camp during the summer.

Officials in charge of the Reservation include Holly Chapman, handling waterfront activities; Davis Atkinson, boating manager; and Mrs. De Calb, permanent residence of the Reservation and general manager of the camp.

SHAVE ALL-AMERICAN (STORY P. 3)

WFSU-FM To Increase Power To 1,000 Watts

TOWER FOR NEW 1,000 watt WFSU-FM radio station is a new landmark for students. This tower will be used to broadcast over an area of 50 miles.

Flambeau Photos by Tom Maida

RADIO AND TELEVISION majors will find this modern control room awaiting them. Part of the new 1,000-watt FM station, the control room is used by students and WFSU-FM personnel.

Broadcasting Starts July 1

Florida State University's radio station, WFSU-FM, will return to the air on July 1 with an increased power output of 1,000 watts, Roy Flynn, director, announced this week.

WFSU-FM has been operating on a power output of ten watts ever since its beginning eleven years ago.

With the installation of new equipment and the new transmitting tower WFSU-FM will be able to broadcast in an area approximately 50 miles, Flynn said. The ten watt station has only been able to cover a five-mile radius or less, since 1947.

WFSU-FM, with studios on the ground floor of the Music Building starts the summer schedule of broadcasting on July 1, operating from 2 to 10 p.m. seven days a week. It will still transmit at the old ten watts power for the time being.

"The 120 foot tower is up, but the transmitter has not yet arrived from the factory," said Bill Ragsdale, Chief Engineer for the University Broadcasting Services. "The transmitter must be installed. Then we must go through a series of tests. Next we are subject to examination by the FCC. Finally we receive formal approval and begin to broadcast at the higher power. This will happen some time during the summer before we go off the air on August."

When asked whether the University radio station broadcasts to students or to townspeople, Flynn, Director of University Broadcasting Services said, "We plan our programs for adults who want stimulating listening. We have mail from FSU students, high school students, FSU faculty, business men, FAMU students, doctors, housewives, all kinds of people.

"The bulk of our programming is good music. We also use selected programs from the National Association of Educational Broadcasters tape network. We produce programs which are distributed on the NAEB tape network as well as to over fifty commercial stations over the country."

A series produced by WFSU-FM under a grant-in-aid by the Educational Television and Radio Center took first award in the Ohio State Awards competition this spring. Entitled PRISON DOCUMENT, the series explored conditions in state prisons in the United States asking the questions: "What are our prisons for?" Dr. Vernon Fox, professor of Social Welfare, was content authority. Script and Narration were by Roy Flynn, who also supervised the production. Editing was by Bill Ragsdale, and Field recording by Tom Stone.

The University station has developed a loyal audience in spite of its low power handicap. Director Flynn attributes this to the boom in hi-fi enthusiasm on the national scale, which is reflected locally by the availability of good hi-fi rigs complete with FM tuners.

"People listen to records on hi-fi sets," he said. They rapidly acquire an ear for quality sound. They listen to AM radio, and are disappointed. It is physically impossible for AM radio to deliver the full range of frequencies which come out of a good record played on good equipment."

"It is possible for FM radio to deliver this full range. People discovered that for slight additional investment, an FM tuner could be added to hi-fi sets. And then they discovered our sixty-five hours per week of good music an adulty - level programs. So our audience built."

At ten watts, the signal did not so much beyond the city limits of Tallahassee and reception was spotty even within this area. The increase in power is not aimed so much at extending the distance of coverage, although it will do that, but rather at saturating the area in which people have strong ties to the University.

Live production in the radio studio will be limited until the television equipment, now stored there, is moved to the new television studio to be located in Graduate Hall.

In addition to functioning as a service to the public, the University radio station serves as laboratory for students majoring in Radio-Television in the newly reorganized program under Thomas Wright, Director of Radio-Television Instruction. This summer the station will broadcast programs produced by stu-

A two-day visit to the mental health clinic, detention home and other juvenile facilities at Jacksonville July 10-11 is on the schedule in addition to the daily class sessions. Class work will include study of special police techniques, conditioning factors in juvenile delinquency, interviewing techniques and administration and preparation of cases.

The first week of the course will feature a discussion of legal aspects of delinquency control by Charles Tom Henderson, assistant attorney general and director of statutory revision and bill drafting. W. Orwin Rush, FSU director of libraries, will speak on library materials on delinquency, and Dr. Fox and Dr. Lewis Diana, assistant professor of social welfare will lecture.

The Institute is the first of a series of summer institutes on delinquent control in be conducted by the School of Social Welfare through the General Extension Division of Florida.

'The Male Animal'

Speech Department Begins Rehearsals

The Speech Department has started rehearsals for The Male Animal to be presented July 18-19 at 8:15 PM.

Tickets for the play to be held in Conradi Theatre will cost 50 cents for students and one dollar for adults.

Richard G Fallon, assistant professor of speech, has set the tentative cast with Jamie Conner and Stanley DeHart as the leads.

The Male Animal by James Thurber and Elliot Neujent was first presented in the late thirties with Neujent in the lead role. It brought Gene Tierney into fame and started the career of Don de Fore. It was revived about four years ago starring Neujent again and Robert Preston. The movie by the same name starred Henry Fonda, Olivia de Haviland and Jack Carson.

The story is divided into two plots. One is the battle of the sexes, while the other is concerned with freedom of expression and speech. This comedy takes place on a college campus of a midwestern university.

The Speech Department is also giving scenes from plays every Thursday afternoon at three o'clock in the Conradi Theatre, History Building. These productions are free to the students. Scenes from Antigony were presented yesterday. Future scenes are planned from The Blood Wedding and Eugene O'Neill's Long Day's Journey Into Night.

Artist Series To Hold One Performance

By JUDY NICHOLS

The Artist Series will sponsor only one program this summer. On July 9, Nell Rankin will give a concert at Westcott Auditorium.

Formerly, the summer Artist Series has included several little known performers. This year all money is used to engage one outstanding artist.

Miss Rankin is a soprano with the Metropolitan Opera Company. She is best known for her opera roles and radio broadcasts.

Born in Alabama, Miss Rankin decided at the age of 12 to become an opera singer. Her family believed that she would never carry her wild ambition far. However, she made her debut at Town Hall in New York on March 27, 1947.

Critics' reports did not acclaim her as an opera star, but she would not give up. Her goal was the Metropolitan Opera.

In 1949 her reputation was established when she won the world music contest at Geneva, Switzerland. On Thanksgiving night of 1951 Miss Rankin sang with the Metropolitan Opera Company.

All may attend the concert which begins at 8:15 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium. Students are admitted by showing their identification cards.

LIBRARY WORKSHOP

The Southern College and Research Library Workshop being held here yesterday and today in the Library lecture hall has drawn 50 librarians from nine states. Panel discussions are featured.

Officials Say 'No Comment' About Integration Situation

By LANE GOURLIE
Flambeau Editor

"No comment" is the only comment from FSU officials regarding the inquiry of a Negro for application to our graduate school.

"The matter is entirely in the hands of the Board of Control," said Charles H. Walker, FSU registrar. Dean of Faculties Charles Davis, serving in vacationing President Strozier's position, said that the university is unprepared to make a statement at this time.

Dr. J. Broward Culpepper, Executive Director of the Board of Control, is vacationing and can not be reached for comment.

In the same week that Federal Judge Dozier DeVane ordered that the Board could no longer restrict graduate level admission by race, the Negro inquiry came to the registrar's office and was promptly dispatched to Dr. Culpepper.

Negro applications have always been sent to the Board of Control, and thus far denied. Virgil Hawkins, 9 year applicant to the University of Florida's graduate Law School, can attest to that.

The next meeting of the Board of Control will be held in Jacksonville on July 25. Until that time, no action is expected to be made.

The Board must decide not only what to do with applicants, if they are admitted, but whether or not the residence halls and dining rooms will be integrated.

Cancer Workers Study Aids In Publicity Work

One hundred volunteer workers interested in educating the public in fight cancer are holding a three-day workshop this week at Florida State University.

Techniques of using clubs and businesses, schools and colleges, mass media of communication, audio-visual aids, public speaking and committee meetings in the education campaign will be discussed, according in Dr Sara Louise Smith, head of the department of health education at FSU.

The non-credit workshop will be held Thursday through Saturday, June 26-28 principally for volunteer workers of the American Cancer Society in the counties. The workshop will be sponsored by Public Education Committee of the ACS, Florida Division, in cooperation with the Board of Directors of the Division of the Department of Health Education at FSU.

Several speakers are on the program which opens in the New Education Building at 2 p.m. Thursday. Dr C M Harris of West Palm Beach, president of the Florida Division, will address the group at that time on the subject "Florida Against Cancer." Chester S Williams, director of public education for the national office of the ACS, and C B Dissinger, director of public education for the Florida Division, will be other speakers.

Mrs Wesinn L. Murray, director of public education for the Georgia Division of ACS, will address the Thursday evening session. Speakers Friday morning will be Dr. Frank W. Putman head of the biochemistry in the College of Medicine, J. Hillis Miller Health Center, University of Florida, and Dr. J. J. Zavertnik of Miami, chairman of the professional education committee of the Florida Division. Dean Mode L. Stone of the School of Education will address a dinner meeting Friday evening in the Suwannee Room and a Saturday morning session will close the workshop.

Graduate Student To Attend Seminar

Elke Frank, German FSU graduate student, will represent our campus in an international graduate seminar to be held in Twin Lakes, Connecticut.

The seminar, sponsored by the Institute of World Affairs, is to be held from July 9-August 26.

Miss Frank received her bachelor's degree here in journalism in 1957, and is presently working on her master's in political science. She has only been in the United States for 5½ years.

"I am very pleased because I think it is a challenge to represent my school. I am most happy that I was chosen to represent FSU as an American student, and not a foreign student," said the coed.

Brink Of Another Korea?

Are we praparing for another Korea? The l.t le count y of Lebanon at the eastern end of the Mediterranean is causing dour aff mat ve pred ct ons.

The U. S. and British governments have pledged themselves to come to the aid of Lebanon f Pres dent Chamoun calls for them. It is fast reaching the stage where few other a ternat ves are available.

The Lebanese are undergoing a civil war. Egyptian Dictator Nasser has his f ger in the pie again. Authorities feel that he has inspired, financed and re-inforced the rebel attack on the Lebanese government.

Anglo-American authorities have been bombarded with pleas for Lebanese aid from the Middle East. The Arabs fear that hey wi l be naxt on the list to go, with Iraq probably in the lead. Turkey and Greece are afraid that they will be cau the web after the Arabs are finished.

Nasser has already won personal victo ies. K g Saud of Saudi-Arabia was forced to abdicate. President Chamoun has already been forced to promise that he would not run for re-election.

The Ang o-American governments have not comm ted t emselvas merely to protect the rich Middle East oil lines. Another Commur ist barbed wire fence is being flourished in the faces of the free West.

If we can get safely through this scrape without repeating the Korean war in which 156,000 American lives were lost, the big West had best get on the big st k. The me for aid is not after the crisis, but before it.

Our Future Diplomats

We n Florida are trying to help with the solution to planning which will meet problems ahead of time. It is hoped that by early training in the problems and functions of government, our officials of the future will be one jump ahead. Thus the American Legion has brought Boys' State to our state capital campus.

Five hundred young men are here to learn as much of the intricate workings of government as they can absorb. Those attending Boys' State are having actual experience in every phase of government that is possible for the high school seniors.

Thay will take back to their home towns and schools new ideas and methods from the state's capital. Experience in political campaigns and governmental functions will then be radiated throughout their classmatas.

Perhaps these boys will be able to influence their contemporaries with the importance of each citizen in his governmant. Parhaps some of tham will want to go further into this training, to emerge as our leaders of tomorrow. At any rate, they have been given a golden opportunity. Florida leaves it up to them to take advantage of it.

Divided into two parties, the boys earl.er in the week alected a governor, legislators, city, state, and county officials, cabinet officers, and supreme court judges. They have actually been functioning in these offices. Now we can but hope that thay will be inspired to continue and improve upon these opportunities.

And women aren't taking a back seat in government any longer. Girls' State wi soon invade the campus, for they too must learn.

Thus are we producing American citizens.

American Educational Problem

Since the f st sputnik was blasted into space last October, our American educational system has suffered sharp crit cism. Much of this criticism is justified; much of it is not.

To undarstand the situation, we must compare the underlying philosophy of our system with that of the Soviet Union. The Russian schools ara based upon the Marxist principle that the individual exists for the benefit of the state. Thus the student is educated for the good of the governma t.

The American system is based upon educata n for the benefit of the individual. Of course, the educated individual is be er prepared to serve society, but our primary purpose is to prepare the student f a successful life. This includes more than vocat nal preparation; it involves m ra than scientific and mathamatical education.

The problem, then, is posed: Do we really fulf l our purpose? Do we prepare the student for his future life? The answer to that must essentially be critical.

We cannot do a satisfactory job of this in class-rooms that are overcrowded . . . in disrupted classes in which taaching is hinderad by a minority of disinterested students . . . in schools where more emphasis is put upon grades than upon learning and in which good grades ara bought by "brownnosing" or playing teacher's pet . . . and in communities where sufficient funds are not allocated to support necessary courses or to attract a sufficient number of qualified teachers.

These problems are difficult to solve, but we must find solutions. Then, we will be fulfilling our purposa of education, a purpose that is in kaeping with our belief that man is not a creature of the state.

Once Over Lightly

Tally Offers Vast Recreation

By MARSHALL LaCOMBE

There are many routes of entry or escape, to or from Tallahassee: Routes 90, 98, 27, 319 and Dale Mabry Field. Most of these roads are paved and offer the widely distributed protection of Federal, State, county, and local police.

Tallahassee is known as the "friendly city," with an approximate population of 40,000 friends (other classifications have moved to Georgia).

The casual visitor, with some time to kill and money to spend, will want to know where to go. In the following paragraphs I shall tell him.

After a lona and hot drive the visitor may feel tired and thirsty and will therefore desire something to drink. Tallahassee is in a dry county, which means beer may be purchased at any of the friendly drugstores, providing one has the proper prescription. Orange juice, tomato juice, borscht, and other mixera may be secured at any of our leading aeneral stores.

Assuming you have found your way to the intersection of College and Monroe, you are now in the center of the business district and within a short radius of all the cultural and cultivated pleasures of the world. To the North is the Florida Theater, to the South the Dixieland Drive In.

To the West is the Florida State University campus and some of the fairest belles this side of the Potomic and Mississippi rivera. Most of these girls are Southern by nature, or by choice, which means they are familiar with the term "Southern hospitality." This term haa an ambiguous definition, but generally means, in this case, that they have been brought up in a school of charm foreign to and better than those in the North, and in case of illness they will patronize only Southern hospitals.

Tallahassee is not only the county seat, but the state's capital which means there is sufficient political intrigue hereabouts to amuse you adherents of the political science. You may view this intrigue from the aallery when the House and Senate convene.

But for real intrigue ask any one of the campus policemen to take you on a scenic tour of the cars parked near the female dormitories between 10:30 and 11 p.m. weekdays.

Tallahassee has three commercial radio stations, most of them adherents of the popular idiom of musical sounds, immortilizing the better unsung heroea such as violet people eatera and witchdoctors.

Some restaurants in this area, if one looks hard enough, hiahlight delectable examples of the more popular cusine such as hamburgers and grits. The more rare forms of food may be found on the trees. Be careful to brush off anything you pick up before eating it, this is a practice in keeping with our sanitation drive.

If you atay here for a length of time you will notice that each 24 hours the sun rises in the East. This is an old Southern tradition dating as far back as the invention of the cotton gin. There are other unique sights to behold such as the ritual of the women parking their cars, and the trips to the coast to pick up medicine.

We hope your atay in Tallahassee has been an expensive one, and remember as you drive out of town you may begin riding on the riant side of the road.

A Word For The Ladies: Fit In Refreshing Pause

By ELIZABETH LYNN
Assistant Dean of Women

A popular song several decades ago contained the phrase:

"So laughing, not weeping,
I'll ao to my sweepina
When I am housekeeping
For you-ou-ou."

Today's young married girl would probably paraphrase as follows:

"So laughing, not shirking,
I'll just keep on working
When I'm soda jerking
For you-ou-ou."

For today's home is almost as apt to have a counter replacing a breakfast table as it is to have a car port or garage. And today's women is very apt to be working for remuneration at some time or other, for at all times women are entering and leaving the labor force in great numbers. Timea hava changed!

According to information given in a recent book called "Womanpower," some twenty-two million women work and of that number about ½ are married. Marriage no longer binds women to the home, for nearly 1/3 of the married women work outside of it. It really looks as if a modern girl who contemplates marrying a young man with anything short of a Master's degree might as well as the minister to reword the marriaae vows to "love, honor, and support" for so many ara helping to put their husbands through college.

All this responsibility puts women under physical and nervous strain. They can keep up with the pace if and only if they learn a very important aspect of living, namely, how to glean the most from every little opportunity to be alone. A wise woman, who visited our campus recently, remarked that today's colleges and universities spend their energies trainina women how to handle every facet of their life and work except the quiet time—the tima when one is alone for brief or extended periods. These are the times when one gets those rare chances to be "friendly with one's soul." It is true that the modern college girl's calendar of engagements is about as full as it can get with the whirl of meetings, sports events and dates, as well as classes. Not much emphasis is placed on the reflective side of life and the possible need for solitary entertainment, self directed.

How can you prepare yourself for good use of "free" tima? That is bard to say, but whatever use is made will be the result of impulses which get their direction from within. Since nothing can be drawn from an empty reservoir, every woman had better begin filling hera while she is yet young and practice drawing from it at times.

As to ingredients one migh[t con]sider some of the following.

Memorization is an ac[tivity] which provides an occupat[ion for] the time and lays up a s[tore]house of good things to dra[w on] in the future, not unlike [a] deep freeze which makes [it pos]sible to enjoy a meal sma[cking] of garden freshness on a [cold] winter day. What a thor[ough] preparation parents need to [car]ry on such constant inculca[tion] of precepts!

Bishop Fenelon, at one [time] tutor to the children of Fr[ench] royalty, reminded parents n[ot to] postpone trainina just beca[use] children could not unders[tand]. Screen Scenes

Jake Wade Wouldn't Quite Make Gunsmoke

By LINDA ARNOW

Matt Dillon, of "Gunsmoke's" trails, definitely woudn't been seen in a respectable bar rubbing boot spurs with the marshal in Metro-Goldwyn - Mayer's "The Law and Jake Wade." The marshal played by Robert Taylor, has a few skeletons to hide and when Richard Widmark appears on the scene, the "Dry Bones" theme is heard. Patricia Owens, as Taylor's fiancee, plays the usual role of the delicate young lady who gets in the way.

Basically, this is the same old tasteless western flavored with Cinemascope and Metrocolor. It has in it everything you've seen in other Westerns—Indians, Comanches this time, not Apaches.) a smoking covered wagon, a ghost town, a door-to-door gun duel and even the cavalry, who look every bit like Explorar Scouts on a Sunday picnic. It's served up with a theme of greed versus honor and a dash of twisted loyalty.

But there are a few things that save the film from downright mediocrity. Aside from some minor twists in the tired plot that makes you think it might not end like you think it will, the film's redeeming feature is its characterization.

Taylor is definitely not a hero's hero. He's not loyal, obedient, faithful and kind. He has enough of that hero stuff but he's not a goody-goody. I applauded when I saw that Taylor's piece of horseflesh was nat a striking black or white stallion, but a sedate dappled gray one that looked more like a plow horse than a charger. Taylor, as usual, acts convincingly, but somehow didn't get the lines that Widmark did.

Smiling Widmark, as a lovabla villian, always manages to come

Music In 'Two Different Worlds'

By W. L. HOUSEWRIGHT

As surely as there will be a Saturday night there will be jazz, and as surely as it is followed by Sunday mornina there will be serious music. The exuberance of ona may well be as essential to our welfare as the inspection of the other; for without either Saturday night or Sunday morning we do not have a full week.

It is a well-known axiom that in order to know music, one must hear what is in it. The styles and techniques of jazz may be analyzed on perfectly respectable theoretical grounds, but it is not necessary for the man in the street to understand the complexities of a jazz score. This music is designed primarily for social purposes and can never become the art music which some of its proponents would make of it.

Both jazz artists and other musicians serve long and arduous apprenticeships. They both take pride in their own work and also that of their fellow colleagues. It is a curious fact that each group likes to be accepted, approved, and applauded by the other.

Jazz musicians like to know that their medium has permanent worth. They are, therefore, pleased when an Episcopal minister can earn $64,000 by showing the world that jazz is fundamentally decent and satisfying. Serious musicians, often lacking the adulation and rewards to which jazz men are accustomed, are pleased when the jazz men see in their music a vitality and cogency to modern living sufficient to merit tha respect and enjoyment of the people at large.

Jazz has in the last twenty-five years evolved a content and a style which deserves the respect of everyone who calls himself a music lover. The work of small "combos" in recent years is a tribute to the "coming of age" of the listening public and the performers as well.

The potential of two recent developments in jazz, however, is not as great as appears on the surface. I refer to joint appearances of jazz groups and symphony orchestras and to the fad for playing jazz as background for poetry reading. In both instances, mutual elements of rhythmic content [and] tone color would seem to indi[cate] a natural combination but the [fun]damental purposes of the poet [and] the symphony compose[r are not] those of the jazz composer. T[he] combinations then reach the [nat]ural limits in the brief peri[od of] time that it takes to call atten[tion] to the materials that both m[edia] have in common.

There is no basic confli[ct be]tween jazz and other types of [mu]sic. Jazz is no fact emot[ional] orgy anymore than serious m[usic] is an esoteric menace in our [...]. The social utility of jazz has m[ade] it the most exportable mus[ic of] America. It has provided the [...] with an effective social too[l. It] cannot, however, enhance the [ar]tistic reputation of American [com]posers abroad, no matter how c[om]plex it becomes.

The important thing for all Am[er]icans to remember is that [both] jazz and serious music are a p[art] of our heritage and that the [dis]tinguishing feature between [them] is that one has developed a[s an] adjunct of social life while [the] other serves the ends of ar[t].

Slusser Signs Indian Contract

Frank Slusser, 21-year-old Florida State University pitchter has been signed to a baseball contract with the Cleveland Indians.

Slusser is the seventh member of the Florida State baseball team to be signed by a major league club, this season. His bonus is reported to be in excess of $10,000.

The righthander won eight games and lost two for FSU this season. He graduated this month.

Slusser was the first Seminole pitcher to win eight games in a single season, he won eight games straight in a row. He is also the first Seminole pitcher to pitch a no-hitter. He pitched an 18-0 perfect game over the University of Miami.

In his last day of action for the Seminoles, he was tagged with two losses in the NCAA District 3 playoffs.

Others who have signed bonus contracts this years are infielders Pfil Hunt and Dick Howser, outfielders Owen McCarron and Mike Copps, and pitchers Dennis Midgette and Chuck Coller.

Copps Goes With Cincinnati

Florida State's heavy-hitting junior rightfielder, Mike Copps from Jacksonville, was the sixth Seminole baseball player to sign a professional bonus contract.

Cincinnati Redlegs scout, Jimmy Bragan, signed Copps in Tallahassee. He is estimated to receive $22,000 and will report to Nashville of the AA Southern Association immediately for probable assignment one of Cincinnati's lower-classification clubs.

Copps was the third Florida State player to receive a bonus of more than $20,000 this year. Infielder Pfil Hunt and All American shortstop Dick Howser both received bonuses at about $22,000.

Bragan said, "Copps is one of the best outfield prospects in the South. We certainly feel be is a major league prospect for us to invest that much in him."

Copps, a 21-year-old, righthand hitter and thrower batted .344 in 26 games as FSU won 21 of 28 games played this season. The 6-0, 170 pounder-Jacksonville Landon High athlete led the club in RBI (28) and total bases (53) with six doubles, three triples and three home runs.

HOWSER ALL-AMERICAN

Florida State's dynamic little shortstop, Dick Howser, has done it again.

A senior from West Palm Beach, Howser was named last week to college baseball's All-America first team for the second year in a row. The 10-man first team, which also includes second baseman Bernie Parrish of Florida, was announced by the American Association of College Baseball Coaches.

A diminutive whiz who stands 5-8 and weighs but 147 pounds, Howser two weeks ago signed a bonus contract with the Kansas City Athletics for a reported $22,000. He currently is playing shortstop for Rochester, Minn. in the Class B Three-I League.

Howser was named to the first-team squad All-America as a junior in 1957. The Florida Sportswriters Association last March voted Howser the state's "Amateur Athlete of the Year" for 1957.

Howser's .422 batting average and 38 hits in 1957 and 29 RBI in 1957 still stand as Florida State school records. He compiled a sizzling .375 three-year batting average for 77 games as a Seminole.

This year, Howser sparked the Seminoles to a 21-7 record with a .337 batting mark. He led the club in runs (32), doubles (7), triples (4) and walks (23). He bagged the 100th hit of his college career in his last appearance at the plate, a ninth-inning triple [illegible] center wall against Clemson in the NCAA District 3 playoffs earlier this month.

With Howser making brilliant plays afield and leading the batting parade the Seminoles won 67 games while losing only 21 over the past three years.

Howser's brilliant fielding and top batting average won the Seminoles 67 games while they lost only 21 games over the past three years.

Parrish topped the 10-man team in hitting with a .433 batting average during the 1958 campaign. Jerry Siegert of Southern California, right fielder, was next with a .404 batting mark and 29 runs batted in.

OTHER ALL AMERICANS

Besides Howser and Parrish, others named to the All-America first team are Frank Sala, 1b, Harvard; Ray Uriarte, 3b Missouri; Dick Griesser [illegible] Arizona; Ron Nieman, cf Wisconsin; Jerry Siegert, rf, Southern Cal; Ralph Holding, c Stanford and pitchers Bob Wedin (8-1) Connecticut and John Rumohr (9-1) Western Michigan.

Litwhiler Gets Summer Post

Danny Litwhiler, Florida State University baseball coach is to set up a summer baseball program next month on the Island of Aruba, Netherlands Antilles.

This overseas trip marks the third trip in two years for the National League outfielder (1940-51) who conducted clinics for the Armed Forces in Japan in 1957 and in Germany last March. Litwhiler plans to leave for Aruba July 15.

Litwhiler's four teams at Florida State have won 84 games against only 27 losses.

Fourteen Baseballers Letter This Season

Athletic Director Tom Nugent announced that fourteen members of Florida State's baseball team that won 21 of 28 games, earned letters during the 1958 campaign.

A school record was set by the Seminoles by winning 13 games in a row from April 25 through June 5.

Four pitchers, four infielders, four outfielders and two catchers will be awarded the letters. Seven are seniors, four juniors, and three sophomores.

Pitchers Frank Slusser, Jack Bristol, Fred Kenney, and Tom Garcia; All-American shortstop Dick Howser, and outfielders Mike Copps, Owen McCarron and Jerry Philip won't be around next season.

Howser, Copps and McCarron recently signed bonus contracts with the Kansas City Athletics, Cincinnati Reds and Detroit Tigers, respectively. Philip, a sure-fingered halfback, goes Canadian by signing a professional Football contract with Toronto.

Returning next season are third baseman Cale Koch, second baseman Ray Bazzell, first baseman Charlie Rodgers, outfielder Jerry Couch, and catchers Westendick and Johnny Sheppard.

Howser and Copps were named last week to the NCAA All-District first team. Koch and Slusser earned second-team berths.

The lettermen, with final 1958 pitching and batting records:

Pitchers—Slusser, 8-2, Nescopek Pa., Bristol, 6-2, Sharon, Conn.; Garcia, 4-1, Fort Myers, Kenney, 2-2, West Palm Beach.

Catchers—Westendick, .328, Tallahassee, Sheppard, .198, Tallahassee.

Infielders—Howser, .337, West Palm Beach; Koch, .310, Clearwater, Rodgers, .267, Jacksonville, Bazzell, .250 Lynnhaven.

Outfielders — McCarron, .365, Nutley, N. J.; Copps, .344, Jacksonville; Couch, .333, Panama City; Philip, .307, Royal Oak, Mich.

up with "homely philosopher" type observation on life. In his soft-spoken voice, he drawls through:

"Them that robs tooo many banks never get to see the Alps." (Moral of a story)

"No mater how pleasant they are to have around, women always slow a man down."

"You can shoot who you like. It's a free country. But if you kill with hate in your heart, all you'll end up with is an upset stomach."

He undoubtedly has the best dialogue, and this is what makes him likable and despicable simultaneously. Widmark plays his cowboy role casually, but still gives the feeling that every word is carefully thought out before it is spoken. He definitely comes out ahead in the personality department. You keep wondering if the good in him will outweigh the bad.

Patricia Owens is the exception to the good characterization. She was dispensable. In fact, she only serves to relieve the boredom of seeing just men, mountains, and bare rocks. She was very remarkable, though, in that she's probably the only woman in the world who can roll down a mountainside, run through a canyon and finish second with just a few dust spots on her dress. She must have been carrying a make-up man in her saddle bag to have come through her desert ordeal looking like she just stepped out of "Godey's Lady's Book."

Robert Middleton, one of the supporting actors who bears a high-cheeked-boned resemblance to Jack Palance, played the role of a gun-slinging preacher's son. Middleton sometimes delivers his lines a little too carefully to be considered a good actor.

Much of the humor of the movie is brought out by the use of sarcasm and the understatement. Widmark, especially, gets his share of jibes. For instance, after be gets in a near gun fight with one of his henchmen, he turns to Patricia Owens and calmly explains, "Just a little difference of opinion, Miss. It happens in the best of organizations."

In summary, it's often witty, but mostly Western.

DR. W. HUDSON ROGERS, editor of "The Best Of Browning," discusses selections of the poet which he read at Wednesday's book review with Dr Milton Carothers, dean of the Graduate School: The FSU English professor is well known as an authority on Browning

Dr. Rogers Discusses Browning

Robert Browning received the well known touch of Dr. W. Hudson Rogers at the weekly book review Wednesday afternoon.

The former head of the English Department usually reads from Browning as a climax of he winter Coffee Hours.

Dr. Rogers, who joined our staff in 1922, edited the famous The Best of Browning with interpretive comments. The English professor's background here includes acting dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, and membership on the State Library Board.

He holds membership in Phi Beta Kappa, the Modern Language Association of America, the National Council of Teachers of English, American Association of University Professors, and many other scholarly, professional, and civic organizations.

Next Wednesday a review will feature Scott Fitzgerald's "Afternoon of an Author," by J. Russell Reaver, associate professor of the English Department.

Press Campers Meet Collins

Enthusiastic summer newspaper instituters from FSU were invited to attend Governor LeRoy Collins' weekly Press Conference last Thursday at the Capitol.

The institutors are high school students who have been attending the FSU School Press Institute, on the University campus for the past two weeks. They observed the Conference and asked questions at the close of the interview.

Governor Collins in his welcoming address to the press remarked that these students from Florida State would someday be occupying their positions at the head of the table.

Capitol correspondents representing the Associated Press Bureau, United Press International, and five other large newspapers throughout the state were present. There were also five television stations recording the Conference.

At the close of the interview, institute photographers cornered the Governor and reporters for pictures Governor Collins climaxed the interview by shaking hands with some of the journalism students as they left.

German Born

Exchange Student Finds US No 'Heaven'

By SUE WATTS

Miss Elke Frank, chosen from 3,000 as one of five International Exchange Students in 1951, found that America isn't quite the heaven that war-torn Germans had expected.

Miss Frank, upon her arrival from Hamburg, Germany, was amazed at the abundance and colorfulness in America but she soon realized that the U. S is, by no means, perfect.

During the year that she lived with an American family in Birmingham, Alabama, she attended and graduated from an American high school.

Relatives of the family with whom she stayed lived in Tallahassee. The attractive blonde, having met the relatives and having seen Florida State University, decided that she would like to attend the University.

She returned home after her graduation, but came back to the States in September of 1953 to begin as a freshman in the School of Journalism.

Aside from keeping up with her work scholastically, Miss Frank worked in her dormitory government. She was also a member of Garnet Key and a member of Phi Kappa Phi She graduated "Cum

ELKE FRANK

Laude" from FSU in 1957 with a Bachelor of Arts degree in Journalism.

In January, Miss Frank began work on her Master's Degree in Political Science. She received a graduate's Assistantship in which she did research for professors. A fellowship will help her through next year. Expecting to have her Master's by next June, she would then like to attend either Yale University or Radcliffe to obtain her Doctor of Philosophy degree.

Her plan for the future is to join the German Diplomatic Service in hopes that she will be sent to America She would like to help America and Germany to know and understand each other better.

"If someone comes to America and really wants to accomplish something he can, because America is a land of great opportunity. Many Americans do not realize this", says Miss Frank She feels that "America has many opportunities and offers much freedom, for which Americans should be grateful and do everything in their power to keep"

Dr. Tinney Is Reserve Lieutenant

Dr. Hilda E Tinney, FSU's Assistant to the Dean of Students, has the unique position of being the only woman in the nation to hold the office of Commandant's Local Representative.

As the representative of the Commandant of the Sixth Naval District she has to know the general plan of the local reserve units and see that instructors carry out the plans correctly. She is the personnel officer for units 6-13 and 6-3 Before this present appointment, she was a training officer Her Naval rank is lieutenant.

"They needed women in the Navy, especially at the beginning of the war, and since I didn't have any family ties, I could see no reason why I shouldn't volunteer my services," Dr. Tinney explained.

She entered the Navy in 1942 and saw 4 years of active service Her duties at various times included, Recreation Director and Women's Reserve Representative. In Washington, D C., she was in charge of women's housing She also worked in Naval Intelligence until V-J Day

Dr Tinney holds her Bachelor of Science in Commerce and received her MA in Administration and Supervision from New York University In 1954 she completed work for her Ph.D in Personnel and Guidance at Columbia University.

In 1946 Dr. Tinney was hired as a teacher in the School of Business and director of the Student Union on the West Campus at FSU. Her administrative duties kept her so busy that she had to drop the teaching position.

As Assistant to the Dean of Students, she is in charge of reservations at Lake Bradford. She works with the Office of Special Events, the University Calendar, the Artists Series, and Admissions. "I do anything the Dean tells me," she said "I try to be his right arm man."

Dr Tinney, who was born in Hummelstowo, Pennsylvania, is a member of Kappa Delta Pi, Delta Pi Epsilon, and Pi Lambda Theta.

INDIAN TRAVELERS—President Strozier's son Bob (right) discusses souvenirs from his 8-month visit in India with Geoffrey Ward, a close friend The boys stayed in the home of Geoffrey's father in New Delhi. Bob inspects a snake charmer's flute while Geoffrey waits with a native violin.

Robert Strozier Jr. Returns From India

By MARSHALL LaCOMBE

Early this June Robert Strozier Jr. (age 18) and his close friend, Geoffry Ward, returned from a trip to India which began last September of 1957. Eight months of anyone's life are bound to have some events worth the telling, particularly when that time is spent abroad, so photographer Tom Maida and myself went to president Strozier's home to see if these two young men had anything to tell us. They did.

"We left by plane from Chicago to New Delhi, with only one stopover, a short one at Beirut, Lebanon . . . It was peaceful then." Bob spoke to us from a chair on one side of the fireplace in the Strozier living room. On the other side sat Geoff (pronounced Jeff) who we discovered had already been to India before, spending some two years there Also in the room were Chuck, Bob's younger brother, and Pogo, a handsome black pooch with the face of a Scotty. Pogo remained in the middle of the rug in a rather disinterested position while we took a conversational tour of modern India, which turned out to be not too different from Kipling's India.

Bob and Geoff lived in the house of Geoff's father, a representative of the Ford Foundation in New Delhi The other side of town is called "Old Delhi," and is just that, full of the color and people of old India.

In Old Delhi the two found Sadu, or "Holy Men," who were actually beggars and some imposters who would live off the predominately Hindu population. The streets were the showplace of Indian magicians, including snake charmers who would sit in the middle of a tight little crowd and tempt the cobras with their gourd-like flutes.

"The cobra can't hear," Bob explained "but the eerie movements of the magician hypnotized him," and he demonstrated the movements of a snake charmer with an Indian flute Chuck had brought into the room.

Geoff claimed the elephants in Jodhpur didn't look so big "until we rode them" Elephants are still used in the villages for heavy labor along with muscle and a gradual increase of mechanized power.

Remembering the jungle stories I had read, I asked Bob if he had seen any tigers.

"Tigers? We went on a two day tiger hunt in our block, which is a hunting preserve, and never sighted one tiger Matter of fact, we never did see a tiger in India, but the country is hopping with deer. In six or seven hunts we got about 20 bucks and many small game such as rabbits."

"Were those the only animals you saw . . elephants, cobras, and deer?"

"Once we set out on a hunting trip around sunset and came upon a leopard setting alongside the road. We parked the jeep and waited; each time a truck came along the big cat would jump back into the trees, and then reappear after the truck passed. At times the leopard was as far from us as Chuck," he motioned across the room to his brother," but he was gone before we could get a shot."

I was curious about the Ganges, the holy river in which the Hindu washed and prayed.

"We saw the Ganges at the village of Benares I'd never go swimming in there."

NO DIVORCES IN INDIA

"Girls," I choked, "what about the Indian girls? Did you date any?" I leaned forward for a reply.

"Yes, I dated a couple of Indian girls, but they were very Westernized Most of the Indian girls wear their viels and saris and aren't permitted to date. They marry around 15 or 16, and that's usually when their husband first sees what they look like. The marriages are fixed by the family, and the wedding is a big event. The bridegroom rides up on a white horse, there's a big band there, and those involved have to go around the fire seven times. The husband sees his wife for the first time in a mirror, then it's for life, for there are no divorces in India."

"PLAYBOY" IN INDIA

"What did you do for entertainment over there? See any movies, American magazines?"

"We got the American movies very late, also the magazines. TIME wasn't too late, but PLAYBOY was. The Indian films are very melodramatic, they usually feature one male and one female singing throughout the film. That gets kind of boring

"The nightclubs are places to go and they're cheaper than the movies They're on prohibition over ther, so they don't serve anything strong, just entertainment We saw a piano player who looked exactly like Count Basie, but he didn't play half as well.

"Dave Brubeck was very popular He attracted large crowds at Bombay and Delhi. We saw him in Ne Delhi"

"Did you see Nehru?"

"Members of my church and I went Christmas caroling around the block where he lived, and he invited us in for half an hour. He's a fine looking man."

WOMEN ARE BOSS

"Were there any other interesting events that happened to you two?"

"I can't remember them all. There was the holiday celebrating Spring, called "Holi," which lasts two days On the first day, especially in the villages, the women become boss and really lord it over the men, hitting them with sticks and ordering them around. Te second day everyone gets a spray gun full of colored water, all different colors, and spray each other. Everything was technicolored, including us.

With all these pleasant diversions, I wondered if they missed anything from the states.

"Well, we had to boil our drinking water for twenty minutes, so I missed milk," Bob told me, "and hamburgers. But I particularly missed baseball and the White Sox." Being a White Sox fan myself we spoke briefly of the many virtues of the "magnificent" ball club, and finished by speaking of the thin bracelets that both Bob and Jeff wore.

"They were given to us by our Sikh friend, and are called "Khkrrah," or friendship bracelets. We're supposed to wear them for life but they probably wouldn't look right when we go to school."

They certainly weren't Ivy League, I thought. "Did you both fly directly back to the states?"

"No, we stopped off at Athens, Rome, Florence, and London. After seeing the Taj Mahal, the Acropolis just looked old. A funny thing happened to us in Rome, if you think you can print it."

"We can," I said.

"Well, the men and women's restrooms were identified by a 'Signore' and a 'Signori,' and we didn't know the difference. (We're still not sure) So we had to make sure no one was around, then duck in while one stood guard."

I privately reflected how I had made that same mistake right here in America, then asked "What about London?"

"In London we met last year's editor of the FLAMBEAU, Charlotte Pointivent, and had a ball together watching the screwballs in Hyde Park. We were also present when all the guards were assembled and getting ready for the Queen's parade. From London we flew home.

Right about then Pogo rolled over, so I knew it was time to leave. We shook hands, and I asked Bob what his plans

"I'm going to Harvard

An FSU without thought, "Well, at least League."

Chemistry Head Gives Resignation

Named To Washington Post As Society's Program Administrator

FSU's head of the chemistry department Dr. Karl Dittmer will leave the faculty next fall to become program administrator for the Petroleum Research Fund administered by the American Chemical Society.

Dr. Dittmer, was head of the chemistry department nine years.

He will assume the new position in Washington some time after Oct 1 The Fund supports fundamental research in any pure science which may eventually be useful in the petroleum field and attempts to aid chemistry teaching and research professors in producing available well trained chemists

FSU President Robert M Strozier expressed regret the University was losing the services of Dr. Dittmer He spoke in praise of Dr. Dittmer's contributions to the research programs by the university and his leadership in bringing to the department many brilliant young chemists

Difficult Decision to Make

Said Dr Dittmer "To leave Florida State University was a most difficult decision to make. It is a very rapidly developing university under the guidance of a strong new administration with solid plans for the future The chemistry department has attained a good national and international reputation in the chemical profession and among schools of higher education. It has a strong, well-balanced faculty and some excellent students

"The State of Florida is undergoing exciting developments with tremendous potential. It is a state endowed with enlightened leadership in Governor LeRoy Collins and his staff. Tallahassee is a beautiful place to live from the standpoint of scenery, climate and above all, its people. Our nine years in Tallahassee have been wonderful "

New Position A Challenge

The new position offers tremendous personal advantages and a challenge and opportunity to develop a national and international program for the support of education and research in fundamental chemistry.

A native of North Dakota the FSU chemist received his bachelor's degree from Jamestown College in 1937 His Master's was earned at the University of Colorado and his Ph D. in biochemistry at Cornell University Medical College where he worked with Nobel Laureate Dr Vincent du-Vigneaud

Before coming here in August 1949, to head the chemistry department, Dr. Dittmer served as a research associate at Cornell and associate professor of chemistry at Colorado He is the author of some 50 publications in the field of amino acid antagonists. Recently he was given the 1958 Florida Award of the American Chemical Society's Florida Section for his outstanding work in building a strong department at FSU and for other contributions to science education and research.

THE GREATEST CARMEN OF OUR TIME, Nell Rankin of the Metropolitan Opera, appeared on campus Wednesday night . The renowned mezzo-soprano sang to a packed house in the only Artist Series program of the summer.

Singer Nell Rankin Stars In Art Series

The Metropolitan Opera's Nell Rankin, a mezzo-soprano who is frequently acclaimed as the greatest Carmen of our time, presented a concert at Florida State University Wednesday as the summer offering of the Artists Series.

A Montgomery, Ala., girl, Miss Rankin rose quickly to fame as a singer, although she had her periods of discouragement. Her story is told in the May issue of Readers Digest, which quoted her father as telling his ambitious child: "You can do anything if you try hard enough."

HAD TO BORROW MONEY

The article follows her career from her debut at Town Hall in New York in 1947. There was a period of discouragement when she had to borrow money for a trip to Switzerland for an audition for the Zurich Opera.

Over 400 contestants from many nations she won top honor of the Concourse de Musique at Geneva and then she was chosen by Milan's La Scala as the leading mezzo-soprano for the one season. Italy selected her to sing the Verdi Requiem on the 50th anniversary of the death of the composer. And finally she joined the Metropolitan.

Glowing tributes by critics have followed nearly every appearance. Said the New York Times: "She has flawless tonal beauty; a voice of power and range as warm and rich as the red color of the dress she wore " And the Times of London: "The most glorious sounds Wigmore Hall has heard."

"THE MALE ANIMAL"—Shown practicing for the coming Speech Department production are left to right Victor Harkey, Barbara Rush, Ben Magee, Jamie Conner and Lorna Doone Carr using the phone.

Open-Circuit Later

Closed-Circuit E-TV Due Here By January

Florida State University plans to have closed circuit educational television by January, 1959. Also, an application to build a ten-kilowatt transmitter that will broadcast open circuit is being prepared now for presentation to the Federal Communications Commission by the University, but the date when the open circuit will begin operating is not known.

Most of the equipment needed for th station has already been purchased and construction of the studio will begin soon, according to Roy Flynn, manager of the station. The studio will be located in the Graduate Hall, which used to be the FSU library, in the periodical room.

At least two viewing rooms will be located on campus in which students can receive the programs. They can also be viewed on regular sets in the dormitories.

It is assumed that the code number of the station will be WFSU-TV

When the station begins operating on open circuit over channel 11, its broadcasts will be received for a radius of approximately 70 miles. It will become a link in a statewide educational television network that eventually will connect all state institutions of higher learning

At first the station will broadcast only two or three hours daily. It is hoped that the station will later be able to broadcast for longer periods of time. WFSU-TV will serve as a laboratory for radio and television majors and will be handled by qualified students who have reached a certain level of development, according to Flynn.

In order to train faculty members how to instruct over television, a television workshop is being conducted on the FSU campus during the last 2½ weeks of summer school, July 24- August 9 Workshop coordinator is Mrs Kathleen Lardie, a specialist in educational television and manager of WDTR of the Detroit Public Schools.

It has not yet been decided what courses will be taught over TV, but they probably will be on the freshman and sophomore levels, to aid nearby junior colleges. They will include courses from several different fields. Films from the educational TV center in Ann Arbor, Mich., will also be broadcast over the station.

Educational TV is new, it has been in operation only five years, says Flynn, but several cities and state already have it. Alabama already has a state-wide network. Other cities and states include Atlanta, Memphis, North Carolina, Chicago, Michigan, and St. Louis

Flynn sees several advantages in educational TV "In the first place," he says, "it has in many cases and will make good teachers available to more people. In adult education, it will make it more convenient to get an education.

"I think educational TV will answer a lot of these shortages, but aside from the shortages, it has advantages of its own. The student has a chance of a close up view "

But it has its shortcomings too. The teacher does not have direct contact with students. The student does not have the opportunity to ask questions With a state-wide network, it can mean standardization of instruction, but this can be minimized by programs that emphasize individual differences, says Flynn.

There have been some objections to educational TV, but a lot of them have been by" . . . people (who) are disturbed at the thought of having to adapt to a new situation," says Flynn

'Tell Him Why' Says Ex-Judge

Don't lock a delinquent up without telling him why, a retired juvenile judge from Jacksonville told the First Annual Delinquency Control Institute which ended its second week of study here last week.

"If you deprive a boy or girl of liberty you'd better make him understand it," said Walter S Criswell, who was judge of the Juvenile Court of Duval County from 1923 until his retirement in 1954

Unless the sentencing judge makes the youth feel that what is being done is best for him then the task will fall to the school to which he is sent, said Judge Criswell and when the school doesn't convince him its program is for his benefit "he'll be hard to handle when he gets out "

Judge Criswell was one of a panel of three juvenile judges who talked to and answered questions from 14 police officers, Juvenile court workers and others attending the institute sponsored by the School of Social Welfare under the direction of Dr. Vernon Fox, head of the corrections program

Others were W Troy Hall Jr., County and Juvenile Court Judge of Lake County and president of the Florida County Judges Association, and O D. Howell Jr. of Tampa, judge of the Juvenile and Domestic Relations Court of Hillsborough County and president of the Florida Juvenile Judges Association

TOURS TO JACKSONVILLE

Yesterday and today the 14 attending the institute visited installations for juveniles at Jacksonville.

Criswell, a former president of the National Council of Juvenile Judges, also advised persons dealing with delinquents or anyone else not to assume anything but that "basically, you and he are brothers. When you think you are better than he, then there's something wrong with your assessment of him "

Delinquents, he said, are not significantly different in intelligence and physical endowment from others. What is different, he said, is that something has happened to them emotionally —"They have been hurt "

Dance Tomorrow Night

The Student Center, tomorrow night is holding a dance to all those interested.

The music for the dance will be provided by the G-Bach Orchestra. The dance will start at 9:00 p.m. and end at 12

This is not a formal dance. Come as you please.

Construction Begins On New Dormitories

Flambeau Photo by Jack Kearce

SOONER OR LATER A BIGGER ONE COMES ALONG—West Hall has been the largest structure around these parts for several years. Now, like Texas, there are plans afoot for a bigger one . . .

Women's Dorm Ready For '59

Contractors have moved onto the sites of two new construction projects on campus an 11-story men's residence hall which will house 570 and an eight-story women's residence hall which will house 270.

The contractors arrived here Wednesday to begin the construction of the buildings

WOMEN'S DORM FOR FALL '59

The women's dormitory, south of Florida Hall, is to be completed in 15 months and the men's dormitory, north of West Hall, in 18 months The first thus is expected to be ready for occupancy in mid-semester during the fall of 1959 and the other by the start of the spring semester in February, 1960.

BOTH COST 2½ MILLION

Dr. Jack Rollow, FSU director of housing, said the Winchester Construction Co of Tallahassee holds the $951,811 contract for the women's dormitory and the Allen M. Campbell Co. of Tyler, Tex the contract for the $1,597,000 men's dormitory

Of the same size and height as West Hall the tallest building in Tallahassee, the men's dormitory will be somewhat different in design There will be two parallel wings A two-story wing off the entrance lobby will house a lounge and library. The rooms, 11 by 14 feet, will have two bunks.

SIMILAR TO OLD

The women's dormitory will be quite similar to Florida Hall, the present eight-story women's dormitory Among the features are sewing and typing rooms on the ground floor, lounges on each residence floor and a sun deck at the top The rooms, with twin beds, will be 17 by 12.

The two buildings are being built and furnished out of a $2,300,000 federal loan, to be repaid out of rentals, along with a $950,000 state appropriation.

400-500 Needed

Many Positions Available For School Administrators

A program of graduate study will begin next Fall, in which future college deans, presidents, counselors and teachers may prepare for the many new positions in higher education.

President Robert M. Strozier and Dean Mode L. Stone of the School of Education said it is estimated 400 or 500 new faculty members will bee needed annually during the next 12 years in Florida instiutions alone. The figure nationally has been estimated at about 10,000.

FSU's program, which Dr Stone said is the first of the sort in the South, is designed to help prepare the well qualified personnel needed for these positions. The program will be comparable, he said, with programs in other sections of the country conducted by such institutions as the University of California, University of Minnesota, University of Michigan, and New York University.

The FSU program is an expansion of one already under way for junior college staff members. Florida is rapidly expanding a system of junior colleges, with six new ones to be started next fall To prepare teachers for them FSU last fall began a graduate program under the direction of Dr. James W Thornton, former vice-president of Orange Coast College in California

The education dean said the FSU program will have a course covering the whole field of teaching in college, along with a seminar on curriculum This course and seminar will be available to everyone who plans to teach in the field of higher education. In addition to these courses it is planned to offer more specialized instruction in fields of interest to future presidents, deans registrars business managers and others.

Advanced students will be able, for instance, to specialize in junior college work, student personnel work, organization and administration, financing and research, all in higher education

Some of the FSU faculty members experienced particularly in these fields are Dr A B Martin, university vice-president, and Dr W Hugh Stickler, professor of higher education and director of institutional research and service.

It is planned eventually, he said, to have a special summer program of workshops, institutes and conferences on higher education problems

The FSU program, although concentrated especially in the School of Education, will draw heavily upon the services of other divisions

Migrant Child Problems Aired

The director of the FSU Workshop on Teaching Migrant Children said last week that a language barrier now often complicates the already difficult problem of educating children who follow the crops.

The schooling problem is difficult enough, said Prof. H. A Curtis, since if in school at all the children of migrant families are likely to be there from only a few days up to three months.

And now, he said, one of the principal concerns has become educating Spanish-speaking children. The problem was one of the principal ones discussed by 10 teachers and principals attending the workshop which completed a three-week session last week.

Florida is particularly concerned with the language problem, Dr. Curtis said, because Texas Mexicans, well liked as laborers in the winter fruit and vegetable area of South Florida, are coming to the state in heavy numbers during harvest seasons.

TEACHERS HELPLESS

"A teacher feels pretty helpless," said Dr Curtis, "when little Jose comes to school and can't say a word in English " To help teachers of migrant children bridge the communication barrier a language consultant, Mrs. Maria Lacayo, helped the workshop develop a "Handbook of Colloquial Spanish for the Teacher of Migrant Children "

The 30-page manual provides in handy form the Spanish equivalents of such classroom sentences as "Open your book to page ——", "Five minus two equals three," "Please go and blow your nose," "In our class we don't throw paper towels" and "Put your shirt-tail in."

Agricalturist

Dr. William H. Metzler, an agricultural economist with the U. S. Department of Agriculture who has studied the economic problems of migrants since the days of the California "Oakies," told the group the current recession is going hard on migrants.

When the South lost its sharecroppers, he said migrancy resulted. "Migrancy is actually the step between sharecropping and other jobs."

Dr. Metzler suggested teachers could "teach migrant children values of money. As long as they are easy marks there will be people around looking for them. Such teaching will increase their economic status in the community."

FSU Accepted Into Lab Group

Florida State University has joined eight other Southern universities as an institutional member of the Highlands Biological Laboratory in North Carolina.

Dr. Leland Shanor, head of the department of biological sciences at FSU, announced that the university was given membership during a recent annual meeting at the laboratory

Under the arrangement, Dr. Shanor said, FSU researchers will have research space in the laboratory for work in botany, zoology and other sciences Several already have done research there.

Dr. R. K Godfrey, professor of botany, was named at the annual meeting to the board of managers of the laboratory and Dr Shanor was elected president of the board of trustees of which he already was a member.

Other participating institutions are Duke, University of North Carolina State, University of Tennessee, Vanderbilt, University of Georgia, University of Florida and Wesleyan College.

News Contest Will Be Held

Professor Earl A McIntyre of the School of Journalism has announced that a weekly newspaper contest will again be sponsored in connection with the North Florida Fair

49 States After 46 Years?

Congratulations are almost in order. The United States is giving birth for the first time in 46 years. Alaska is about to become a state.

The largest state in the union, for that matter, with a land area two and a half times that of Texas. The 200,000 residents will add two seats to the Senate, a total of 98, and another Congressman, bringing that number up to 436.

The congratulations seem a bit skeptical, however, from most parts of the present 48 states. The fight for Alaska's statehood has been long and bitter, with due cause.

Juneau, the capital city, is rather remote. In fact, anyone who dislikes flying and gets air-sick is completley without hope of ever seeing the capital of our state-to-be. No highways connect it with either Canada or the U. S. And people complain of Tallahassee's being an out-of-the-way state capital?

Although the territory has vast natural resources which should please American economists, we wonder if they really will pay off in the long run. Rolling ribbons of highway don't seem to have much of an affinity for the uranium fields.

The Tampa Morning Tribune points out the following:

"True, Alaska has gold, silver, platinum, uranium, iron and a number of other strategic minerals; it has coal, oil and tremendous timber reserves; it has its great salmon fishing industry.

"But Alaska's resources are fenced in by a formidable handicap—remoteness from markets. In this frontier country of mountains and forests and glaciers, transportation is a terrific problem.

"Because of transportation difficulties, plus a scarcity of croplands, 95 per cent of Alaska's food must be imported. Living costs are sky-high; they run about one third more than in the nearest American city, Seattle. Wages are high, too — truck drivers make $4 an hour, barbers charge $2.50 for a haircut.

"But, despite these prices, Alaska is not all boom. In Anchorage, the biggest city (95,000 population) U. S. News & World Report estimates there 'are more jobless men walking the streets than in most communities of like size in the United States.' Gold mining and salmon fishing are declining. Pulp-and-paper making, a promising new enterprise, is hurt by high production costs. There's an oil rush on but the extent of the field is yet to be proved. Alaska's most profitable industry actually is the military service, which maintains a costly network of air and radar stations to guard the approaches to Russia. More than two-thirds of Alaska's annual income is from federal spending."

Next on the agenda for Congress is Hawaii. They too have been engaged in the struggle for statehood, and the Alaskan victory seems a good omen. The little matter of the United States literally being sprawled across oceans seems to bother no one. Just hitch up the Conestogas, paw, we're at it again!

Imperialistic? Who, us?

Please Give Us Time

The captive audience wishes to register a complaint. Library hours have long (they're not) been under fire, but seemingly to no avail. Each year we have asked for an extension of hours, particularly those on the weekend. And each year we have been refused.

Students are supposed to study. The rule books say so. And yet it seems as though not too terribly much has been done to help us. The Library is open for three hours on Sunday, the last day of the weekend. And naturally Sunday evening is about the best time to get assignments all into a pile for Monday.

Women can't even turn down Saturday night dates this summer to study. Saturday nights have also been eliminated from the librarians' agenda.

The Saturday night deletion is a wise one, we agree. But why not open Sunday nights instead? Don't open until 9.00 Saturday morning. After all, no one is there to keep the librarians and mice company much before then.

The money that is saved there could be tacked onto an extra hour for Sunday. Even add 15 cents more to the registration fee, if necessary, to pay for the extra help. That would add about $1200 to the budget.

Won't someone listen to us?

NATURAL RESOURCE

It takes more than rain and lack of money to daunt American enthusiasm. Just about our largest natural resource is optimism, and Americans are telling the world about it in Brussels this summer.

Cowgirls, Sioux Indians and genuine ranch hands are staging a Wild West and Rodeo show near the World's Fair in Brussels. But torrents of rain have helped the show to go broke, although the audience of 6.000 on opening night helped to boost morale. Attendance has dropped to 2.000 per night since.

At last report, the troopers were ready to get jobs at the fair grounds during the day to keep the show afloat—literally. Whether they succeed or not, they gave it the old American try.

Florida: Land Of Crime

The United States is faced today with one of the gravest dangers of our history —a national crime syndicate that has become so firmly entrenched in many of our major cities that it threatens to eventually take over and control our nation. This was evidenced by the findings of the Senate Crime Committee under the chairmanship of Senator Estes Kefauver in 1950-51.

This syndicate, linked with Mafia, the international crime organization centralized in Sicily and specalizing n narcotics, has turned Miami into what was called a "polluted playground". In Tampa, it was found that two mobs, one ruled by Mafia and the other by local criminals of Puerto Rican origin, fight for control of this great city.

The problem is near to us both in place and time. Just last month a Tampa mobster named Diaz was murdered in this gang warfare and if the past is any indication, this murderer will go free, proving onece again that organized crime can do just about what it wishes.

The Congressional Rackets Committee reports that now the Syndicate is muscling into labor unions from coast to coast. How much farther will we let them go? Will we remain complacent about the situation while they continue to entrench themselves until we are helpless to free ourselves, until we are the slaves of these mobsters?

There is much that we as individuals can do. Senator Kefauver listed 22 legislative recommendations that would curb the Syndicate's activities. "Help us pass those bills which will provide the ammunition for the war against organized crime in America," he pleaded with the public. These recommendations are too lengthy to list here, but they may be found in almost any public library in his book Crime in America.

Finally, one of the greatest fronts in the battle is in Florida at the present time. Bolita, one of the greatest sources of revenue of the criminal, is now the subject of a state-wide campaign. We, as citizens of Florida, must do all that is in our power to support this drive.

Writer Finds Mechanic Mania or Slow Ball Makes Fast Play

By MARSHALL LACOMBE

As a public service to car owners and borrowers, and with due regard to mechanics and garagemen from coast to coast, this columnist will endeavor to deliver a narrative explaining the functions and organisms of the average automobile.

Since I am ignorant of the quirks and palpitations of the average internal combustion machine, this information will be conveyed directly from the mechanic's mouth. The reader must allow for distortion due to my ignorance of technical terms, and the fact that the mechanic had a dead cigar butt stuck between his teeth.

After waiting 45 minutes for the garageman to return from some secret mision in the rear of the shop (probably giving artificial respiration to his cigar) I pushed my sick car onto the operating ramp. The mechanic stuck some dirt under his fingernails and smeared a little grease on his forehead and walked over.

"Whattsa trouble, mate?"

"She won't work . . . mate," I answered.

"Umph."

At this point he opened the lid over the motor and looked at it for a while, twiddling little thingamabobs every once in a while.

"Get in and goose her."

I thought about this for a while, and then decided he wanted me to accelerate the motor. I did, and it jumped a foot forward, wheezed a little, and stopped.

The mechanic got up from under the wheel, wiped a little oil in his eyes, and cursed.

"Take her out of gear, #!Q% mate!"

I acknowledged his suggestion, started the starter, and listened to her wheeze.

"Okay, hand me that no. 8 shatzam driver!"

"Uh-h, where is it?"

He looked at me like he would a cockroach sitting in the middle of an expensive rug, realizing the messy spot I'd make if he stepped on me.

"Between the no. 7 and no. 8 shatzam drivers."

"Naturally," I laughed, and started looking Fifteen minutes later he told me to never mind, he'd use his fingers.

"See this latch valve over the mechanism hub? Well, I've got to remove the gasket lever to reach the shaft shield and disconnect gizmo plate, releasing the blood clot in the fuel injection system so I can install a '48 Pilvo. Your's burned out."

I nodded about ten times before opening my mouth.

"Pilvo, eh?"

"Yup, '48!"

"Couldn't you use a penny in place of it?"

He gave me the cockroach look again, this time without the expensive rug.

"How much?" I asked, asserting myself.

"2.80, plus tax, lease . . . . total of $3.20."

"Uh huh."

"That's without labor." He looked at his cigar as it was looking back

"Okay . . . I guess How long will it take?"

He stuck the cigar back into place, shrugged his shoulders and started disconnecting gizmos and gaskets.

After a few rousing refrains of "Nosey Rosie, the girl from San Jose," he slid out from under the car and looked at me, still humming the tune.

"Mate, you've got a shot jazbo pipe under the bristing axel. It's gotta come out!"

"Will it be painful?"

"$1.15, plus tax, total of $1.67."

"Amputate!"

He slid under and picked up the tune "Nosey Rosey," in a different key.

I looked around the shop. Everything looked dark and dirty, like a dungeon might look during the Spanish Inquisition, with various implements for torture scattered about. Among them I found the no. 8 shatzam driver, between the 7 and 9. I decided against bringing it to him, prefering to let dead dogs lie

While exploring his "personal" corner, stocked with odds and ends of varying sentimental attachments, including a photograph of what looked like his mother, I also found numerous reading paraphenalia about the Detroit Tigers. Among these magazines were two carefully wrapped baseballs, one signed by Harvey Kuenne, the other by Al Kaline, both Detroit outfielders. I made a mental note of this and returned to the car, which looked healthier as the mechanic slid out from underneath.

"That's that! Had to adjust the barrel nut on the head coil so it wouldn't rub against the grabsnatch when you release your clutch. Everything else seems okydoke! $19 31 including labor."

He stared at me calmly, adjusting his cigar so it balanced his face. I forced down the panic that rose from within.

"$19 31, uh? Cash or check?"

"Ch-uh, cash-uh, it doesn't matter."

I knew my readiness to pay would throw him off balance, the count is three and two, now for the pitch! I started pawing my wallet, peering into its secrets, looking up at the mechanic who was almost swallowing his cigar. I muttered under my breath.

"There goes my series ticket and a chance to see the TIGERS win the pennant. Ah well, they'll never miss me."

He slowly removed his cigar and took an intimate step toward me.

"Yo . . . YOU'RE a Detroit fan?"

"Uh huh. Always wanted to see'm, too. C'est la . . . I mean, that's life!"

Before I knew what was happening I had two baseballs in my hands, with the autographs of Harvey Kuenne and Al Kaline, and we were making dirty jokes about the Yankees. I was invited to a home-cooked meal by his wife, during which time we would discuss chances of getting a series ticket. He wrote out a bill for $4 87, adding,

"Dinner's at five!"

That afternoon I visited the library and read all about the Tigers.

I suppose if there's a moral, it's this one: "You don't find good mechanics, you make them!"

"SOME GUYS NEVER HAVE ANY TROUBLE GETTIN' A GIRL."

Deliriums Of A Dean or Fantasy Of The Futur[e]

By DONALD LOUCKS
Dean of Men

While sitting in my always turbulent and sometimes terrifying office during one of those infrequent moments of calm last spring, there passed through my mind a series of unrelated ideas and projects which, if they became facts not fancies, would enrich the lives of every member of our university family.

Admittedly, some are of more merit than others; some are more far-reaching than others; and some may even border on being purely machinations of a mind weakened by too long an association with the Dean of Men's office. All, perhaps are controversial: some for financial reasons, others simply because human nature is a variant.

Be that as it may, for what they are worth, here are four suggested ideas and/or projects, defended to some extent by their originator but open to all for modification and criticism; These are separate, unrelated ideas; hence, they will be presented without regard to order or importance. This list might have been expanded; but that relative calm mentioned previously was, as it always is, short-lived.

CAMPUS NEWSCAST

The first of the fantasies concerns campus communication. Daily, we hear statements made by students and faculty along this line: "I wish I had known this or that event was scheduled for today;" or " I didn't know Professor Chattermouth was reviewing that book," or "I intended to see that basketball game last night but it slipped my mind."

Athletic events, musical recitals, stage productions, well-known lecturers, and multifarious internal happenings of note on our campus frequently come and go with far less support than they deserve and might have had if better means of communication had been available. All this despite a very excellent and informataive THIS WEEK, a widely read FLAMBEAU, eye-catching posters, multicolored schedules and mimeographed announcements.

It appears to me that a much more effective method of spreading information of this kind to our university family would be one which includes not only our sense of sight but our sense of hearing as well. People dont have to read but they must listen to some extent. (College professors may disagree with this latter statement.) Simply closing your eyes during a TV commercial doesn't eliminate the sound.

Why wouldnt' it be practical for the University to set up a communication system geared to reach every area of our campus? Such a system would be used for periodic broadcasts of carefully screened and selected items of interest and informataion to our student body and faculty. Some controls obviously, would have to be set up to prevent such things coming over the loudspeakers as: "For sale, one slightly used typewriter," or "To be given away: seven baby kittens," etc.

Times and frequencies of the newscasts for maximum consumption could easily be determined. Perhaps at the end of a class period in the middle of the morning and afternoon while students were enroute between classes might be a good time. Setting up a definite and exact time of day for these announcements would be necessary in order to establish the listening habit. A three-minute period would permit approximately 330 words of carefully edited up-to-the minute news.

PEDESTRIAN UNDERPASS

The next project is one involv- the safety and welfare of our students, a timely and appropriate subject always. This university subscribes to the policy that it is wise to take every precaution possible to prevent accidents by providing for the safety of our students. When such precautions are taken, the likelihood of law suit will diminish and the question of negligence will be eliminated.

On the north side of highly travelled Tennessee Street (U. S. 90) are located three fraternity houses and a men's residence hall. To reach their classes hundreds o[f] [stu]dents make this hazardous cro[ssing] daily; and were not most of [them] nimble, agile, and alert (S[...] Hall is the athletes' res[idence] hall), we might well have h[ad a] serious accident by now

Everyone agrees that soon[er or] later someone is going to be [in]jured by a vehicle in this a[rea]. Everyone shudders at the tho[ught]. Everyone does nothing. Why [not] a pedestrian underpass simil[ar to] those found in large cities [to] safely provide for the daily c[ross]ing of busy thoroughfares [by] thousands? Campus engineers [have] indicated that the terrain in [this] area lends itself to such a pr[oject].

RECREATION AREA

South of the new Men's G[ym]nasium and east of the ath[letic] fields is located a part of [the] campus seldom used by our s[tu]dent body, at least not by gr[oups] yet representing a potential [for] pleasure and recreation wh[ich] surely should be exploited [This] is the pleasant, wooded area w[hich] serves primarily as a bird sa[nc]tuary at the present, a func[tion] hardly justifiable in view of [the] eight thousand or more stude[nts] and faculty who might we[ll be] utilizing the area in a number [of] ways.

Nell Rankin Delights FSU

Nell Rankin sang from works by Handel, Johannes Brahms, Franz Schubert and Georges Bizet here Wednesday. Highlights of the programe were two numbers, "Habanera" and "Sequidilla", from "Carmen". During part of her five encores, she sang three well-known numbers, "Danny Boy", "Vienna, My City of Dreams," and "All the Things You Are." Miss Rankin was accompanied by Paul Parmelee at the piano.

Although she is only 32, Miss Rankin towers over the world of vocal art today. She made her public debut at the age of four starring on her own radio program. In 1950, Miss Rankin became the first American in history to win the coveted first prize in Geneva's famous International Concours de Musique.

Backstage, Miss Rankin was very gracious in giving us an in[terview] and signing autographs Asked [her] favorite opera, Miss Rankin sa[id] "Carmen. It offers the most p[os]sibilities for dramatic interpre[ta]tion."

Ah, Those Fire Drills!

By LANE GOURLIE

"Clan-n-n-ng", mumbled groans and unladylike mummerings, shuffled slippers, stabs of glaring light, and exodus. Fire drills in the women's dorm.

These delightful little events are always sprung after midnight, the witching hour for fire marshals And what a picture they are!

Bleary-eyed coeds straggle from the buildings in the amazing speed of 3:48 for an eight floor dorm. Curlers bobble down the steps stop the cursing throng.

Then the charmingly-clad coeds grin with fiendish glee as they watch lights pop on across the street, and smile cheerfully as they see others struggle with complaining windows and swollen doors. Life does have its bright moments after all.

Men, sparked by male intu[i]tion, have been waiting ten minu[tes] for the delightful vision After all, how often do they have a chance to see about 500 coeds smeared with cold cream and adorned with curlers, worn slippers, and dragging housecoats?

Oh well, they couldn't possibly dream up more than a dozen more of these delightful events th[is] summer. Or could they?

FSU MEETS THE BARON

Basketball talk in July? May sound odd but with the ...cation of the 1958-59 Seminole basketball schedule I ... a few comments in that vein would be appropo.

As one looks at the schedule the first thing you see is: ...mber 1—FSU vs. KENTUCKY, at Louisville.

Florida State has been playing basketball for ten ...s Starting in 1947 they have completed ten seasons ...now they have moved up to scheduling the top team ...e nation—the defending 1958 NCAA Champions.

IT'S HAPPENED BEFORE

However, this isn't the first time the Seminoles have ...top flight competition. Last year they went against ... Virginia, who at that time was ranked number one ...e nation. Also there was Xavier, who finished the sea... as the NIT Champions.

Going into their eleventh season and having finished ...ast one with a 9-16 record, it appears that FSU is not ... going all-out in football, but basketball as well.

The question arises—Are the Seminoles ready for this ...otch competition? In basketball their overall record ...s at 135-128 for a percentage of .513.

...this the kind of record that you go into top flight ...petition with? Maybe Coach Bud Kennedy has a new ...et weapon" and feels that now is the time to make ...own. We hope so.

WILL GATORS' LUCK HOLD?

Another item on the 1958-59 schedule is the fact that ...season will be the first time the Florida Gators appear ...e FSU gym—a team that through some quirk of fate ...never been beaten by the Seminoles. Will playing ...e FSU gym make any difference or will the Gators' ...hold here as well as in Gainesville? Time and time ... will tell . . .

The question has often come up, just when does a ... become "big time?" Some say that FSU has reached ...g time, others say that it will be a couple of years ...but if playing top billed teams is an indication of big ... then I say FSU has arrived.

CAN'T CALL 'EM SMALL

You can't put names like Georgia Tech, Auburn, Ten...ee, Oklahoma City U., West Virginia, Xavier and ...cky on your schedules and still call your team small. ... opinion FSU is not trying to get into big time, but ... are there and are hoping to be recognized as such.

Though the Seminoles haven't been able to defeat any ...ese powers at least when sports writers around the ... say anything about the games (defeats) they have ...ent on FSU and here the old association rule will ...true

... Florida State is mentioned with the big powers, then ... be too long before they are being considered as ...me by themselves.

... little backing and loyalty goes a long way . . .

Kennedy Optimistic On '58-'59 Season

By CHUCK MYNARD
Assistant Sports Editor

Coach Bud Kennedy has the nucleus for a tough well-balanced team next season. The emphasis will be on a club which is fast and conditioned and can run with the best of them. Added strength is anticipated under the basket.

With a difficult but extremely attractive schedule, both at home and away, the Seminoles will have to produce a top-notch effort to achieve a winning record.

Addition of more home games is as welcome to players and coaches as it should be to FSU fans. FSU's long time nemesis, the University of Florida, is finally coming to Tallahassee for a game on the hardwood court. With the home advantage reversed the Seminoles may be on the opposite side of that one point margin in last winter's game in Gatorland.

Returning from last year's team which compiled a 9-16 record, are Hugh Durham, Jim Liteky, Joe Williams, and Fred Woodward at guards, Dan Boitz and Jim Casteel at center, and forward Jim Savage.

The team is sure to feel strongly the loss of last year's captain Larry Strom, a two-year stalwart at forward, Tom Garcia, a pint-sized playmaker guard who exerted a steadying influence on his mates whenever he was on the floor, and Joe Westhafer, a reserve forward who played capable ball all season.

DURHAM BROKE RECORDS

Durham broke several scoring records during his sophomore year but was hampered in the past season by an ankle injury inflicted in the Florida game. He didn't return to top form until late in the season. Coach Kennedy has high hopes for Durham and says that he is a great competitor and team player as well as being a constant scoring threat.

Durham is player-manager of one of eight teams in a summer basketball league here at FSU. Games are played at 7:30 and 8:30 P.M. each Monday and Wednesday in the men's gymnasium. The conditioning and practice obtained here should pay rich dividends for FSU in the coming campaign. With Jim Liteky as his running-mate and Joe Williams and Fred Woodward in reserve, guard appears to be the strongest position on next year's squad.

Danny Boltz, a 6'7" giant, has always been aggressive under the backboards and showed promise of improving his offensive punch during the latter part of last season.

Kennedy expects Boltz to reach his full potential in time for the opening tip-off this fall. Jim Casteel provides depth at the center post and Jim Savage appears ready to step into the shoes of Larry Strom, a formidable assignment.

FROSH PROSPECTS

Several freshman prospects will be attempting to break into the varsity lineup after promising performances the past season. Among them are Charles Tinsley and Bill Archer, big men who can fire that ball, Moler Hobbs, Bud Whitehead, Bobby Conrad, and Jim Daniel. There is also a possibility of additional material coming from junior colleges.

BALANCED ATTACK

Coach Kennedy's main emphasis will be on a balanced scoring attack. The little men will still be able to loosen up the opposition with long set shots and aggressive play under the baskets will keep the pressure on the rival team.

The team has a good potential. Fair size, conditioning, good competitive spirit, and high morale will be factors in the Seminole's favor when they step on the court to face last year's national champions, the Kentucky Wildcats. Coach Kennedy is optimistic and anticipates an interesting season for all.

Grid Season Ticket Sales Near Deadline

Less than six weeks remain for the general public to buy season tickets for Florida State's 1958 home football games—and possibly for the Seminoles' Nov. 2 clash with the University of Florida.

Athletic Business Manager Eddie Cubbon says the public will have until Aug. 15 to order season books for the Seminoles' Tallahassee games with Tennessee Tech, Furman, Wake Forest, Virginia Tech, and Tampa.

After August 15, individual tickets will go on sale.

Cubbon pointed out that about the only chance for a member of the general public to buy a ticket for Florida State's inaugural game with the University of Florida Nov. 22 is through the purchase of a season book.

Season ticket purchasers have the opportunity to match the number of season tickets with individual tickets to the Seminoles' games with Georgia in Jacksonville (Oct. 11) and Florida in Gainesville (Nov. 22).

Priority for Florida game tickets, Cubbon said, goes to season ticket holders, members of Seminole Boosters, Inc., and active members of Florida State's Alumni Association.

Florida State has received 10,400 tickets as its allotment for the Florida State-Florida game, Cubbon said. However, 5,000 of the tickets are for students, leaving only 5,400 tickets for season ticket buyers, Boosters, alumni, and the general public here.

Season tickets for Florida State's five home games are $17. A seven-game season book, including the five home games and Georgia and Florida games is $25.

Orders for tickets, accompanied by check or money order payable to Florida State University, should be mailed to the Athletic Ticket Office in Tallahassee.

Outdoor Recreation Is Offered At Reservation

Flambeau Photos by Tom Maida

ENJOYING FUN 'N SUN at the Seminole Reservation on Lake Bradford is attractive coed, Toni Hagar, an FSU Junior attending summer school. At the lake one can swim, boat, play several sports ,or just soak up sun as Miss Hagar is doing

Fun 'N Sun For Everyone

Florida State University students have a rare opportunity for outdoor recreation on the 89 acre FSU Reservation. Facilities are available at no cost to any University students on Tuesdays through Sundays.

Mrs. Ruth Dekalb, resident hostess, is on duty to aid you in having a pleasant time while there. Attendence has been somewhat desultory this summer, possibly because of the accelerated summer school program. However, the reservation provides a welcome outlet to pressures. It is FSU property though and no alcoholic beverages are allowed.

Water Front Open

For the first time since 1954 the waterfront at the camp is open. The water level in Lake Bradford returned to normal during the heavy rains last winter enabling this step to be taken.

Swimming and boating, under the supervision of a corps of five lifeguards, are now available. Polly Chapman is head lifeguard and Davis Atkinson is in charge of boating and gives canoe tests to persons interested for one hour before the waterfront opens for swimming.

Waterfront facilities include 64 dressing rooms and are open on Fridays from 3-7 p.m., Saturdays from 1-6 p.m., and Sundays from 2-6 p.m. A snack bar is maintained during the hours that the waterfront is open.

Barbecue Pits

Barbeque pits are available for outside cooking and volleyball, badminton, shuffle board, and horseshoes may be enjoyed daily. One cabin is also open at all times and is equipped with a juke box and a ping pong table. The boathouse roof is wired for electricity so that open air dancing is possible there.

The grounds close to the general student body at dark but campus groups may make reservations for organized parties in the evenings. There is also cabin space for about 200 overnight residents. These are available for non co-ed student organizations.

For information or reservations contact Dr. Tinney, phone university ext 8-3411 or Mrs. Ruth Dekalb at 2-2212. All cabins are furnished with complete kitchens for your convenience in preparations for parties or extended stays.

Sleeping Quarters

The camp has provided sleep-quarters for various visiting groups in the past. Athletic teams, high school students for "Know Your Government" programs, and religious organizations have utilized the auxiliary housing as well as fraternities and sororities temporarily without a house.

Mrs. Dekalb emphasized the necessity of making reservations as far in advance as possible because of demands on the limited available space. Several weekends have already been booked for the Fall semester and she said that the remaining ones will probably go quickly when the Fall program swings into action on campus.

At the present time there are no university busses for transportation to and from the camp but if demand seems great enough since the waterfront has reopened this service may be resumed.

The FSU Reservation is the only camp of its type owned and operated by an institution of this kind. FSU's students should be aware of their good fortune and make full use of it.

Seminoles To Meet Kentucky In Basketball Season Opener

Florida State's Seminoles will play a 22-game 1958-59 basketball schedule that features six games with Southeastern Conference teams and a season opener against Kentucky's defending national champion Wildcats.

The 22-game agenda for Coach J. K. (Bud) Kennedy's 11th season, announced today, calls for the independent Seminoles to play 10 games at home and 12 on the road.

It includes a pair of games in the first Citadel invitational tournament in Charleston, S. C., Dec. 19-20, when Florida State collides with The Citadel, Miami (Fla.) and Georgia.

Playing increasingly tougher schedules, Florida State runs into prestige-packed opposition early. The Seminoles clash with Kentucky in Lexington Dec. 1 to launch a nine-game December card that includes at least five games with SEC opponents.

Florida State isn't unaccustomed to facing the nation's basketball best. Last season the Seminoles met both West Virginia, the nation's top-ranked team most of the way, and Xavier of Ohio, National Invitation Tournament (NIT) king.

Kennedy points to an "excellent home schedule." For the first time, the Seminoles entertain state-rival Florida, Auburn, and Louisiana State, plus meeting Furman, Mississippi Southern, Spring Hill, Memphis State, Miami (Fla.), Loyola of New Orleans, and Oklahoma City University in Tallahassee.

Besides Kentucky, Auburn is the only newcomer to the schedule. Florida State meets the Plainsmen, No. 16 in the Associated Press poll last season, on a home-and-home basis.

The Seminoles will play familiar state opponents Florida, Miami, Stetson, and Rollins. Southeastern Conference opponents are Kentucky, Florida, Auburn, Louisiana State, and Georgia.

The complete schedule:

Dec 1—Kentucky at Lexington
Dec 6—Furman at Tallahassee
Dec 9—Spring Hill at Tallahassee
Dec 13—Florida at Tallahassee
Dec. 15—Auburn at Tallahassee
Dec 19-20—The Citadel Tournament at Charleston, S C
Dec 27—Louisiana State at Tallahassee
Dec. 29 Auburn at Auburn
Jan. 6—Mississippi Southern at Tallahassee
Jan 13—Memphis State at Tallahassee
Jan 17—Miami (Fla.) at Tallahassee
Jan 19—Georgia at Athens
Jan. 31—Oklahoma City at Oklahoma City.
Feb 2—Centenary at Shreveport
Feb 7—Loyola at Tallahassee
Feb. 8—Murray (Ky.) State at Murray
Feb. 10—Memphis State at Memphis
Feb 16—Oklahoma City at Tallahassee
Feb. 21—Stetson at DeLand
Feb. 23—Rollins at Winter Park
Feb. 28—Miami (Fla.) at Miami.

IN THE SUMMER BASKETBALL COMPETITION Bob Nellums lays up one for the "Seminoles" as teammates Hugh Durham (22) and Dan Butler (5) stand by for rebounding. The two players in white jerseys are unidentified members of the "Meteors."

Dr. Kellog Hunt To Speak Thurs.

"The Revolution in Grammar" will be discussed by Dr. Kellog W. Hunt of the FSU English Department next Thursday at 4 p.m. Stephen A. Dunning, English instructor at Florida High School will be presiding at the lecture in 120 Geology Building. Dr. Dwight Burton is in charge of the "Perspectives in the Teaching of English" series.

He was leading a handsome boxer dog on a new leash when he met his friend. "Look, Archie, what I got for my wife this morning."

Archie gazed in unmeasurable admiration. "You sure have all of the luck. I wish I could make a trade like that."

"NATIONAL VELVET" THIS WEEK'S MOVIE

National Velvet starring Elizabeth Taylor and Mickey Rooney is featured this week in the campus movie series. Doors will open tonight in Westcott at 7:50 in preparation for this second showing at 6:00.

This is a human interest story, in color, of the English countryside, and is highlighted by the Grand National, the world's most famous and thrilling steeplechase.

Winner of Several Awards

The movie has won an Academy Award, a Parent's Institute Award, and was picked as one of the Ten Best of the Year.

Next week Brigadoon with Gene Kelly and Van Johnson will be shown in the Amphitheatre. In case of rain, the musical will appear in 120 Geology Building.

Gulf Fishing Trip Planned For Sat.

Another deep sea fishing trip will be featured tomorrow on the Gulf. Busses will leave from Bryan Hall at 6:30 A.M.

Miss Marie Williams stated that all those going will have to bring their own lunch.

Price of the trip is $8.50. This includes transportation, boat chartering, a rod and reel, and bait.

Reservations for this trip should have been made Thursday noon at Longmire building.

A gushy realtive of a pre-teen boy had not visited them for some tiem and greeted the boy with the standard, "Why, the last time I saw you, you were only so high!"

"Yes," the lad agreed, "and you were only so wide."

LITWHILER TRAVELS

Florida State baseball Coach Danny Litwhiler leaves next Saturday for Aruba, Netherlands Antilles, to set up a summer baseball program on the Islnnd.

It marks the third overseas trip in two years for the former National League outfielder (1940-51). Litwhiler conducted baseball clinics for the Armed Forces in Japan and Hawaii in 1957 and in Germany last March.

'KATHY O'

By LINDA ARNOW

Patty McCormick, whom you may have remembered from "The Bad Seed," plays a temperamental little actress in Universal-International's production of "Kathy O'". Only this time the bad seed of a maladjusted life blossoms into a very nice flower.

This is partly due to careful nurturing by Jan Sterling in the role of a journalist assigned to get a story on the tantrum-throwing scissors - wielding little monster.

Dan Duryea, who also tangles with Kathy O'Rourke, is a publicity agent for her studio. He doesn't have the green touch for his attempts to change her stunted personality growth are practically fruitless.

Mary Pickett, as Duryea's attractive wife and the mother of two energetic little boys, adds a motherly touch to the non-shrinking violent.

The plot of the story is complicated by the presence of Kathy's domineering aunt, played by Mary Jane Croft.

A secondary part of the story involved Duryea's wife and the lady journalist. It seems that Sterling is not only closely related to Duryea because they are working on the same story, but also because she happens to be, as his son said, ". . . one of Daddy's wives." And, as Mary Pickett comments, "Ex - wives have a way of being more than just friends."

Patty McCormack, playing a role, displays her talent well. She has the ability to switch her roles rapidly. She can smile sweetly at you one moment and stick her tongue out at you the next. She's equally effective at both.

Duryea, who looks as if time is finally catching up with him, handles his role in fine style, also. He creates a somewhat bewildered but very likable character who can't seem to understand the mysterious forkings of the female mind. His facial expressions are particularly well done.

Mary Jane Croft seems well-suited to her part as the hypocritical and espicable aunt who looks upon her ward as merely an investment.

Jan Sterling and Mary Fickett also turn in good performances, but nothing special.

And the two small boys who play Duryea's children almost steal the show.

In summary, the film is light, witty and fast-moving. And although the performances are good, the movie will never win any Oscars. But it's just right for a nice, relaxing, non-depressing evening.

ONE MARRIED COUPLE LIVING IN WEST HALL or the summer is Bob and Lois Morris. Bob is a junior in Elementary Education and Lois is a graduate from Furman University. Here they are studying on one of Bob's courses.

WEST HALL HOTEL IN SUMMER

During the summer West Hall literally becomes a hotel for married couples, regular students, single women, and the various campers and guests here for different conferences.

The married couples numbering 20 reside on the nineth floor of the dormatory. Each couple has a single room at the regular price of $45 per person. Each room, therefore, costs $90 per couple

The confusion of bath facilities is avoided by alloting the bath of each wing to men and women, respectively.

The tenth floor is invaded by 25 women, some single and some married whose husbands are not here. The married men occupy the eighth floor.

The 34 Mexican exchange students who are guests of Florida State University have been given the "Latin Quarters" on the second floor

The brilliant minds of 42 math campers have been alloted the third floor of West Hall. This floor allows them close proximity to the cafeteria and game room without holding up the elevators.

The remaining floors are given to 200 regular students.

Mexican Students Study English

By BONNIE PERRY

Thirty-four Mexican students and two instructors from Instituto Technologico de Monterrey, are finishing their second of a four-week course in English, under the direction of Dr. J. Paul Stoakes, professor of English at Florida State University.

Dr. Stoakes hopes to make this the first of a series of FSU language institues offered to all Latin Americans. The institute is set up under exchange in agreement with Monterrey Tech. Forty-seven FSU students left this week for a six-week course at Monterrey Tech, under the direction of Dr. Heberto Lacayo of the FSU department of modern languages.

The Mexican students, all young men between the ages of 16 and 22, are preparing to be engineers and technologists. Accompaning them are two faculty members, Sr. Arg. Jose Pinads, an architect, and Sr. Ing Hector Jasso, an engineer.

The students are divided into two groups with three one hour classes a day of pronunciation, vocabulary and structure The lessons are coordinated so that pronunciation is used in vocabulary and both are used in structure.

NO SPANISH USED

No Spanish is used during classes. "Students never translate. Looking at a picture, students go straight from the fact to English, never through Spanish," said Dr Stoakes. The two graduate assistants, Edward Meador and William Page, teaching two sections don't know Spanish.

Students study only in the classroom, never ahead. Text books are closed most of the day, except for pronunciations. There is no writing.

This system of relating language to a thing has been developed over the past 20 years by the University of Michigan and the United States Government.

"Language is tied to the thing, not the word," said Dr Stoakes. "We are using the University of Michigan system developed over the past 20 years by the university and the United States government "

FASCINATED BY BERMUDAS

Besides the English course, the students are becoming acquainted with US customs They are fascinated by Bermuda shorts worn by FSU students.

FSU is sponsoring tours for them to visit Wakulla Springs, Stephen Foster Memorial, the Reservation, and Tallahassee proper. Dr. and Mrs. Stoakes held a weiner roast for them last Saturday. Dr. and Mrs. Paul Reynolds are having a water-melon cutting tonight They will also be entertained by Dr. and Mrs. Strozier this Sunday.

A Feature

New Thinking Needed Says Allen Thomson

By JEAN SUE BRUBAKER

Why does a person become a professor of the Humanities?

Mr. Allen Thomson who has been teaching humanities at FSU for some years received his early education in a British boys school. He did his ondergraduate work at McGill University in Canada and graduate work in France, at Cornell and at Syracuse.

Mr. Thomson's special interest is James Joyce. At present he is making a study of the spirtual quest of Stephen Dedalus as a prototype of modern western man entitled Time and Space in James Joyce's Thinking.

Nowadays we are always hearing about what the business man, psychologist, politician, scientist, professional educator, and newspaperman think But what about people who devote their lives to such so-called less practical subjects like poetry, art, philosophy, and the more abstract thought? What is their opinion of the world we live in?

Mr. Thomson jumped on this word "practical".

The poet is probably considered more impractical than any other creative thinker. Yet insights into men's psychological, social, and political life by poets like Auden, Spencer, Eliot, and many others is acute. I would safely say that the crisis in Western civilization now beginning to penetrate mass thinking in the post-Sputnik age was already written into their verse thirty years ago."

According to Mr. Thomson students who do little study in the Humanities area are missing out on an important part of their education."

Too Many Right Answers

It is unfortunate that students often tend to feel that such subjects as language, poetry, art and music are impractical But it isn't surprising in a society that puts a premium on doing instead of thinking—in running around trying to "adjust" to every conceivable kind of group—an office group, a social group, a hobby group, a church group and so on.

The Humanities area develops some sense of judgment and evaluation which the individual person can make about the various ideas and forms these creative people express. Much undergraduate education is involved with mechanical memorization. Here intellectual manipulation is important, but not personal judgment.

In science there is for the learner a search for predetermined laws: but there is no such clearcut road in the arts. This is what confuses many students; they have to make evaluations on their own. Many of them don't like it. They want to be told what to think and how to think it. They want right answers, so they can give back right answers on the tests."

Too many families give their children the "right" answers; the school gives them the "right" answers; the church gives them the "right" answers. After years of conditioning to the "right" answers, new ideas that don't fit in with these answers frighten them. Parents don't care very often what their young people are learning in college they only care about their grades."

Badly Need Original Thinkers

Many students leave college knowing a lot of facts, but without having learned to think for themselves at all. The really bad part of it is that this is a time when we badly need original thinkers

Dominated as we are by science and technology, the Humanities needs to become the interpreter of these great achievements and to make the kind of world they have created comprehensible to the average man. Too often this is not done, for the Humanities are themselves bogged down in traditions and instead of being dynamic and living become static and dead. This is what to try to avoid.

Florida Hall Formal

Florida Hall next Friday will hold their summer formal dance.

There will be dancing to music by an orchestra in the recreation room and "under the stars" on the patio. Refreshments will be served in the lounge

Working On M. A.'s

Registration State Of Confusio[n] Say Four Nuns Attending Her[e]

BY MARSHALL LACOMBE

When an estimated 3,000 people confine themselves to one locale for six to eight weeks, people of all ages, origins, professions, vocations, and cultures, a publication such as the Flambeau will never want for interesting material. For people are interesting material; people are what people want to read about. Today the Flambeau explores four such people who have three things in common: Poverty, chastity, and obedience.

They originally came from Chicago, Detroit, and Boston. Their faith and convictions brought them to Adrian, Michigan, where they studied, prayed, and worked for seven and a half years, finally professing for life the vows of the Dominican Order.

Their names were different from when they had entered the covent, their clothes different. Poverty, chastity, and obedience are what they promised God, and a fourth quality which their very lives exemplify: Love.

No longer would they be responsible just for themselves, but for all the others like them who taught and nursed throughout the world, for the Church, its members, its children.

SEEKING M.A. DEGREES

They left Adrian with B.A. degrees, black and white Dominican habits, and an eagerness to invest, not spend their lives wherever they were needed. One was sent to Hollywood, Florida, two to Pensacola, and one to Melbourne. Then orders came from their superiors in Adrian. They were to obtain their M.A. degrees from Florida State University, in courses ranging from English, to music, to education.

"Registration for us was a state of confusion!"

We were all sitting in the living room of the covent across from the Blessed Sacrament Church, here in Tallahassee. Sister Henry Francis was speaking. Sitting next to her on the couch was Sister John Louis, and across from them, sitting at the table were Sisters Phylis Ann and Maria Amabilis.

TESTS, RAIN, IBM CARDS

"We didn't know what to expect our first day, so we reported promptly and early to the womens gym. There we found we needed IBM cards and were sent to Westcott, where we found we couldn't register until we took the Miller Analogy test. All this time we kept on getting lost, and on top of that it had begun to rain. After taking the test we had to wait until 4:00 that afternoon for the results before registering, then we went back to the gym just before the doors closed, and discovered we needed advisors; so registration was not completed until the following day."

The Sisters laughed at their early confusion and innocence of the registration procedure. They recollected how extremely kind and patient the campus police and bus drivers were in helping them along.

REGISTRARS WONDERFUL

"We felt so sorry for the registrars. They were always kept busy, yet never failed to be courteous and gracious, that was wonderful!"

The Sisters aren't doing any teaching during the summer.

"We're too busy with our studies!"

Aside from their studies, they do their own housework, cook their own meals, attend daily mass, and observe the canonical hours of their Order, which are the certain times of day appointed for the offices of prayer and devotion. There are seven: matins with lauds, prime, tierce, sext, nones, vespers, and complin.

"We find the classes very stimulating."

"What about your Habits in this hot weather?" I asked this question in regard to the heavy apparel required by their Order, and in regard to the 90 degree high's we've been having in Tallahassee. Sister Maria Amabilis answered.

"Insulation works both ways!"

They told of an incident in which they were watching a children's Christmas parade. One of the children spotted them and remarked.

"Look mommy, they're dressed for the parade too!"

I asked them about their Order, how large is it?

"We have schools and convents from New York to California, also Puerto Rico and Nassau. The Dominican Order has been in the United States a little over a century It began in the 13th century when Saint Dominic, in France, saw only Bishops preaching, which was the custom then. He originated the Office of the Preacher, to which we belong. It spread to Germany in 1803. Since then the Order has bee[n] cloistered and teaching com[...] Brooklyn in 1853, to New Y[...] 1859, and then moving its [...] to Adrian, Michigan, where [...] now."

FSU Professor Writes Article On U.S. Negro

Standard American histories have shown what Dr. Maurice Vance of the history department terms "indifference to the Negro."

Writing in THE NEGRO IN AMERICAN SOCIETY, a symposium of seven articles in No. 28 of the Florida State University Studies published this week, Dr. Vance reviewed the subject, "The Negro in the Literature of American History."

He said "many of the books which have been in the best position to influence the attitudes of today's citizens have included a point of view, implied or explicit, which is no longer accepted by the best authorities and whose influence tends to impede acceptance of tha idea that no member of our society should be denied opportunity because of his race.

NEGRO VOTES INCREASE

"The writers of American history can hardly be blammed for accepting a point of view generally held by their own society, nor does their belief in the inferiority of the Negro lessen the great contributions made by many of these scholars to the better understanding of other basic developments of American history and problems of the American people. But the importance of these contributions should not hide from today's teachers and students the fact that in relation to one important contemporary problem, much of the literature of American history exercises an influence which is more negative than positive."

Another article, by Dr. Elston Roady of the department of political science, reviews the Negro's increasing role in Southern politics. A summary showed, he said, that 1,238,000 Negro votes were cast in the South in 1956

"STEADY, EASY DOES IT!"—Seem to be the words of the foreman of the City Power Crew as they replaced two power poles in front of Westcott Hall Monday night. A crowd gathered to watch the men replace the poles that apparently broke at the same time

Carry 4,000 Volts

Cause Not Known— Power Poles Snap

By PETE HEAGERTY
Flambeau News Editor

Two power line poles in front of Westcott gates were found leaning at 45 degree angles in a torrent of rain Monday night.

That same evening Charles Pulley, superintendent of utilities for Tallahassee, and Joe B. Dykes, engineer in charge of operations, with a crew of eight men replaced the poles. This operation took five hours. The crew returned the following day to transfer the power lines onto the new poles and remove the old ones.

The informer, an unidentified FSU operator called E. E. Abbot and P. D. George, members of the campus police about the poles. They immediately called the city police and proceeded to block off College Ave., Copeland, and Westcott circle from traffic. Within a half hour the city force arrived in five trucks to straighten the old poles and dig holes for new ones.

CAUSE UNKNOWN

Pulley stated that he did not know the exact cause for the leaning of the poles. From outward appearances the ooles look solid. However, he added that these poles are made from Creosote pine which rots from the inside out.

Another possible cause was the weakening of the poles' strength by a tall truck which at one time probably hit the wires overhanging the road to service the old psychology department. Pulley believes that this, combined with the internal rotting, was the cause of the final breaking

These 18-year-old poles supported lines that carried over 4000 volts of electricity. The poles did not completely fall because the other ones on either side of the leaning poles were strong enough to hold them. If the poles had broken completely the power lines would have snapped and caused a grave danger. The wires would have been spread over the road.

Girls' State Governor Blasts Supreme Court

On Decisions; And High Rates

In her inauguration address Wednesday, Florida Girls' State new governor, Patricia Clark, of Jacksonville let go with a blast on high automobile insurance rates and the U. S. Supreme Court decisions concerning states' rights.

The new governor was inaugurated along with other Girls' State officials at the Capitol, 3 p.m Wednesday This was a part of the week-long series of activities. Girls' State is sponsored by the American Legion Auxiliary at Florida State University.

The first topic Miss Clark touched on in her address was automobile insurance rates. She said, "I find there is unrest throughout our state about the rapid rise of the cos of automobile insurance. The insurance companies contend that this has been occasioned by the high cost of repairing wreck-damaged automobiles and the high verdicts rendered by juries in connection with personal injuries growing out of accidents"

She doubted that these circumstances are adequate to support such high insurance rates as we now have.

Miss Clark suggested that a joint committee of the House and Senate look into this matter. This committee should study company earnings and determine if present rates are fair.

She continued, "You are reminded that automobile insurance now is a legal requirement and therefore becomes a necessity in the lives of our people. In this connection, I point out to you that automobiles are now paying extraordinarily high gasoline taxes, license taxes and insurance premiums"

THREAT TO RIGHTS

On the question of states rights Miss Clark said, "The Tenth Amendment to the Constitution sought to insure to our states that their sovereignty would not be disturbed. Nevertheless, our people are deeply concerned about the attitude oft he Supreme Court during the last several years in what appears to be a continued campaign to destroy our states' rights.

She pointed out several examples of these efforts and then stated, "If such things as these go unchecked, they will eventually lead to the destruction of state sovereignty"

Like Florida's real governor, Governor Clark took cognizance of the tax assessment situation in saying, "I hope you will give careful consideration to the low tax assessments prevailing throughout the state. It is my feeling that if every person paid the taxes justly owed, no one would be paying excessive taxes. Many tax assessors are admitting that property is now carried on their books at one-third its actual value"

After this "State of Girls' State" address a governor's dinner was held Wednesday night.

The Girls' Staters arrived on the Florida State University campus July 12 for their tenth annual week long meeting. Sunday night, July 13, the 284 girls were the guest at a reception at the home of FSU President Strozier.

Author Elleston Trevor

Burton Reviews War Novel

By BONNIE PERRY

Books by Elleston Trevor, war novelist, were reviewed by Dr. Dwight L. Burton, professor of English Education at Florida State University, Wednesday.

Dr Burton concentrated his review on two of the English author's works Big Pick-Up deals with a small group of men caught behind enemy lines during the Dunkirk exacuation, "Making an almost unbelievable trek through a wall of death to evacuation and home. The author gives some sense and shows the courage of the monumental feat at Dunkirk"

HEMINGWAY REALISM

The Killing Ground, a later novel by Trevor, shows the author's journalistic maturity. "He has the realism of Hemingway, yet the structure and finese of Evelyn Waugh," said Dr. Burton. "His source of power comes from the constant underplay of emotion, part stupified and part a giddy fantasy of war" Killing Ground deals with the D-Day invasion of Normandy. A tank becomes disabled between enemy lines and safety. There is a heroism of necessity and resoursefulness depicted. Dr. Burton, whose hobby is reading war novels, said the drama of the disabled tank, "Is the most memorable 50 pages of any war novel—bar none'"

BOOKS AMONG BEST

"The theme of battle is as old as man himself. It runs through all literatures. War presents one of the great testing grounds of courage, stamina and the exploration of human tendencies. Most war novels contain only rock-ribbed realism, yet Trevor's books can be ranked with The Young Lions, and The Bridge on the River Kwai, said Dr. Burton.

Dr. Kellogg Hunt will review Archibald MacLeish's J. B. next Wednesday, July 23, in the Student Lounge in Longmire at 5 p.m. A reception will be help before the review at 4 30.

Chemistry Head Being Sought Here

Active consideration for a replacement for Dr. Karl Dittmer, present head of the chemistry department who will leave this fall, is now in process according to Dr Paul J. Reynolds, Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences.

Dean Reynolds said that the selection process has been decided upon but that it is not yet known if the new head will come from the present faculty or from outside the university. It is hoped that a selection will have been made by the beginning of the Fall term.

Students' Opinions On Mid-East Crisis

By MYGNON CHAMPION
Flambeau Associate Editor

The Middle East rebellions have nothing to do with Communism, say two students from the Egyptian province of the United Arab Republic attending Florida State University.

"There is a smaller percentage af Communists in the Middle East than in the United States," says Mohamed Asheof El Bionmy and his attractive young wife, Soheir. "Iraq is strongly anti-Communist," they state.

This is because of the Arabs strong religious and cultural traditions, Mohamed explains and asserts "We know what would happen."

POOR JUDGMENT BY U.S.

The young couple believes that United States Marines should not have been sent to Lebanon. "The Lebanese rebellion is an internal matter." They do not believe Nasser is sending arms there. "It is the people who are rebelling," Mohamed claims.

He applauds the Iraqi revolution, claiming that Faisal was a dictator. "On one occasion he killed 108 soldiers for refusing to sell oil to British planes that were bombing Cairo," he criticizes.

Concerning Jordan, he warns, "Hussein may last one or two more years, but he'll never last the next."

Kasha Travels

Professor Michael Kasha of the chemistry department left for the University of Colorado last week to attend a month-long study program in biophysical science.

Dr. Kasha was invited to the international conference along with 99 other chemists, physicists and biologists. They will exchange information on and study biological structure and function at the molecular level and related subjects. The conference is the first of the kind to study life processes at the molecular level.

The FSU scientist has published several research papers on molecular mechanisms involved in photosynthesis and on fundamental aspects of energy transfer phenomena.

Sponsored by the National Institute of Health of the U. S. Public Health Service, the conference will consist of lectures and workshops, bringing together thinking from 20 different research fields.

Middle East Explosions

Tha Marines hava landad—hooray, tha world is free—wa hope. Wa can only hope that tha right decisions hava been mada in this week of explosiva surprises.

Events hava zoomed around tha world at too breakneck a speed for intalligant estimaton. The following account can only raport what has takan placa at this point.

In May, Prasidant Eisenhower committed United States aid if Lebanon's President Chamoun asked for it. In July, the card was called end 5,000 Marines were dispatched to the Middla East, much to tha surprise of many who have regarded tha U.S. foraign policy as being extremely wishy-washy.

Monday came the news that Ireq—tha Middle East nation with strongest pro-Wastern sentiment—had been overthrown. Tuesday the Marines landed in neighboring Lebanon.

The Jordan redio reported Tuesdey night thet Jorden's King Hussein appealed to the U. S. and Britain for eid. Jorden now remains our friendliest Arebic nation, and may be tottering on tha brink of destruction itself.

King Faisal, the overthrown monerch of Iraq, headed the Iraq-Jorden federation. King Hussein immediately took control upon Feisal's fall. It has been reported, howevar, that tha naw "republic" of Irsq consequently withdrew from the federation, leeving Hussein no power to call for Iraq eid.

From Russia has coma amphatic protests. Labeling the Marine landing an "aggressiva ect", tha Soviet ambassador asked that the U. N. Security Council damand instant removal of the troops. Ha warned that our ection could result in an all-out global war.

A timaly massage was sent from a Hervard University militery analyst Sunday urging limited war as e basis of our foreign policy. Dr. Hanry A. Kissinger, associata director of Harvard's Canter for Intarnational Affairs, said that thera must be "a aompletely new order of thinking." Raalizing that totel war could well destroy tha world, laaving no one victor, he urged that wa think in terms of limited wars to preserve peace. The U. S. just might have a chance to try your philosophy out sooner than expected, Dr. Kissingar!

Jet fighters have been dispatched te Europe, reportedly to bases in Germany, end both Atlantic and Pacific Naval Fleets heva been placed on four hour alarts.

The overthrow of Iraq has caved in the central arch of the anti-Communist Baghdad Pact, along with tha Iraq-Jorden Fedaration. The "republic" has been established following the' 'libereted Arab" policies of Nesser, president of the United Arab Rapublie of Egypt and Syria.

A Connecticut congressman reported Tuesday that Jordan would attempt a counter-revolt within 72 hours. This still remains to be seen at press tima, but the zoom of events thus far this week leava speculetions entirely impossibla. Rep. Pattarson, a member of the Joint Armed Services Committee, said that he had been told that 8,000 Ireqi infentry troops now in Jorden will be joined by 41,000 Jordanian troops in en attempt to restore the deposed Iraq government.

Regardless of what Jordan does, we strongly hope that tha U. N. will send e police force to Lebanon, allowing Big Brothar to shara the responsibilities. Our foreign policy cannot be based upon sentimantal ideelism, but must face realitiae.

When the first Merina fires e shot, he will be killing a Lebanon citizen on his own soil. This is what happened in China, and not only did wa lose tha country to Communism, wa also lost any hope of attempts at friendly reletions. Let us hope that we need go no further toward losing tha Middle East in the same manner.

Our Lovely Mud Lake

Mud is a great beauty aid, report glemor axperts, if so, this should be the most beautiful campus in the U.S. Recant torrents of rein heve turned tha antira campus into e varitable mudbath.

Tha only difficulty is that white bucks and thong sandels don't seem to have recaived tha word. While the problem of mud may seem a trivial matter, in reality it isn't.

How easy it would be to slip and fall the wrong way, resulting in broken arms or legs. If anyone hes wondered why so many crutchas end slings ere visible on campus in the Fall during September rains, hera mey be one of the answers. In addition, it's a downright nuisanca.

One particularly offansive spot is the path that students hava worn through the years between Call Street and the Student Center. Taking a shortcut, there is a wide dirt path running diagonally from Call in front of the School of Business to tha postoffica.

During the rainy season, it becomes a smell lake. A vast sea of mud confronts those hurrying to and from classes.

Why couldn't this path be made into e sidewalk? A wava of the magic wand of the cement mixer would transform tha danger spot into an asset for busy students. Construction has gone on ell over campus thesa past few years, and this seems one very necessary piece of work for our rainsoaked campus.

Instead of being unabla to see tha forest for tha trees, it seems as though the business office and campus planners ere having difficulty seeing the trees for the forest.

Why We're In Lebanon

By DR. MARIAN D. IRISH
Political Science Dept. Head

Dr. Irish, one of the leading political scientists in the nation, is the only woman to head such a department in this country. The following background material on the Eisenhower Doctrine leading to our present position in Lebanon is taken from the text of a recent speech.

Dean Acheson, former Secretary of State, defines the foreign policy of the United States as "the grand strategy with which the United States proposes to deal with the main facts, tha thrusts and problems they present, of the outside world." The grand strategy as he conceived is, in part, American leadership in "a workable system of free states." John Foster Dulles, in almost the same vein, recently declared that "the security of this nation can be maintained only by the spiritual, economic, and military strength of the free world, with this nation a powerful partner committed to this purpose."

Both of these statements illustrate the magnificent imagination with which the United States visualizes its foreign policy today. By imagination I mean pictures in the mind rather than something which exists in reality. "A workable system of free states," this is the kind of world in which we would like to live. "A powerful partner in a free world" this is the role we would prefer to play in international relations. But only in our imagination can we live as we'd like and do as we please.

In our international relations, and in foreign policy we often seem more inclined to use our imagination than our intellect. By using the intellect I mean choosing a reasonable course of action on the basis of hard facts.

EISENHOWER DOCTRINE

To illustrate intellect in foreign policy, I shall examine how one group of policy makers arrived at a decision on one issue—the action of the Senate Committee on Armed Forces and the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on the Eisenhower Doctrine in the spring of 1957. I have selected this illustration simply because this decision continues to have a direct bearing on our policy today, especially in the Lebanese situation.

In January, 1957 President Eisenhower laid before a joint session of Congress his proposal for American action to deter Communist aggression in the Middle East. Generally speaking the Eisenhower Doctrine "supports with reservation the full sovereignty and independence of each and every nation of the Middle East."

Specifically President Eisenhower asked Congress: (1) to authorize American aid for any nation or group of nations in the Middle East to develop its economic strength; (2) to authorize the executive to undertake military assistance and cooperation for any nations in the area desiring such aid, (3) to authorize the employment of American armed forces to protect the territorial integrity and political independence of any nation requesting aid against armed aggression by international Communism. Further Congress was asked to appropriate $200 million in 1958 and again in 1959 for discretionary use in the area implementing economic and military assistance.

DULLES EXPLAINS

In order to get full information on the President's proposal the committees called on the top officials of the administration. Secretary of State Dulles, as the President's principal spokesman in foreign affairs, was of course star witness for the Eisenhower doctrine. Dulles testified for four full days before the committees answering general and specific questions put to him by the Senators.

Mr Dulles briefly explained the general interest of the United States in the Middle East. "The Middle East is a vital part of the free world . . . Much of the world's livelihood depends on the natural resources and avenues of trade of the Middle East and there are to be found the holy places of tha three great religions. It would be abhorrent and dangerous if that area were ruled by international communism." In other words, the American interests in the Middle East are economic, spiritual, strategic, and ideological.

After extensive questioning of the Secretary of State, our representatives of the Middle East were next. Henry Byroad, who had recently been our Ambassador to Egypt told them that the Eisenhower Doctrine was "an essential step in the right direction," especially in its economic aspects.

Ambassador Byroad added that "There is not . . . any real denger of that area turning Communists out of widespread and popularly held convictions." Joseph Green, former Ambassador to Jordan, agreed, adding that the American support of Israel is the crux of our problem with the Arab countries. Between government and private aid, we furnish almost half the support of the Israeli government. "The Arabs feel that we have set up . . . a hostile state on Arab territory."

The role of Congress is, of course, to translate public opinion into public policy. But since there is no single public on any issue, it must hear the many publics that are involved.

UNITED NATIONS

Clark, Eichelberger, speaking for the American Association for the United Nations, urged the Congress not to by-pass the United Nations. He pointed out that the United States in the United Nations having condemned its French and British allies for unilateral action in the Middle East, was now about to embark on a similar course of action.

CONCERN AREAS

From the economic point of view, the Middle East contains 70% of the world's known oil reserves. Middle East production normally supplies 20% of the oil used by the free world and 75% of Western Europe's oil imports.

Geographically, the Middle East is the link between Asia, Europe, and Africa. Not only is the Suez an important shipping artery of the world but all of the major air routes from North America and Europe to South Asia go through that area.

Strategically, if the Middle East were drawn behind the Iron Curtain, the USSR would at least become a Mediterranean power and the Soviet system would be extended to the Indian subcontinent and to Africa. American airbases at Dhahran, Saudi Arabia and in Libya would be lost.

Politically the Middle East is important because of its cultural and religious associations. The Moslem world of which the Middle East is the center stretches from Morocco on the west to Indonesia on the east. The attitude of the Middle East states toward us determines also in large measure the attitudes of other states toward us in Asia and Africa.

On March 7, both House and Senate egreed on an identical version of the Resolution and on March 9, the President approved this final decision.

No decision, of course, is really final. The world keeps changing much too fast for us to hold to any fixed policy. And yet every decision in foreign policy is in a sense irrevocable. When any nation determines upon a course of action in foreign affairs, there is immediate reaction in every other nation concerned. Thus the Lebanese crisis today is but one of a series of world events that was liable to occur once the United States decided as a matter of policy to intervene directly in Middle East affairs.

What is our national interest and what do we want to be secure? Americans have never lived, nor ever want to live, by bread alone. We want a free world, a good society, liberty and justice for all. These are not merely pictures in the head. This is the American Way that we keep hoping to realize for ourselves. But isn't this what every people on earth want?

Perhaps the most important part of the Eisenhower Doctrine and its most persuasive aspect abroad, lies in the preamble to the Resolution where we claim that "the primary purpose of the United States in its relation with all other nations is to develop and sustain a just and enduring peace for all." But we must not leave this high purpose entirely in the realm of imagination. We must use our intellect, and chart a reasonable course of action, in a world of reality.

'The Female Animal'

By MARSHALL LACOMBE

Tonight is opening night for the Speech Department production of the summer, THE MALE ANIMAL. In keeping with this festive occasion I shall attempt to give playwriter James Thurber a run for his money in offering a piece of Hollywood-style competition. I shall use the same characters as Mr. Thurber and the same general scenario . . . the differences will be three: plot, media, and geographical location. This will be the cinema script for LaCombe's production of:

THE FEMALE ANIMAL

(Story takes place on a small English campus near Argylshire-on-the-Thames, in the early 1940's. This is Homecoming Day for the College of Argyle's cricket team, and a dey of generel confusion for Prof. Tommy Turner's household.)

Opening: camera focuses on telephone ringing in living room, moving in for an extreme closeup; suddenly a hand picks up receiver and camera follows it upward to face of The Maid: extreme closeup showing beads of perspiration as she answers:

CLEOTA: Professor Turner's residence, Turner ain't here, may I take a message?

(Maid looks upward as air raid sirens begin screaming, sound of bombers overhead followed by whistling of bombs.)

CLEOTA: Hold the phone, please . . .

(Maid ducks under couch as bombs score a direct hit. Two minutes of destruction and the crumbling of walls, falling debris, etc. All Clear sounds. Cleota reappears, brushing off clothes, and finds phone underneath the fallen bathroom sink.)

CLEOTA: May I take a message?

(She nods, jots something down, and hangs up. The door, which is still standing, opens and Professor Turner enters.)

TOMMY: Hello Cleota! Anything happen while I was gone?

CLEOTA: The magistrete called, sir. You're to report in court Monday . . . something about pushing blackmarket marmalade.

(Closeup of Turner's ayes, shifting undar droplets of perspiration. Cemera shifts to a two gallon jar of marmalade in Turner's arms, then up again to what used to be the French doors as Mrs. Turner enters.)

ELLEN: Cheerio, Dear! When did you get home?

TOMMY: (in the process of kissing the maid hello) Oh, just a moment ago!

(Tommy crosses to wife and gives her e dutiful kiss. Closeup of Tommy and Ellen kissing, should last three minutes. They break as Tommy puts Marmalade jar into fallen bathroom sink.)

TOMMY: I think they're on to our little racket. We'd best lay low for a while!

(Ellen's sister, Patricia, comes peddling her bicycle, laden with marmalade jars, into the living room from where the fireplace used to be.)

PATRICIA: (emptying jars into sink, bubbling over ... girlish energy) Poor day ... marmalade!

Standards For Art

By BERLIN DMITRI

In this age when there is so much change and so little that is steadfast, it becomes increasingly important that we have some definite standards by which to judge our art. Since this columnist loves music best, he respectfully submits the following four criteria in relation to music, but with only a few small alterations they will easily apply to any art form:

1) Any Great Masterpiece must have artistic merit. Its composer must have mastered the rules of the particular art form in which he works. In music this would mean that the composer knows the laws of counterpoint (different melodies played at the same time), harmony, and rhythm. This does not mean that the rules may not be broken or added to. Indeed in the early history of music we find that each composer mastered what was already known and then by his own experimentation brought some new element into the music.

2) The next point is sincerity. Does the composer have some great emotion in his heart that he must tell, or is his music artificial, superficial, and imitative?

3) The work must be compact. Does the composer get his idea across or does the work ramble on and on, never seeming to start or end.

4) Great art must be universal in appeal. This means that the work must appeal to some emotion in every heart. An excellent example of a masterpiece containing this quality is Beethoven's Moonlight Sonata. I know people who do not particularly like classical music as a whole, yet they love this one. The reason is that Beethoven captures in that music a feeling of intense suffering and sorrow that everyone has at some time felt. It is this quality of universality that makes a work grow in fame through the centuries.

We are too close to this century to take a long range view of our art and to know what will last, but this columnist believes that these standards help give us a pretty good indication.

Speculate on these ideas and form your own conclusions.

FSU 'Flying High' Busy With Summer Practice

Veterans—Newcomers Work On Routines

By SAM BEAMER

At the Circus lot this summer things are buzzing with activity. Veteran performers are working to add more daring feats to their routines. Beginners are learning the fundamentals to start their circus careers.

Flying High, the only Circus of its kind, originated in 1947 when Coach Jack Haskins came to the newly co-ed FSU. At that time practice sessions were held at a "circus lot" on West Campus, and the only show presented was seen in the old Men's Gymnasium, on West Campus.

At first the Circus was small because of location, student reluctance to take part in what was believed to be "risking your neck," and reluctance on the part of the parents to allow their sons and daughters to take part, due to "danger of being hurt." Soon, It was realized that safety first is one of the main points stressed.

Some steps toward safety are: (1) Using only equipment that is in the best of condition (2) safety lines and belts used at all times while the student is learning a routine (3) nets are used at all times after the safety lines are taken off, and (4) constant expert supervision during practice sessions.

The Circus became more widely accepted and people began to realize it was building stronger personalities through learning teamwork, cooperation and respect for others. It also gives an outlet for youthful energies, a feeling of accomplishment and a greater physical fitness.

CIRCUS GROWS

From the first small show of 48 performers, Flying High expanded and moved to the open green where the Student Center now stands. Here the shows were presented for the first time in the open night air. The audience was seated on a collapsable grand stand. Flying High then moved to Doak S. Campbell Stadium to accommodate the ever growing audiences.

When the first show was presented in the old Men's Gymnasium on West Campus, the circus troupe made their own rigging for the show. The complete set of "do it yourself" high rigging totaled to only seven trapezes, three cloud swings and two sets of rings.

Today Flying High is a complete five ring circus with $15.000 of rigging, which keeps the five rings well equipped, a flying trapeze rigging, a tight wire and a slack wire.

The costumes used in the first Home Show were borrowed from the all city circus which Coach Haskins started prior to accepting his position at FSU. One fifth of the costumes were made by student performers. Today, the Circus has $7.500 in costumes. Part of the sewing is still done by the performers but with a troupe of more than two hundred, a dressmaker is needed occasionally.

COACHES ARE PROFS

Flying High, once in the Athletic Department and now in the Physical Education Department, owes its great success and growth to Jack Haskins and Jim DeCosmo. Both men are busy teaching a full load as well as spending the afternoon working to keep the circus a tightly knit unit.

Coach Haskins, originator and director of Flying High, started his career in Physical education at a Pontiac, Illinois high school. Here his work with circus activities had its beginning with an acrobatic demonstration for the PTA. After the war, Coach Haskins directed the all city circus in Madison, Wisconsin, while teaching Physical Education in a high school. From Madison the coach came directly to FSU.

Coach DeCosmo once a performer in the first Flying High show, became assistant to Coach Haskins Coach DesCosmo was an expert instructor in the high rigging and was the trainer of the "Flying" act which bears his name, "The Flying DeCosmos." DeCosmo terminated his years with the circus this past spring and is counselor to all physical education majors, replacing Dean Loucks.

200 PERFORMERS

Another factor in the growth of the Circus is the cooperation of the troupe. While the coaches are busy with certain routines the veteran performers are helping the newer students. This way there is no wasted time.

The first circus didn't accept everyone but today it is much harder to become accepted. Each semester of the regular school year there is a "try-out" session. After passing this test, which is mainly coordination, the student must prove himself a worker, for there is no room for loafers. Those without experience can still make it if they have a desire to really work hard

AVERAGE NEEDED

After a student has learned his act, he is given the opportunity to perform before an audience in one of the out of town trips. The only requirement to make one of these trips is a C average.

Through the past years the Circus has become internationally known. It has been featured in several magazines such as Life and American Magazine. An appearance was made on the Dave Garowsy Show. Other TV appearances include an hour presentation on the Sealtest Big Top and half hour presentations on the Arlene Frances Show, "You Asked For it" and local TV each spring

The annual Home Show, which climaxes the year's performances, lasts two hours but still does not feature every routine the students have accomplished. This is one reason the show is changed each year to substitute some acts with others that were not seen the year before

The troupe is made up of students from every school in the university After graduating the students work in their field of study for none have become professional with a traveling circus.

SUMMERTIME DOLDRUMS HERE

Those summertime doldrums have descended upon the campus. As far as sports are concerned, this place ... as active as Ebbets Field.

That is the way it appears to the casual spectator, but ... closed doors over in the stadium, things look like ... post operation center during a full scale ...

Strategy, rosters, equipment purchases and a hundred ... other operations are in progress. Coach Tom ... is getting ready for the coming season.

In the men's gym every office is wading through piles ... and paperwork in preparation for the coming ...

NEW COACH WINS TITLE

A note of interest in passing—John Powless, who ... the new tennis coach here next year, along with ... father, won the National Father and Son Tennis Title ... Louis last Sunday.

Before arriving here for work, Powless plans to enter ... or two other leading tournaments. Possibly this will ...ectly place Florida State on the tennis map along ... other sports efforts.

DOG TRACK WILL AFFECT FSU

Possibly some people will think I am off base on this ... item and that it is more political than sporting, but ... in passing I would like to mention a few things ... the dog track that is proposed for the nearby ...ticello area.

This track, I am sure and without reservations, is ... to affect FSU students. Really there's nothing we ... do about its coming nor the voting down of it, even ... wanted to, but the point that I want to bring up is ... fact that it is going to be hard to keep from attending ... institution if it is voted in.

This is not a lecture on the morals of gambling nor is ... advertisement for the track; just a word of warning ...nk twice before you go and then have yourself a ... if you do.

Personally I had rather see an Auto Race-Way put up ...nd here. I'm sure that it would have the blessings ...more people. And would be something that "poor" ... students could afford.

Fishing Trip Success

Last Saturday sixteen FSU students, under the supervision of Miss Marie Williams, took their box lunches and spent a day fishing on the gulf.

Two boats set out from Rock Landing at Panacea, headed for the blue waters of the gulf and a day's sport at fishing. Their captains, Henry Taylor and John Dalton, have been fishing these waters since they were children so a good catch was practically guaranteed if the weather held.

With pills for seasickness under their belts, these peerless fishermen (and, incidentally, women too) boarded the two ships. The crowd ranged from a twelve-year-old to a retired businessman. Due to a recent coast guard regulation, only eight passengers may go out on one boat; this has resulted in a rise in cost to $8 50 per person.

The catches have been plentiful and varied, with cobias, grouper, rock bass, blowfish, and even one octupus. A hint to the men who like fishing better than mowing the lawn: bring your wife. When the fish really start biting, those women seem to lose their squeamishness and dip right into the bait in their haste to get that line back into the water.

The next trip out will be on July 26 Those interested should make reservations by Thursday, July 24 in room 19 Longmire. Three boats will probably be chartered for this last trip if reservations continue at the present rate Sign up now—and maybe you can talk about the big one that "didn't get away."

THIS ONE DIDN'T GET AWAY—Miss Marie Williams and Don Rush inspect one of the fine catches made on the Student Activities recent Deep Sea Fishing trip in the Gulf. Miss Willams is director of Student Activities

'Brigadoon' Is Showing Tonight

Gene Kelly, Van Johnson and Cyd Charisse star in Brigadoon, the fifth in the series of campus movies. The film will be shown in the Ampitheatre. In case of rain, it will appear in Room 120, Geology Building.

The film, in Technicolor, is a musical based on a Scottish legend about a village that comes to life once every hundred years. The fantasy was originally a Broadway hit. It was heralded by critics as being "delightful", "captivating" and "fresh".

Next week an adaptation of Herman Melville's classic, Moby Dick, will be shown in Westcott Auditorium. The movie stars Gregory Peck.

Summer Basketball

Hugh Durham's rampant Seminoles finished the summer basketball season with the only clean slate in the league. Their 7-0 record earned them an undisputed first place in final standings. The Giants and Professors tied for second with identical 5-2 records, and the Indians took fourth position with a 4-3 slate.

These four teams met in a championship tournament Wednesday and Thursday which ended play for the summer. The Seminoles met the Indians at 7 p.m. Wednesday in the opening game and the Giants vs. Professors battle followed at 8:30 p.m. to determine who would meet for the championship.

Last night the Giants and Seminoles, having won in their brackets, faced each other in the final game. Due to a press deadline, news was not available on the outcome of this game.

The team standings and managers of the respective squads with their won-lost record were:

Professors	Ward	5-2
Indians	Hughes	4-3

Meteors	Berry	2-5
Demons	Albertson	1-6
Lions	Stoutamire	0-7

Durham's winning squad was composed of himself, Nellums, Corso, Hilaman, Butler, Bryant, Mahoney, Palmer, and Dellihan.

Ace scorer for the season was Hugh Durham with a 22 points per game average. He was followed by Barry of the Meteors with 17.29 per. Merle Bryant's 17 was good enough for third.

Dr. Holschuh Says Technique Is Important

By JEAN SUE BRUBAKER
Flambeau Feature Editor

One of FSU's most widely renowned teachers is Dr. Karl Holschuh of the Art Department. Aside from his duties as teacher of art, architecture, art history, and the humanities, Dr. Holschuh finds time for architectural designing and creative work in sculpture which has won him awards from all over the country.

He received his education in Germany and in the United States, where he studied art at several well-known institutions and did graduate work in philosopby. Even as a student, his work was outstanding enough to win him the Stuartson prize for sculpture and a five-year scholarship to the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts. Twiec he won the Stimson award, which bestows a European fellowship upon an outstanding artist each year.

One of the biggest problems Dr. Holschuh finds in being a teacher-artist is that of keeping up with the latest methods and discoveries in art while carrying a full teaching load. Sculpture today is a growing art, experimenting in new techniques and materials. Plastics, fiberglass, and metallic powders are only some of the new materials which are to a large extent replacing the bulkier, beavier marble and clay. Fiberglass, for example, can be mixed with various materials, such as sand or metallic powders, to produce different colors and textures, and when dry is very hard and relatively light.

WELDING IN ART

Art welding is another fairly recent technique; it allows the artist to do work directly with metals, and eliminates the necessity for using a softer substance, like clay, and later having a metal cast made from the original work.

As for the "modern" look in art, Dr. Holschuh is enthusiastic. "A modern society deserves a modern art," he says. "This century has seen a change from the imitative spirit of the last period. Today we no longer imitate the classical art of the past; the greatest emphasis today is on experiment, originality, and discovery."

The study of sculpture is important to students of all types of art, and even for the student with little or no talent, it gives some understanding and appreciation of art—of what is good work, and why.

Dr. Holschuh held a one-man show at the FSU Art Gallery three years ago, and participated in the faculty exhibit in January. He has produced several pieces of sculpture this year, many of which are now on display in exhibitions throughout the nation. Examples of his work may be found in the FSU sculpture laboratory, located beneath the Seminole cafeteria.

IN ONE MAN SHOW—This over-life size figure of a classic priestess was one of the sculptures that was included in the Holschuh One-Man Show, last May, in the FSU Art Gallery. The artist said it represents "woman carrying her burden gracefully."

Screen Scenes

'SERGEANTS' TOP COMEDY

Confucius say, "Don't open mouth when elephant's foot is in sight." But Andy Griffith is a man with "elephant-foot-itis" in Warner Brothers' military farce, "No Time for Sergeants."

Griffith plays the role of an ignorant Georgia plowboy who is drafted by the Air Force He's such a backward backwoodsman that his knowledge of military life consists of the idea that ROTC is a disease And he's the only private in history who could be thrilled over the high-sounding military title of PLO—Permanent Latrine Orderly.

The fun begins, and continues, when Griffith in his blundering well-meaning way attempts to help his only friend get transferred to the infantry

The friend, played by Nick Adams, is a timid little guy who feels he must uphold the family tradition and be an infantryman. But his hopes for a transfer are complicated by the presence of Sgt. King, played by Myron McCormick

Sgt. King's motto might be . . . "These are times that try men's souls . . . ." for never in his sixteen years as a sergeant has he ever had so much trouble The horror of it is that he can't seem to escape bis problem charges.

Television fans will recognize Don Knotts, the "nup!" man of the Steve Allen show, in the role of a classification officer testing manual dexterity. Another classification officer who is psychiatrist is an Allen-type character.

When you get right down to it, the plot of the story is as thin as Air Force soup. The story is merely one comedy situation after another. This sets a pattern for the humor

The humor in the film is the kind which usually causes a good belly laugh, not just a giggle. It is not subtle or sophisticated but very forward and tending toward slapstick.

The laughs are the result of several elements, the main one being Griffith's babe - in - the-woods naivety. For instance, he is excited over the prospect of entering the service because be thinks he is very important. "I saw that picture of that man on the poster and it said, 'We want you,' and he was a pointing a finger right at me," drawls Griffith. "They eveo sent a feller down here to fetch me," he says of the draft board member who has been trying to run him down for months.

Although the movie is worth the price of the ticket and the long wait in line, I was disappointed after the big build-up it received. There's no doubt but that the comedy is good and the actors are excellent. It just seemed that there was too much of it. The picture dragged on and on and I actually became tired of laughing. I thought to myself, "Well, we've had a lot of good laughs. Now let's end it." There was no respite from the joke-making.

Too, Andy Griffith began to wear on my nerves after while. His ignorance was funny—to a certain point. After that, he became disgusting in his stupidity. He seemed capable of making only two facial expressions. One was of gaping wonder and the other of smug satisfaction. Griffith was the only actor who honestly tired me.

In short, it's a strain on your tickle box.

The Choral Union, under direction of Walter James with Lynnie Cavin as accompanist, will present Cherubini's Requiem Mass and a concert setting of Verdi's Stabat Mater.

The Stabat Mater is a sequence of the Roman Catholic Liturgy. Its text is concerned with the Holy Mother as she stands weeping before the cross.

This concert setting of the Stabat Mater was first performed in Paris in 1898. It is one of four sacred pieces composed by Verdi when he was 80 years old.

Also on the program will be Mozart's "Solo Cantata" with Barbara Rogers as soprano and James Harris as accompanist.

New Computing Center Receives IMB Computer

By JIM MILLER

Florida State University is now renting an electronic computer to be used for research and education. The IBM 650 Computer is housed in the School of Business Mr. Robert Desjardins, head of the FSU Computing Ceoter, is aided by Dr. H. C. Griffith and four assistants.

The 650 Computer is made available under the IBM Educational Discount Program. Desjardins said, "International Business Machines pays 60 per cent of the Computer's cost while FSU pays the remaining 40 per cent." The quarter of a million dollar machine is rented by FSU for $4,000 a month.

USED FOR RESEARCH

Robert Desjardins explained FSU's responsibilities under the Discount Program. "In return for the macbine we are to use 50 per cent of our day time staff for research and educataion. We are to teach courses involving the operation of the 650 Machine."

"The computer is available for any kind of research that anyone wants done," said Desjardins. The 650 computer has been especially used for research in chemistry, biology, geology, physics, and meteorology. The computer can make 78,000 additions a minute. This explains its usefulness for research which involves mathematics. The machine is also used for statistical work like that of FSU's testing service.

3 YEARS RENT

Any member of the faculty or any graduate student is welcome to the use of the computer. It is also available to persons doing research outside the university. "There is no charge for the machine's use, except for people doing contract research," added Desjardins

"The present plan is to keep the 650 Computer for three years," Desjardins said. FSU then bopes to get ao IBM computer of the 700 series. To get this "Million Dollar Machine" FSU will have to construct a special computing center. The IBM of the 700 series is twenty times faster than the 650.

Museum Has Medicine Show

Primitive Medicine and the plants used in primitive days are now oo display at Florida State University's museum in the upper level of the Seminole Club.

Whether or not the "Witcb Doctor" was as expert on love as the song would lead us to believe, he did pretty well wheo it came to finding berbs to treat the sick among primitive people.

Maoy of the plants he used such as eucalyptus, curare and quinioe, are included in the display on Primitive Medicine

"Wherever wild plants existed in the world, primitive man discovered and used their properties," said George Milton, summer curator of the Museum

MEDICINE MAN'S TOOLS

The Peyote plant wbicb is displayed with the medicine man's tools of bis trade — rattle, wand and iron drum, used in the Peyote ceremony of the Plains Indians, now is used by psychiatrists to treat certaio mental diseases

"Much of primitive medicine is superstition. But even Shamanistic (witcb doctor) treatment had something to recommend it. A believing patieot got from the medicine mao the mental reassurance that often got results" was the caption beneath a Cherokee medicioe man's mask.

The exhibit will be up until October 15.

Dr. Carothers Associate Faculty Dean

Appointed At Control Board Session Today

Special Release To The Flambeau

The appointment of Dr Werner A. Baum as dean of the Graduate School at Florida State University and of Dr Milton W Carothers as associate dean of the faculties as of Sept. 1 1958, was announced by President Robert M Strozier today.

Dr Carothers has been dean of the Graduate School since January, 1957, a few months before Florida State College for Women became Florida State University. Dr Baum for the past year has been director of university research and prior to that was head of the department of meteorology

Strozier said of the two appointments: "Each man has particular talents for his new assignment. Dr. Carothers has won esteem and confidence in the 15 years he has been associated with the University This experience will be invaluable in assisting the various schools in constantly improving their standards As associate dean to Charles Davis, Dr. Carothers' administrative work will make it possible to devote a large portion of his time to special projects, particularly as they relate to foundations

RESEARCH DIRECTOR

"Dr. Baum is one of the best meteorologists in the country His academic leadership as head of a distinguished department and his work as Director of Research make him an ideal choice for the Graduate School deanship "

Dr. Baum takes over a graduate program in which about 1,000 students are enrolled In the past several years FSU has granted about 150 doctor's degrees and many hundreds of master's degrees. Most of the research, for which FSU receives about $1,200,000 in outside funds yearly, is done by graduate students

Dr Carothers, a native of Newbern, Ala., has been with Florida State University since 1943 when he became registrar of Florida State College for Women. When an overload of GI applicants at the University of Florida was admitted here in the fall of 1946 he became director of the Tallahassee Branch of UF

PAST PRINCIPAL

Prior to his service with FSU Dr Carothers served as principal of the Selma, Ala High School and of H B Plant High in Tampa and was supervising principal of Tampa public schools and director of instruction for Hillsborough county schools In 1937 he became director of the Division of Instruction for the State Department of Education, a position he held until coming to the FSU faculty

He received his bachelor's degree from the University of Alabama in 1919 and continued his studies at George Peabody College for Teachers and at Columbia University, where he received his master's degree in 1927 and his doctor of education degree in 1941

NATIVE OF GERMANY

Dr Baum, a native of Giessen, Germany, has been a member of the faculty for nine years He came here in July, 1949, as associate professor of meteorology and head of the department. In 1955 one-fifth of the master's degrees in meteorology in the United States were graduated by FSU.

Before coming here Dr Baum was assistant professor and research associate at the University of Maryland and instructor and research assistant at the University of Chicago He has been editor-in-chief of the Journal of Meteorology since 1948 and has contributed to numerous scientific periodicals and books and to the Encyclopaedia Britanica He is the author of Russian-English Dictionary of Meteorological Terms and Expressions.

Dr Baum obtained his bachelor's degree and master's degree, in mathematics and meteorology respectively, at the University of Chicago in 1943 and 1944 His Ph D. degree in metorology was obtained at the University of Colorado in 1948.

Sociology Head Gets Fulbright To U Of Delhi

Dr Meyer F. Nimkoff, head of the Sociology Department at Florida State University, leaves this week for a six-month assignment as a Fulbright research scholar at the University of Delhi.

The sociologist has just returned from another trip abroad, as a delegate to the World Family Congress in Paris. The international situation meanwhile has caused a hasty revision of his itinerary.

He and Mrs. Nimkoff were scheduled to go to Delhi by way of Iraq but the revolution there has cancelled this stop. In India he will do research on the impact of urbanization and industrialization on the Hindu joint family system.

At Paris the FSU faculty member gave the opening speech at the plenary session of the World Family Congress, attended by more than 500 delegates from some 60 nations representing organizations which are members of the International Union of Family Organizations.

Present for the nine-day conference were cabinet ministers of the family from a dozen nations, representatives of such groups as the National Congress of Parents and Teachers and of the American Sociological Society of which Dr. Nimkoff was delegate

The sociologist will return to his faculty post next February to begin the spring semester at FSU

Former Pupil Finds Campus Has Changed

By MARGUERITE ROGERS

Coming back to Summer School on this campus after an absence of twelve years gave me a feeling comparable to that of Rip Van Winkle awakening from his long nap.

Driving into the front gate again, I had the sensation of coming back home. The change in name only over the front gate seemed to have made little difference in the general appearance "This is Westcott," I told my husband, "and there is the Education Building where most of my classes will be, with the Demonstration School down behind it. Bryan Hall looks just the same, and there is the library that was new when I was a freshman. Here is Landis where I stayed the last time I was here. Everything seems just the same!"

Ah, Rip, famous last words! Monday morning I was to find out just how wrong I was. The post office was not on the first floor of Westcott as I remembered No, it is in the Student Center. Where was that? Oh?

TO THE WEST

There used to be no part of the college in that direction past the Gym except gardens, tennis courts and pastures. Setting out on a tour of discovery I found the new Library, Conradi Building the Business School, and finally the Student Center. When first I saw it, the cafeteria looked like a large club room (some friends likened it to a Night Club!)

Further on I found the School of Education, with West Hall looming beyond, but I wasn't up to walking over for a closer look. I had seen enough to realize that time had not stood still here.

In the days following I was to marvel over Cawthon and Florida Halls, and the Music and Home Ec Buildings—all air conditioned! Carrying a sweater became a habit, along with the raincoat and umbrella which were always necessary here

But inside the Women's Gym everything appears just the same, even the old cotton-knit bathing suits! The only difference is that now there are men and children going into the pool, too and the girls no longer dash about in "angel robes" after shedding their wet suits.

Ah, the golden age of progress!

FSU Now Member Of National Group

President Robert M. Strozier announced that Florida State University has become a member of the National Association of State Universities.

An invitation to join the association was extended by the organization at its 63rd annual meeting in New York City last month, the FSU president said.

The association brings together each May the presidents of 52 universities over the country to discuss problems in the development of publicly supported higher education.

School Of Education Now Under One Roof

By BONNIE PERRY
Flambeau Staff Writer

One year ago, Florida State University's School of Education was housed in 13 different buildings, plus two physical education departments and the University School in their own individual buildings. In May, the Education School was moved into its new building located between the Geology center and West Hall.

Architecture for FSU is under the direction of the University architect, Mr. Guy Fulton, and the Board of Control. Contracts are let only to Florida building firms.

In designing the building, the education faculty divided into 20 committees and each helped design his own department in collaboration with the construction firm of Smith, McCandless & Hamlin of Clearwater. Decorations, interior coloring and furniture choices were under the direction of Ivan Johnson, head of Art Education Department Construction, decorations, furniture and equipment cost $1,280,000

NEW WINGS

The building is divided into a central section and two wings still under construction. The Industrial Arts wing on the west end will house equipment to teach varied metal work and the east wing will house a large lecture room and offices. Altogether, there will be 67 offices, 27 classrooms, five seminars, a lecture room, lounge and curriculum library.

The complete building is air-conditioned. "By virtue of the building being air-conditioned, the length of classes and scholarship, in general, will be greatly enhanced," said Dean Mode L. Stone, head of the School of Education

On the ground floor is located the child-development center, the constructive design division of Art Education, class rooms and offices. Second floor houses a large testing center, the main lounge and kitchen where coffee is sold to raise money for scholarship funds Health Education is on third and the library and offices on fourth floors.

"We hope the maintenance and upkeep of our new education building will be an example for Florida schools to tend toward in the future," said Dean Stone.

"The building isn't completely furnished, nor is the elevator in yet, but we hope for a formal opening in October," said Dean Stone.

The old education building, facing Westcott, is being revamped and will house the School of Psychology.

Dr. Dohnanyi To Be Honored Sunday, On His 81st Birthday

By JEAN SUE BRUBAKER
Flambeau Feature Editor

The name of Dr. Ernst Von Dohnanyi, one of the world's greatest living composers and pianists, is known wherever great music is enjoyed. He is, perhaps, the most distinguished member of the FSU faculty.

Sunday will be Dr. Dohnanyi's eighty-first birthday. He will celebrate the occasion with a group of friends at the home of a fellow faculty-member, Polish composer-pianist Franciszek Zachara. It was Zachara who, on another birthday, wrote his "Variations on Happy Birthday," a take-off on Dohnanyi's popular classic "Variations on a Nursery Rhyme."

As always, Dr. Dohnanyi will be honored by special broadcasts all over the world. WFSU-FM will join these stations with an hour-long program of his music at 2:00 Sunday afternoon.

The composer was born and lived most of his life in Hungary, where he shared many of the crises of that troubled country during the two world wars. His first visit to the United States came in 1900, when he toured with the Boston Symphony. He played in Carnegie Hall, Boston, Providence, and other cities throughout the nation. He won universal acclaim wherever he went.

In 1948 he made another tour which brought him offers of teaching positions at three American universities. Of these he chose FSU, and has remained here ever since.

UPS AND DOWNS OF LIFE

Dr. Dohnanyi's reminiscences of earlier birthday celebrations reveal many of the "ups and downs" of his life.

On his 60th birthday, in 1937, Hungarian officials declared a festival in his honor. One of the events was a banquet in Budapest

TO BE HONORED ON SPECIAL BROADCASTS—Celebrating his 81st birthday on Sunday, July 27, FSU's Ernst von Dohnanyi will be honored by special world-wide programs playing his many compositions and arrangements.

'Moby Dick'

One of America's greatest novels, Herman Melville's Moby Dick, appears on the screen this week in the campus movie series. The two hour film, which stars Gregory Peck will be shown tonight at 8 p.m in Westcott Auditorium.

AF Cadet Harpe Is Outstanding At ROTC Camp

Cadet Winfield S. Harpe, a regular student here, was selected as the Outstanding Cadet at the Turner Air Force Base, Georgia, AFROTC Summer Camp.

He was awarded the AFROTC Commandant's Trophy. This honor was won over 231 cadets from 49 universities covering the eastern portion of the United States. His home is in Cedartown, Georgia.

Each cadet in the Air Force Reserve Officer Training Corps program must go to an assigned summer camp before he becomes eligible for the gold bars of a Second Lieutenant. The AFROTC program, carried on in 180 colleges throughout the U.S. today, provides the Air Force with over 80 per cent of its officers.

Cadet Harpe will be a senior at FSU this fall and has been designated as a Distinguished Air Force Cadet because of his high academic and ROTC standing. Harpe is majoring in economics.

MacLeish's 'J. B.' Reviewed At Hour

Archibald MacLeish's, "J. B." was reviewed by Dr. Kellogg W. Hunt, professor of English, Wednesday afternoon in Longmire Lounge at Florida State University.

"While still an undergraduate at Yale, MacLeish began his long career of writing poetry. But after finishing Harvard Law school, he found he was more lawyer than poet. MacLeish has worked on the editorial staff of "Fortune Magazine," worked in the Library of Congress, served as Assistant Secretary of War and as a UNESCO delegate. It was in this latter capacity that he spoke on FSU's campus in 1949," said Dr. Kellogg. In the literary field, MacLeish has won two Pulitzer Prizes.

MODERN BIBLICAL

"J. B." is a modernization of the Biblical story of Job. It was easy for the prosperous Job to love God, Satan puts the question of whether this love would last if all he had was destroyed. Job withstands the test of his children, servants and flocks being destroyed, plus the ultimate test of his body being covered with boils. His wife pleads with him to, "Curse the Lord and die," but Job only begs for death. Job asks God for a direct appearance and repents He is then restored to prosperity.

"MacLeish's interpretation preserves some of the actual conversion But he is more interested in J. B.'s reaction rather than God's," said Dr. Kellogg.

CIRCUS SETTING

The setting is in an old circus tent where two retired performers don masks representing Satan, or evil, and good. They observe the modern J.B and his family, while acting as moderators. After the trial put forth by Satan, J. B. consoles his wife by saying, "We don't deserve this world; it's too wonderful for us. To be—become—and end are beautiful. We have the choice of either to live and die or curse God and die" So J. B repeats the words, "I abhor myself and repent" Thus is he restored his possessions.

"J. B." seems to put forth the question, who is hero — God or J. B." said Dr. Kellogg.

Dr. J. Paul Stoakes will review Stringfellow Barr's "Purely Academic" Wednesday in Longmire Hall at 4 30 P M.

Grant Received On Child Study

With the aid of a $1400 grant from the U. S Office of Education, Florida State University psychologists will conduct a four - month study of migrant children and how they are dealt with in the school system.

Dr. Walter D. Smith, associate professor of psychology, and Dr John A. Demming, assistant professor, will conduct the study.

Only 2 Days Left For Entrance Test

New applicants for admission to Florida State University next fall have only two days left on which to take the necessary qualifying examinations, the registrar's office reported today

Assistant Registrar Willis Caldwell said graduate and transfer students must take their tests Thursday, Aug 7 or 14 Freshmen have tests scheduled Friday, Aug 8 and Aug 22

The tests for graduates is the Miller analogies test and that for transfers is the college level ACE test. Freshmen must take the Florida 12th grade test.

$13,948 AEC Fund Given On Research In Chemistry Labs

A new grant of $13,948 from the Atomic Energy Commission was drawn by Florida State University's chemistry laboratories as a result of their study of rare earths and of new elements known as actinides.

The research is under the direction of Dr. Gregory R. Choppin, assistant professor of chemistry and a co-discoverer of one of the new elements, mendelevium.

The grant is for an additional year of research. The AEC already has supported a year of work on the study here

Three graduate students and two undergraduates are assisting the chemist with the research.

Band Name Held

'ALL EYES ON FSNew' HOMECOMING THEME

By LYN FITZPATRICK
Flambeau Staff Writer

The band for the 1958 Homecoming Dance has been selected and has accepted, according to Miss Marie Williams, Social Director. The name of the band will be announced in an early issue of the Flambeau this Fall.

Homecoming this year will be Saturday, November 1. Our football opponent will be Tampa University. The theme, as selected by a committee of students and faculty members, is "All Eyes on FSNew "

Last year more than 4 000 people attended the dance in the "cool" Men's Gym. Miss Williams said that the gym will be heated this year She declined to give the name of the band that has been obtained, but she said it will be a well known orchestra. She also commented that it would represent something of a cross between Stan Kenton, who played here last year, and Sammy Kaye

SIMILAR THIS YEAR

The activities for this year's Homecoming will not vary from those of last year according to present plans. There will be the usual parade Friday afternoon and Pow Wow Friday night. Miss Williams said that the same number of dignitaries who attended the events last year can be expected this year

Last year's rules of expenditure will hold again this year on float entries, not more than $50 should be spent on any one float. This does not include the cost of truck rental or the hiring of a driver

As last year fraternities and sororities may go together on a float

Dr. Lewis M. Killian is general chairman of this year's Homecoming events

'Bermuda Ban' Understood

Strains of "Jennie Lee" and the sight of short shorts furnished by high school eampers this summer hava accomplished one thing—insight on the part of many univarsty students.

From both men and women has come approval of tha "Bermuda Ban". At long last the office of the Dean of Woman has gotten the point across, though we're sure that the method used was unintentional.

Many of the high school campers have ehosan to ignora tha regulations of attire pertaining to women on campus. Shorts have appeared on Landis green, in tha Student Cantar, and evan downtown. Tha high school girls just don't seem to care what rules they braak, as long as they get away with it.

And thay don't seem to realiza that they are on tha campus of Florida Stata University, an institute that is proud of its young ladies. Visitors can easily mistaka the campers for ragular students: hence the concern over their appearance.

Campus men and women who previously couldn't understand why shorts and other sports apparel wera banned have been provided with a curious insight. Most of the woman are indignant when thay spot a pair of shorts in places where they had previously seen no reason for tha rulas banning them. Man, while admiring the attractive lags undarneath, also add overtones of discontent at "what the university is coming to during the summer."

While wa thank tha campers for their demonstration of why tha regulations must prevail, we do hope that thair negative modeling days will come to a speedy close.

Some of the math campers have also provided an interasting example. From 5-7 evary night tha Student Center has been filled with tha repeated strains of "Jennie Lee", sometimes as much as fiva or six times in succassion.

Psychology majors have come up with the interesting theory that here is a living exampla of juvanile rebellion. The boys are taking out their "frustrations" via the juke box. Knowing that the noise bothers anyone older than thamselves during dinner, thay obtain anormous delight from constantly annoying everyone else.

Through some of the experiences hava bean frustrating, the high school campers have truly added to our own education this summer!

National 'Right To Work'?

If you want to keep your job, you'll hava to pay us for it. Giva us a portion of your paycheck aach week and we won't bother you.

In this great American democracy, this is a perfectly lagal and quita common operation. The only thing that evan threatans this marvalous practica is thosa contemptuous right-to-work laws that would allow our free American laborers to get away without paying us.

It all works vary nicely: a man gets a job in a unon shop, he pays tha union for tha privilaga of working thare and ha avan gets the opportunity to strike when the union tells him to. It's in complata harmony with our wonderful damocratic principla that a man has tha right to work for anyone who desires to amploy him. And if the union dasires to take a cut of his wages, what's wrong with that?

After all, if tha unions couldn't force all tha workers to become mambers, many of the workers who are satisfied with their jobs wouldn't join at all. If the labor unions ara to be powerful, we can't afford to allow a man to decide for himself whether or not he wishes to join; he must be forced to join.

That's what these right-to-work laws would do: lat a man decida for himself. But laborers don't know what's good for themselvas; WE hava to tell them.

Some ill-informed an undemocratic people are even advocating a national right-to-work law. They aren't satisfied to invada upon the rights of tha unions in just a few states. Now thay would persecuta the unions nationwida.

Iraq—State Of Confusion

By ALLAN HEAD

Mamo to Ravolutionaries: Bury tha opposition, Be popular at home. Consolidate externally, Play it cool.

Almost overnight, laaders of the Iraql ravolt hava ceased to be communist plotters, bloody-handed murdarers.

Senator Russell has called for direct U. S.-Iraq talks. The State Department is "sounding out" Baghdad Pact members on recognition of tha new ragime.

Iraq oil supplies are vital to tha West. Prior to tha coup, we controlled access to this oil through political control of Iraq's ruling clique. The formar government not only was responsiva to British suggestions, it tried to guess what the British would like—and do it befora being askad.

It was not so sensitiva, unfortunately, to demands of its own people.

News of its fall was a shock to London and Washington. Our laaders reacted as Czar Alaxander I did whan he saw beloved fellow monarchs being unseated by tha peasants

But counter-revolution has a nasty sound in the 20th cantury. And our intelligence was in the dark as to what the naw Iraq governmant might mean.

We wanted to ge over there—to seize any opportunity for rastoring tha status quo—but we weren't prepared to rush into Iraq blindfolded.

We also ware concerned about possible effects of the Iraq coup in Labanon and Trans-Jordan, the last two Mideast countries where our political control still holds.

That this was not tha main objectiva, however, is shown by tha immediacy of our reaction—and its strength.

Prior to the Iraq coup, Lebanon President Chamoun had asked for U. S. troops. His local opposition was undarlining its campaign with traditional Arab political measures—strikes and bombs.

Tha violence was on a small scale, was contained by tha army, and was axpected largaly to disappear following this week's elections. The U. S. made sounds in the U. N., but sent no troops.

Then came tha Iraq coup. And countarrevolution a third of the way around tha world requires a beachhead or forward staging area. The U. S. suddenly answered Chamoun's request—with over 9,000 of America's toughest fighting men and mountains of supplias.

One wonders if Chamoun was surprised. His parliament was, certainly.

At that point the dust began to settle in Iraq. To our chagrin, we found no counter-revolution to sponsor. If wa went in, it would be pure aggression.

Wa couldn't restora the formar elique; they were safely buried.

We hopefully spread reports of popular dissatisfaction, of loyal army troops marching on Baghdad from the north. But the Iraqui people and army were happy with the new ragime.

We ware not able to keep the new govarnment isolated; it won quick recognition from the Soviet Union and alligned itself with the UAR.

At the same time. Iraq's laaders skillfully walked the neutral tightrope—thay "played it cool." Thay protected Westernars in Baghdad, vowed friandship to tha West, promised oil to Europe, sent a delagate to the UN.

Wa stopped — and started wondering how to get the troops back homa.

Staff Writer Finds That Iraq Student Is Surprised

By LYN FITZPATRICK

Last week's Iraq coup came as no less of a surprise to the people of Iraq than it did to the rest of the world. An exchange student on this campus whose home is in Baghdad said that letters from her home before the coup gava no indication that anything was about to happen.

Was this revolution the results of outside—meaning communist—influence, a discontent with the rule of King Faisal, or a result of the rising spirit of Arab nationalism? The last of these generalizations is probably the most prevelant, but the other two are not to be disregarded. In 1941, during World War II, the people of Iraq rose in a similar rebellion against the royal government. This revolt was quickly put down, however, by the British army.

Whether or not communist influence had anything to do with this revolt is difficult to ascertain since no valid information has come out of Iraq since the day of the coup, July 14. It cannot even be said with any eertainty that Nasser and his forces had any direct influence on the revolt. It can, however, be assumed that he did. On the basis of this assumption, and on the basis of Nasser's actions in the last week it eould be said that there was possibly some communist influence involved in the coup. It is doubtful that this influence was direct, however.

Nasser is a powerful figure in the Arab world. His efforts to bring the Arab world together cannot be condemned. The United States has not attempted to condemn this idea, but it has condemned the method Nasser has used How could America find fault with a people attempting to institute the form of government which they think could best serve them? This is, after all, one of the principlea upon whieh the American form of government is based.

No one except the Arab people can possibly underetand the problems which face them and how these problems can best be solved. They realize that they cannot handle all the problems themselves so they look for outside help. The only help that has been forthcoming thus far has been from Russia If America had any hope left of winning the favor of the Arab world, this hope was lost with the sending of forces to Lebanon.

Philosopher Would Profit From History Lesson

LETTERS to the EDITOR

TOTHE EDITOR:

World War III? Maybe. On first contemplation it seems thrilling and exciting in a world where frontiers and adventurs are nearly obliterated. Yet, the next thought brings hesitancy . . . fear of a world crumbling at our feet and the very real thought of death!

We, of my generation, seemed to have been born under an evil omen. Our childhood was spent in a tense happiness while our fathers went off to war. Following the close of the war, we grew up in an age that seemed to be always racing, racing, racing. As peace began to settle over us and life held a promise of acquiring the material things of value, a milestone-less life with kids playing on the parlor rug, and spiritualism so engulfing as to make life complete.

This intermission batwsen peace and our next war was brief. Yet its sweet taste aroused an insatiable appetite, so again we wers off to war to find the happiness that had been so rudely taken from us For what we held dear we would fight, whether it be for ourselves or others. Born in a time of destruction and need, one chief characteristic of ours has been sharing: after all, who knows if we'll even need what we've got tomorrow—we learn to live only a day at a time, gambling with Fate for every extra hour

In this second war of our generation, we tried too hard to find a lasting peace. Instead, we created enemies where we would have friends, unrest where we would have stillness and frustration where we would have a future to seek

By this time we had resigned ourselves to a life of searching, dreaming and just existing Understanding us is impossible for there must be reason for understanding and my generation has no reason Yes, this world must hold answers, but not for us.

So it seems, now we stand on the verge of another war. This one threatens not only us but our sympathizing parents as well. Shall they watch us exit as we came — seeking happiness and finding meaning only in the fevered pitch of war and excitement.

To some, Death is frightening. Yet, we seek it, relish it and welcome its coming In it, only, will we be gathered to something to which we can cling

So war, come. We dedicate our lives to you. Through you, we shall find a new way—either an opening to live for life itself, or the ever caressing sweet peace of eternity.

Pornography

TO THE EDITOR:

How can pornography present a problem associated with graduation from this institute of higher learning?

It does for me as an adult undergraduate. My family, including my 12 year old son, has a real interest in my pending graduation ceremony and fully expects to attend. I would especially like my son to be there as part of a continuing effort on my part to condition him to the idea of carrying his own education on through the university level.

My problem is to fit the crude, obscene, juvenile and omnipresent "art and poetry" that adorns the walls of the men's restrooms of the campus into a concept of culture and higher education. I am not naive enough to believe that he is not otherwise exposed to such degradation.

He encounters this in bus stations and other facilities open to all social classes. He has asked questions about the subject and I have explained that the unfortunates who originate this trash can't help themselves; that they lack education and basic cultural guidance.

It would be difficult for a clean-up program to remove this sediment as fast as the maladjusted juvenile mind can replace it; however, there seems to be no effort along this line at FSU. Perhaps the janitors have given up in disgust.

Meanwhile, I have a problem.

Dangerously Misinform[ed]

By DR. HARRY F. BRUBAKER

During the first ten years or so of my professional life I used to quote one of my mentors in the field of geography, Professor Cressey of Syracuse University, as observing that there are no experts on tha Soviet Union: only people with various degrees of ignorance. In the last ten years or so I have concluded that the situation is much worse than Dr. Cressey's little pleasantry indicates: there are few peopls who are not dangerously misinformed about the Soviet Union.

Ignorance is a very eommon state, and not at all objectionable. Most of us are ignorant about some things. From tha standpoint of a teacher, student ignorance when combined with euriosity, is a very desirable trait: it makes his work pleasurable and easy. Widespread misinformation, however, is a teacher's nightmare. Students who know things that aren't so are very difficult people, as nothing is so hard to change as a mind made up: evidence is a weak weapon against a fondly held belief. Worst of all are those people who simultaneously hold two violently contradictory sets of beliefs in water-tight compartments and are reluctant to give up either set.

I present a short list of soma of the persistent contradictions making up the general student knowledge of the Soviet Union over the years.

1. The Soviet Union is an authoritarian communist state, and hence has the worst possibls kind of government, and it is much more efficient than democracy.

2 Its economie system is unworkable: it consistently fails to reach the goals of its five-year plens, and its productivity is outpacing the West.

3. It is some fifty years behind the United States in davelopment, end it poses a serious threat to the West through economic competition.

4 Wages are equal for all workers, and extremes of income are greater than those of laborers in the United States.

5. Diets are extremely poor, and Russians are tremendous eaters and drinkers.

6 Its educational system is suthoritarian and abhorrent in American ideals, and we should emulate it.

7 Its educational system produces half-educated people who are winning diplomatic vietories over American represen[ta]tives in the neutral parts of [the] world.

8. Its scientists are not f[ree] to seek truths, but must tem[per] their findings to agree [with] Marxist dogma, and their s[ci]entific achievements so far s[ur]pass ours as to be frighten[ing].

9 The Russians make [a] mania of secrecy and we ca[n't] really find out about th[eir] achievements, and their sci[en]tific journals contain all [we] need to know if we would t[ake] the trouble to translate the[m].

10. Many of its people a[nd] some of its constituent rep[ub]lics are in a state of incipi[ent] revolt which we should enco[ur]age, and through their bl[ind] patriotism and fear they [will] support Mother Russie to [the] death.

Such misinformation is [not] limited to students: it is in [the] public domain and availabl[e to] all. In spite of the suppos[edly] efficient German and Un[ited] States intelligence services [the] performances of the Soviet [Un]ion in World War II surpr[ised] both countries: they didn't k[now] what the Soviet was like. T[he] German High Command pro[ved] ignorant of the most fundam[en]tal and elementary facts ab[out] the Soviet Union, end an Am[er]ican general was quoted at [the] time of the German attack [as] saying that the Soviet would[n't] last six weeks.

There are rational expla[na]tions for soma of this confus[ion]. Before 1940 and since 1945 a[ny] derogatory information abo[ut] the Soviet was acceptable a[nd] anything commendatory w[as] propaganda and probebly s[ub]versize, while between 1941 a[nd] 1944 adulation of the Soviet w[as] rampant. Much of the world m[ay] have been induiging in the da[n]gerous pastime of believing w[hat] they wanted to belisve.

A curious aspect of th[ese] paradoxes is that many of th[eir] components are or have b[een] true at some time within [the] last generation, but they m[ust] be accompanied by datelines a[nd] a knowledge of sequences Ge[og]raphers are dedieated to try [to] understand (1) the attribu[tes] of place (2) under what circu[m]stances they developed (3) t[he] meaning and consequences a[nd] (4) what attributes and pol[icies] we should adopt as e resul[t of] this knowledge. The Soviet Un[ion] is a sood candidate for su[ch] an investigation, even if it [res]ults only in bringing your pr[ej]udices up to date.

If So, What Will You Do?

By MYGNON CHAMPION

Silent clusters of people gather around the radio. No one speeks; no one needs to. They each share the same thought and each face bears the same solemn expression.

Then the news is over, but no one moves. Finally someone asks the question that everyons is thinking, "Will we go to war?"

Living in a peninsula state, we are susceptible from the sea as well as from the air. The Soviet Union now has 275 submarines, more than twice as many as the U. S., and m[ore] than half of them are l[ong] range. Yet, we lie complacen[t] on our backs, unprepared a[nd] unconcerned Meanwhile, the So[]viet bear stockpiles more pla[nes], more submarines, more bom[bs], more missiles.

More than ever before, v[olun]teers are desperately needed [in] Civil Defense. They are need[ed] in every capacity: first aid, f[ire] fighting, child care, transpo[rta]tion, auxiliary policemen, reg[is]tration, feeding, home nurs[ing] and many more. There's a pla[ce] for everyone.

Once Over Lightly

For Shame On You!

By MARSHALL LACOMBE

Tallahasses is at war! Thousands are dying each day, and the mortality rate is rising. The situation is becoming mors eritical as the embittered people of this city become more callous and careless in their wanton massassassinations.

We, of the class Mammalis, species Homo Sapien, are living under terrorist conditions, the object of our terror being a member of the family Blattidae, order Orthoptera, known as the Croton bug or, more commonly the Blatella sermanica. The Cockroach!

Webster refers to the Croton bug as "a small winged cockroach, common round hot-water pipes" He doesn't mention cold-water pipes, bureau drawers, underneath pillows, in shoes, or ceilings, between sandwiches, or flavoring cold drinks.

Before going any further I must declare my stand on this weighty issue Having investigated the Cockroach point of view, I must admit these poor creatures are downtrodden (literally), misunderstood, and cute Yes, CUTE! Perhaps, while in a homicidal frenzy of stamping and crushing, you failed to look carefully at your victims. Little, virtually defenseless, essentially CUTE Croton bugs.

Let's take a test situation. There's a little Croton bus (Roach) crawling across the floor (actually, he's walking, but to give him a lower, more humble status in life, we say he's crawling). What's your first impulse? TO STOMP HIM! To crush out his very existence!

Why? Oh, sure, you're ready with a fistful of reasons and defenses, all of them basically selfish in nature. You say he's a pest, he eats your food, sleeps in your bed, makes a home of your home. Assuming those are your reasons, would you stomp one of your in-laws? A member of your family, or a guest? Of course not, that's not the American Way!

I hate to use a generalization such as The American Wey for an argument, but aren't you using generalizations to justify yourself? You stomp that one little Roach in the name of all Roaches, you claim they're ALL ba[d]. Shame on you! The only tr[ue] generalization is that "no generalization is true"

Let's take the Freudian ans[wer]. With each cockroach you kill, th[e] next one becomes a little eas[ier] to kill. The implications here a[re] obvious! First Cockroaches, th[en] maybugs, butterflys, mice k[it]tens, dogs, monkeys . and [who] know what comes next!

This logic is not so farfetch[ed] when one considers the bac[k]ground and motivations beh[ind] men such as Jack-the-ripper, a[nd] Machina Gun Kelley. Am I reac[h]ing you? You, the same pers[on] who, when it was convenient [for] you, used such adages as "[live] and let live," and "share a[nd] share alike!"

The little Chinese boy lear[ns] to live with and love his crick[et] which is, for him, "man's be[st] friend" If you must kill, the on[ly] possible justification for it [is] preservation for you and you[r] loved ones The Arabs eat grass-hoppers for food, the French the[ir] snails. No senseless killing there! French fried Cockroaches wit[h] catsup, why not?

Allow me, then, to appeal [to] your sense of humanity for a[nd] fraternity with, other creatures. The Croton bug, or Roach, know[s] no hate for you, feels no malice His life is simple and short. W[hy] must it be made shorter because of a blind enmity with selfish connotations? Are we a sadistic species, taking a perverted pleasure in stomping out a relatively easy-going, devil-may-care bug with an abdomen (like ours), a thorax (similar to some chests), and a head (not unlike many I've seen)?

Let's help these little fellows along, show them we practice what we preach and create a more genial and humane atmosphere. I am supervising a series of research experiments dedicated to a Better Way of Life for our Six-legged Contemporaries Any heart-given donations would carry with them a blessed hope in this time of trial and strife.

Looking Back On '57

Tribe Views Future With High Hopes

(Editor's Note: In preparation for the coming football season we are running this recap of the 1957 football season. This story was prepared by J. Pierce Lehmbeck who is now a writer with the Associated Press in Oklahoma City, Okla.

By J. PIERCE LEHMBECK
Former Flambeau Sports Editor

On the opening play of the 1957 football season, Florida State halfback Bobby Renn moved around Furman's left flank and scooted 34 yards, untouched, for a touchdown.

But back up field a red flag dropped and Renn's brilliant run was of little more value than an unnecessary windsprint.

It was heartbreaking, true, but it was a thing Florida State football followers were to see throughout the year. And it was the kind of chemistry that would add up to a 4-6 record.

Here's the way it happened:

FLA. STATE 27, FURMAN 7

Renn's first touchdown was nullified but the Seminoles bounced back shortly afterwards to shove in the first of many scores which counted that night.

Renn sliced into the Purple Hurricane end zone from a yard out for the first one. Later he found end Bob Nellums alone in the end zone and placed a soft two-yard aerial in the big senior's hands.

Nellums got State's third touchdown, too, when he smothered a Furman fumble behind the goal line. The fourth score came when Ted Rodrique rifled a 33-yard pass to Clare Bagnall.

The score could have been much larger. The Seminoles rolled up a total of 459 yards offensively and ground out 19 first downs. Furman was held to 91 yards and only 4 first downs.

BC 20, FLA. STATE 7

Florida State's Football forces flew into Boston on a giant constellation that had the Seminoles thinking they'd seen the ultimate in aerial development.

But then they watched a Boston College quarterback with a gifted appendage weave an air demonstration second to none. Don Allard completed 12 of 18 passes for 147 yards.

And he had something to do with every Boston score.

It wasn't just one of those games where a quarterback sits back and heaves the homerun ball. Allard often would have a third and nine situation and he'd get 10 yards with a flick of his arm

And while the Seminoles were reeling under his accurate tosses, they were unable to get an offensive thrust underway until well into the final period when Rodrique unleased a 33-yard scoring heave to Ron Schomburger

The effects of this game were to be felt for some time.

Tackle Jerry Graham and quarterback Bobby Renn were injured and sidelined for Florida State's battle with Villanova the following week

VILLANOVA 21, FLA. STATE 7

Injuries or no, you'd get the impression Villanova did a heckuva job scouting the BC-State contest. The Mainliners used the same type strategy and hobbled the Seminoles, 21-7.

Only this time, the talented appendage that kept flicking those aggravating aerials belonged to Johnny Grazione. He completed four of eight for 90 yards—one for a 61-yard touchdown.

When he wasn't causing trouble with his passes, Grazione was making like a fullback and knocking off hunks on the ground.

Schomburger again scored the Seminole's lone touchdown when he moved in front of a 14-yard pass from quarterback Jerry Henderson.

There was an unusual thing about all this passing. During the entire 1956 season, the Seminoles had given up only two touchdowns through the air. With three games this year, State had given up five.

N. C. STATE 7, FLA. STATE 0

There are more ways than one to win a football game. Sometimes when you lose by the score, you come away feeling you've won a moral victory.

Rationalization, certainly, but in Florida State's 7-0 loss to North Carolina State's rapid Wolfpack, it was pretty effective. And the Seminoles were only slightly disappointed when the game was over.

The Wolfpack came into the contest a 14-point favorite, mostly because of a prestige-packed pair, Dick Hunter and Dick Christy. Christy won it when he caught a pass and romped 47 yards.

But for a long time, some people will insist the touchdown was an illegal one and the game should have been a tie. Photographers on the sidelines said Christy went out of bounds before he caught the pass.

But the loss went into the books and N. C. State went home still ranked 13th in the nation. Florida State took a look at a surprising sophomore guard named Al Ulmer and prepared to meet unbeaten Abilene Christian.

FLA. STATE 34, ABILENE 7

The 173-pound Ulmer was named Florida's lineman of the week for his rugged play against the 'Pack, and he was a part of a revamped lineup that crushed the Texans the following week.

For one thing, 208-pound end Bob Nellums became a fullback and scored twice, once on a 45-yard pass play. And Bobby Renn worked at quarterback like a magician.

Florida State had never beaten Abilene Christian before but the Texans were routed in this one. Florida State rolled up 448 yards in total offensive effort for an all-time school record.

Renn ran as well as he passed. He romped 52 yards for one FSU touchdown. Pappy Roeman streaked in from five yards out for the final score.

TWO STALWART VETERANS—All-Florida Guard Al Ulmer leads interference for charging Quarterback Joe Majors, an aerial ace that has tied Florida State's AllTime attempted pass record (22) in single game action (vs Auburn in 1957).

GUARD LEO BAGGETT

Abilene scored its lone touchdown when Joe Harber smashed across from the one.

Jerry Graham was the lineman honored by the state's sportswriters after this one. The 205-pound junior recovered two Abilene fumbles and was a tackling demon.

Which meant things were beginning to look very good for the Seminoles and they were able to carry a 2-3 record into their Homecoming clash with Virginia Tech.

FSU 20, VIRGINIA TECH 7

Tradition has it that you're supposed to win Homecoming games and Florida State has never lost one under Tom Nugent. The Virginia Tech game wasn't any different and State scored a 20-7 victory.

The Tribe struck three times before a capacity crowd on a beautiful sunny afternoon and each time there was a touch of drama to make the triumph even more pleasing

The first touchdown came when Schomburger legged it behind the Tech safety man to pull down Renn's aerial and romp 51 yards without being touched.

A little later, 225-pound senior tackle George Boyer scored the only touchdown of his college career when he broke through the line to pounce on a Tech fumble in the end zone.

And the most spectacular score came in the third period when little, 160-pound sophomore Fred Pickard slipped through tackle and galloped 80 yards—the longest run any State back has made from scrimmage.

The Virginians scored their lone touchdown in the second quarter when fullback Bobby Connor barreled into the Seminole end zone from a yard out.

The triumph gave the Seminoles a 3-3 season's record and began preparing for the superhuman effort they'd need to cope with a guy named Curci and the University of Miami.

MIAMI 40, FLORIDA STATE 13

Florida State mustered that super-human effort for half a football game. State moved to a 7-6 halftime lead and they faltered as Miami rolled up 34 points in the second half to win, 40-13.

A newspaper headline expressed it pretty good: "Seminoles Just Punched Out." And that came by the Tribe's own admittance.

Quarterback Bob Renn remarked, "We played 'em even without a first team the first half. But they had three first teams and they just kept throwing them at us. We punched out."

State scored the first time it got the ball when Bob Nellums leaped over a pile of Miami tacklers to fall into the end zone. Then Curci and crew came rambling back minutes later to make it a 7-6 game at halftime.

It was all Curci during the final half. Altogether, he completed 8 of 12 passes for 83 yards and two touchdowns and gained another 65 yards on the ground.

Florida State's lone score in the final period came when Joe Majors lofted a 47-yard pass to his roommate, Bill Kimber.

MISS. SOUTHERN 20
FLORIDA STATE 0

It's been said that when you play the big ones, quite often you'll feel the effects for a long time to come.

And Mississippi Southern took advantage of the situation when the Seminoles went into Hattiesburg the week after the Miami battle. Southern ground out a 20-0 triumph.

The Tribe just couldn't seem to get an offensive effort rolling that sweat-dripping November night

ONE GAL AND ALL THOSE GUYS—Seaman Apprentice Jean Sue Brubaker has the edge on most Florida State Coeds as she is the only enlisted Wave in the local Naval Reserve unit.

FSU Coed

Only Enlisted Wave In Local Reserve

By LORA TWEEDLE
Flambeau Staff Writer

Seaman Apprentice—sounds like an unusual title for a girl? It belongs to Jean Sue Brubaker, a junior at Florida State University, who has the distinction of being the only coed member of the Tallahassee Naval Reserves.

Jean Sue joined the reserves about a year ago and according to her, she "loves it. The opportunities are unlimited, there's good pay, and you can go almost anywhere and do almost anything a woman can do in civilian life."

When the women are on active duty or at a summer camp they receive free clothes, medical expense, room and board, and regular pay. Also, when they are enroute to or from a reserve meeting, summer camp, or on active duty, they are covered by insurance.

In the reserve meetings Jean Sue attends classes to learn Navy techniques and does everything the men do, except to learn about guns. This is the only phase of the training where she differs from the males.

According to Jean Sue, she never did feel silly at these meetings even at the beginning. "Just a little lonesome" beina the only female around. At first the men were a "little surprised" but are very nice and polite and make her feel right at home

NOT OBLIGATED

Another distinction between women in the reserves and their male "buddies" is the fact that the women are not obligated for a specific amount of time. They are free to drop out anytime they desire This holds true until they are ensigns. At this time they must decide whether they want to join the regular Navy or not. If they decide to join, they must then sign up for two years At the end of this time they are again able to choose between civilian or Naval careers. Jean Sue will hold the rank of ensign when she graduates from the University

When asked if Lebanon would have any efefct upon her, she replied, "no, not unless there is a full-scale war." If it does turn into that she can be called to duty the same as the men are.

As for training duty, Jean Sue does not live in the men's barracks at some naval station. Since two weeks active duty is required each year, she chose to go to the Great Lakes to electronics school. While there she lives in a women's supervised barracks and is considered part of the Waves, the female counterpart of a sailor.

Upon graduation Jean Sue plans to receive a degree in social science and hopes to teach a year or so in a foreign country in connection with the Navy.

Jean is not the only reserve member in the Brubaker family. Her brother joined the same day she did. He is now at Reserve Oficer Candidate School, Rhode Island. This is an unusual honor, because he is the only freshman from the Florida colleges and universities who was selected to ao

Screen Scenes

Elvis Stars (?) In 'King Creole'

By LINDA ARNOW

Here he is again, our sullen national hero, Elvis Presley, in Hal Wallis' production of "King Creole." This movie, which is an adaptation of Harold Robbins' novel, A Stone for Danny Fisher, will really tear your heart out.

Elvis appears as typical, clean-cut (he's minus the side-burns in this one) All-American boy. When he fails to araduate for the second time and he's out of that areen stuff that makes the world go 'round, he does what any red-blooded male in this country would do.

He puts on his beat-up black leather jacket, combs his foot-long greasy locks and saunters down Bourbon Street in search of a job. After a quick conference in a back alley, the spirit of enterprise comes through. Elvla uses his business sense and nonchalantly helps to rob the five and dime, using bis guitar as a weapon.

TWO ROMANCES

But there's more! There'a two romances! One is none other than the sweet, innocent little soda-jerking girl in the dime atore, played by Delores Hart. She is supposed to be symbolical of aood, clean living. I think I'm not so sure.

And the other love of Presley's putrid life is a bug-eyed, well-built gun moll, Carolyn Jones, who is employed by the Midas of the local underworld. It was said of him that "Everything he touches turns to drink," and the moll is no exception. She's definitely not the take-bome type. You know—wholesome.

Whoever said that Presley might some day be molded into an actor had better check the molds aaain. The only difference between this one and the last one is that Presley has more to mumble.

Oh yes, there's another difference, too. He has the lead this time. I liked it better the other way.

SIDEBURNS GONE

Not only has Hollywood done little for Presley's acting, it has done little for his looks. For the greater part of the movie he looks like a "Before" picture in an advertisement for Wildroot. I will applaude the shavina of the sideburns, though. It must have been a sacrifice.

But there are some memorable scenes in this picture.

I don't think I'll ever forget the half-dozen or so seizures that Presley had during the course of the film. These twitchina, jerkina, shaking fits are accompanied by whistling, stomping, and clapping—in the movie, that is. The theatre audience just laughed.

I also thoroughly enjoyed the shot in which Elvis is bleeding to death. I cackled!

But there is one scene that will live in my heart. This is the one in which Elvis sings a tender song to his father, whose kindly old face is bathed in the soft light of the night club. It really got me

For a one-word comment on the movie, I submit to you mine: "A-a-a-a-a-g-g-g--h-h-h!"

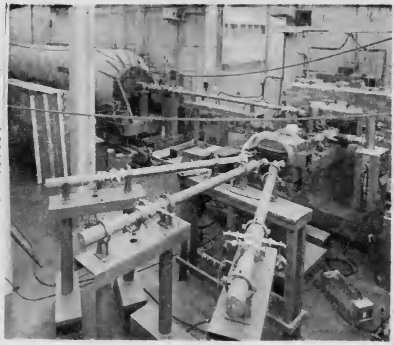
Dr. Kellogg Hunt To Teach In Syria

The State Department has awarded Dr Kellogg W. Hunt, professor of English here, an educational exchange grant for a year of teacbing in the Syrian University at Damascus.

The FSU faculty member was recommended to the State Department for a lecture program by the Conference Board of Associated Research Councils.

Dr. Hunt will report to the university Oct 1 for lectures in English literature and language during the school year. His wife and their two children will accompany him to Syria.

Dr Hunt, chairman of written communication on the FSU faculty, has been here since 1947 He is a native of Iowa with degrees from Cornell College and the University of Iowa During World War II he served as an air and surface naviaator in the Navy.



FSU'S NUCLEAR ACCELERATOR—Scheduled to start operations in two or three weeks will provide practical experience and research on the Masters Degree level. Maximum efficiency is not planned until later in the fall.

Looking Back

as Southern atruck for two second quarter touchdowns in a matter of minutes.

It was a homecoming game for Southern and a final, 4-foot sneak by the Mississippi Quarterbaek made the local fans a little nappier. The year before, State bad takeo a 20-13 triumph.

And all FSU had to do was pick up its ego and head back home to do battle with the biggest of them all—mighty Auburn, the team that was to finish as national ehampions

AUBURN 29, FLORIDA STATE 7

Joe Majors, the sophomore brother of former Tennessee All-American Johnny Majors, was the gentleman who was to emerge from defeat a hero in this one Majors watched from the bench as State reeled under one Tiger thrust after another. Then Coach Tom Nugent sent him in and joined everyone else in surprise.

Majors completed 12 of 22 throws, tieing the school's attempted pass record, for 104 yards and a 34-yard touchdown—one of four scored against mighty Auburn all season. Another of Major's passes carried for 47 yards to be caught on the Tiger three-yard line, but a penalty took care of that.

And still another carried 62 yards only to slip through the hands of the receiver in the Tiger end zone

Auburn coach Shug Jordan described Major's play "as one of the most surprising thinga I've seen all year"

And Nugent agreed

Auburn vaulted atop the nation's top 10 after this one and there was a quaint, aatisfied feeling at Florida State that the aame could have been closer — mucb closer

And the trip to Tampa for a final game was to seem anti-climactic.

FLORIDA STATE 21, TAMPA 7

As one writer put it, "There wasn't quite enough of 245 lb Fred Cason to spread over Phillips Field and Florida State ground out a 21-7 victory over Tampa.

State had a lot of trouble corraling the bullisb fullback but when it was all over, there was little question as to the winner.

Renn, Nellums and Pickard each scored a touchdown wben they could shake off the effects of a high wind adding to the discomfort of a 40-degree temperature.

A FITTING TOUCH

As a fitting touch to a rather fine season, Florida's Sportswriters named Bob Renn and guard Al Ulmer to its furat team All Florida squad. For Renn, it was the second year in a row

And for Ulmer—a shoestring, 173-pound sophomore guard — it was especially an honor. He was the firat soph to make the team and State officials were fairly certain be'd made more tackles than any other lineman in the state

Finishing Touches

Nuclear Accelerator Being Readied Here

By JIM MILLER
Flambeau Staff Writer

Florida State University is developing its nuclear research program to meet the challenge of the atomic age.

The most significant developments are the purchasing of the new Van de Graaff accelerator, a $2,000,000 machine, and the reconstruction of the particle accelerator.

At present, finishing touches are beina put on the particle accelerator Elmer Carter said, "The accelerator will be in use in two or three weeks, but not at maximum efficiency." Carter and Bernis Hannah are the two graduate students assistina the professor in charge, Dr. Davis. Hannah added to the eomment of Carter, "The six or eight months it takes to get material requisitioned and delivered greatly hinders our work."

RADIATION PROBLEM

This accelerator was originally constructed in 1956. Now as part of the reconstruction work a wall of concrete block is being put up for a shield. Each block weighs one hundred pounds. The wall will be three feet wide, ten tall, and fifteen feet long It will effectively shield all dangerous neutrons but since the wall covers only one side of the room, the accelerator can be run only at night to prevent radiation exposure through the unprotected walls.

The particle accelerator will be used almost exclusively for work on the Master's Degree level.

In contrast, on bis 70th birthday, the Dohnanyi family, husband and wife and two children, were refugees livina in a little colony of about 35 Hungarians in Austria. Food was acarce, but his friends somebow managed to rent a restaurant for a surprise party in his honor. There were flowers, a birthday cake, wine and meat for which these refugees bad bartered their last pieces of extra clothing.

Each year on July 27, the British Broadcastina System broadcasts a special program of his music. In 1944 the Dohnanyi family was in Nazi-occupied Hungary, and heard the BBC program in defiance of the Nazi ban on foreign broadcasts

DOES NOT YET RETIRE

Throuah the years, the Dohnanyis have made friends all over the world, and still correspond with many of them.

Dr. Dohnanyi's career stretches across a span of more than 60 years Asked if he plans someday to retire, the musician replied that be feels no less capable of doing bis work well than be did ten or twenty years aao.

"The FSU music school is one of the best in the country, and I enjoy my work and my students I can't just retire and do nothing. It would be very dull."

Dohnanyi at 81 is a vigorous man, in excellent health, still maintaining a full schedule of concerts, teaching and composing. His friends, students, and other admirers will join this week in wishing him maoy more active and creative years in the world of music.

Scientists Making Four Balloon Tests

Scientists began measuring the intensity of cosmic rays with balloons sent to a height of 100,000 feet from the campus of Florida State University last week in the first experimental work here in connection with the International Geophysical Year.

Four hydrogen filled balloons, each of them about eight feet in diameter, are being loosed at dawn each day to carry a plastic bag full of instruments into the stratosphere. Bartol Research Corporation of the Franklin Institute in Swarthmore, Pa., which is conducting the experiments, records radio signals from the instruments in a trailer on the football practice field at FSU.

The research foundation is conducting identical flights in Swarthmore at the same time, according to Dr. M A Pomerantz, who is directing the research program. The entire project is sponsored by the U. S National Committee of IGY, and is aided by the Office of Naval Research, U.S Atomic Energy Commission and National Geographic Society. They arranged to use the FSU campus for the experiments through Dr Harvey Hall, head of the physics department.

Dr Pomerantz explained that the earth's magnetic field, strongest at the equator, is inclined to bend the low energy rays away from the earth. As one moves away from the equator toward the poles, however, more and more low energy rays are normally received.

STUDY OF MAGNETIC FIELDS

Actually the principal implications of the experiments are the knowledge expected to be contributed, the scientist said, about magnetic fields in outer space. Cosmic rays, coming for long distances through space and being affected by magnetic fields, furnish a convenient device for study of the problem.

The researcher wraps up the instruments, weighing about 17 pounds, in a transparent bag which furnishes a sort of "greenhouse" to keep the instruments warm in their 60 degrees below surroundings while the sun's rays are reaching them. Some of the instruments are painted black to absorb heat better.

The four balloons—two smaller ones and two larger ones—are filled with hydrogen gas. The four balloons are tied together and to the bagful of instruments. The two smaller balloons serve to help hoist the load from the ground but break at about 30,000 feet. The larger ones take over as the power-horses at that height. When one of the larger balloons finally pops at a diameter of 30 feet—at well over 100,000 feet—the other begins a slow descent.

By that time the bagful of instruments has drifted perhaps hundreds of miles away from Tallahassee. The beep of the radio equipment, recorded in a notebook by an assistant, already has given the researchers their findings. Although the scientist said he would like for anyone finding the instruments to return them, the $500 they cost is only a fraction of the expense of the entire project.

Student Body Prexy To Attend Seminar

By LYN FITZPATRICK
Flambeau Staff Writer

Art Moore, Florida State University student body president, will attend the Southern Student Human Relations Seminar to be held at Ohio State University August 3-17.

This seminar is set up for the study of the problems of segregation and integration in Southern colleges and universities. The ultimate purpose is to derive an understanding of the problems and complexities of race relations in the South.

The 15 participants, all from Southern colleges, were chosen to attend this seminar by an agency of the National Student Association. The expenses of the students will be covered by a Marshall Fields Grant.

NEGROES IN SEMINAR

The seminar itself will be interracial. Five students come from desegregated colleges, five from segregated colleges, and five from Negro colleges.

The curriculum will include such topics as: The Changing South, Segregation and Desegregation, Race and Prejudice, Press and Public Relations, The Role of the Student in Desegregation, and The Role of Religious Organizations in Desegregation.

The student director of this seminar will be Ray Farabee, president of the United States National Student Association. The assistant director will be Martha Morrison from George Peabody College, Tennessee. The staff director will be Dr. Warren Ashby, professor of ethics at the Woman's College, University of North Carolina.

After this seminar, Art Moore will attend a conference of college presidents at Ohio State August 17 through September 1.

Educator Says School Criticism Hurts Profession

An Ohio State University educator declared last night that much of the criticism leveled at schools these days is "irresponsible" and is hurting them.

Dr Laura Zirbes, professor emeritus of education at the Ohio institution, was the speaker at the weekly summer lecture series at Florida State University.

Speaking on "Constructive Reactions to Criticisms of the Schools," he said:

"Irresponsible criticism is damaging to the teacher's morale, to school support, to teacher supply and to public faith in education.

"It is often made by people not in a position to be a critic. A drama critic or a music critic has to be an expert in his field, but that does not seem to be true in the field of education. Anyone who is against it can criticize it.

"Criticism to be constructive should be thoughtful. It should be based on a consideration of what is involved and suggest action which is corrective or at least likely to bring about improvement.

"We need a better interpretation of what schools are doing and better methods of evaluation in schools so that we can have evidence of what is good or bad for the school system.

"Improvement of schools is an on-going continuous process. In education today we must face youth forward."

Mexicans See Exchange Plan As A Success

Last week marked the end of the English courses at Florida State University for the Mexican students on an exchange plan with Instituto Technologico de Monterrey.

Several of the students, Alfonso Cavazos and Hernando Cardenas of Monterrey, Ernesto Bredee and Xavier Melendes of Torrenn, Luis Hernandez of Aquascalientes and one of their instructors, Hector Jasso, explained in English what they thought of their visit.

FSU impressed them as "very pretty and so big!" Monterrey Tech is very compact beside FSU. They have no movies nor sponsored tours. "At Monterrey Tech, we would be laughed off the campus if we wore Bermuda shorts."

PRESLEY IMMORAL

Two weeks ago, all 24 students serenaded Gilchrist, Reynolds, Cawthon and Florida Halls. It is the custom in Mexico to hire professional serenaders to "woo" a young lady. But these fellows did the honors in person providing their own accompanist. The girls thanked them by singing songs back to them.

The Mexican students all agree that the English course was very helpful. One of the harder problems seemed to be the pronounciation of "b" and "v", "a" and "Z" and "th." "Intonataion was the hardest part and your lack of vowels; we have vowels nearly every other leter," said Jasso.

The students think Elvis Presley is "immoral," drag-racing in cities is "silly," and the film GOD CREATED WOMAN, "had no argument, only a woman!"

FSU Professor Tours Russia

Dr Satoshi Matsushima, assistant professor of physics at Florida State University, will leave this week to attend the International astronomical meetings, at Paris and Moscow.

From Aug 4 to 9 he will attend the International Symposium on Radio-Astronomy in Paris and from Aug. 12 to 24 he will attend the 10 International Astronomical Union Congress at Moscow.

Grants from the Astronomical Union, the Research Corporation and from FSU will enable him to go to the meetings. At the Moscow meeting he will be one of three Japanese astronomers present but several are going from this country.

MOSCOW MEETING

One of the most important topics to be discussed at the Moscow meeting is the correlation between solar activity and climatic and other phenomena on the earth. Another topic will be the problem of astronomical observations from earth satellites, rockets and baloons.

Dr. Matsushima, who has been with FSU since the first of the year, is an astrophysicist who teaches astronomy classes at FSU. He will return to Tallahassee to resume his faculty duties in the fall.

The scientist, a native of Fukui, Japan, got his bachelor's and master's degrees in Japan and his doctor's degree at Harvard. After several years of study and research in this country he became visiting lecturer in astronomy at the Observatory of Paris. He served then at the University of Kiel, Germany, before coming to FSU.

Dr. W. L. Leap Institute Head

Dr William L. Leap of Florida State University has been named chairman of the Blue Ridge Institute for Southern Community Service Executives for the 1958-59 year.

The FSU professor of social welfare and Dr. Robert T. Lansdale, also of the School of Social Welfare, attended the week-long 31 annual session of the institute in Blue Ridge, N C., the past week.

ENGLISH BOOK REVIEW: Following his review of Stringfellow Barrs "Purely Academic" at the book review Wednesday, Dr Paul Stoakes, professor of English here at FSU listens to comments made by Dean J. Paul Reynolds (right).

Dr. Paul Stoakes

'Purely Academic' Reviewed At Hour

By BONNIE PERRY
Flambeau Staff Writer

Dr. Paul Stoakes, professor of English at Florida State University, reviewed Stringfellow Barr's Purely Academic Wednesday in Longmire Hall.

Dr. Stoakes described Barr as one of the "radical idealists in the education field." Barr is mainly responsible for the rearrangement of St. Johns College in Annapolis.

Students study four years of English, four years of math and analyze one-hundred or so great books. He organized and is the president of the Foundation for World Government. Presently, Barr is professor of Humanities at Rutgers University.

"Purely Academic" is the university "Confidential," says Dr. Stoakes. "There isn't a character in the book you would trust your mother-in-law or even your wallet with! There is nobody to admire, no educational theory, only cynical elements of campus life."

FACULTY WANTS POWER

Three main themes run through the story. The rivalry between professors and departments for promotions and distinctions, the seeking of money and gifts for the university, and the question of who will be president. "The story is a satire on politics within the university," said Dr. Stoakes.

"In the book every member of the faculty wants power. Yet I believe this is not true in real life. There are those who are educators simply because they love it," said Dr. Stoakes. "If this is the way things are as depicted in Barr's book, then education is in a bad way. God help us!"

Purely Academic would not be so bad had it been written by someone outside the education field. But to be written by Barr, holding universities up so cheap makes a bitter book," said Dr. Stoakes. "Barr must feel that something has corrupted education and that he is looking forward to spring and a rebirth of learning."

Purely Academic was the last in the summer book review series, sponsored by the Recreation department at FSU.

Dr. Irish Named To Committee

Dr. Marian Irish, head of the political science department at Florida State University, has been appointed to the committee on higher education of the American Association of University Women.

The committee is charged with accrediting colleges and universities on the basis of academic standards for the organization. Membership in the AAUW is limited to graduates of colleges and universities accredited and recognized by this committee.

FSU Announces Psychologist Grad Program

Florida State University announced a graduate program for training school psychologists will begin in the fall, the second such training program in the South to receive the financial support of the National Institute of Mental Health.

Dr Walter D Smith, professor of psychology who will direct the training program, which leads to a Ph D degree, said application has been made to NIMH for about a quarter of a million dollars of supporting funds over a five-year period.

Initially, however, the program will receive only $15,812, to be used in providing a faculty member and paying for three student traineeships of $1,800 to $2,800 apiece. It is hoped, Dr Smith said, to have as many as 10 traineeships the second year, 15 the third and 20 in subsequent years.

BS NEEDED

Students may enter the graduate program after obtaining a bachelor's degree in psychology or other subjects or from a teaching position. Typically a Ph.D degree may be earned in about four years.

The program will emphasize training school psychologists who will be able to apply research skills in helping schools improve their educational programs in addition to functioning as clinicians at school and serving as consultants to teachers and administrators on psychological problems.

Dr. Smith said about 67 school psychologists now serve in various Florida schools but that the demand for professional people of the sort is much greater than the supply.

George Peabody College for Teachers at Nashville has the only program of the sort in the South, in addition to that at FSU having financial support of the NIMH, a division of the federal Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

At August 9 Graduation Exercises Here

Dr. Charles S Davis, Florida State University Dean of the Faculties, will speak on the education of the superior student at graduation exercises, August 9.

Dean Davis joined the FSU faculty in 1947 as associate professor of history. Since that time he has served as assistant dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, and in February of this year he was appointed to the position which he now holds as dean of the faculties.

Dean Davis received his BS and MS from Alabama Polytechnic Institute and his Ph. D. from Duke University. Prior to coming to FSU he served as instructor, assistant professor and associate professor at Alabama Polytechnic, professor at Huntingdon College and research director for the Alabama Department of Archives and History.

WROTE THREE VOLUMES

At the close of the second World War, Dean Davis was given the job of writing the history of the Seventh Army in its French and German campaigns. In addition to editing his three-volume history of the Seventh Army, he is the author of three books, The Cotton Kingdom in Alabama, Rural Alabama's Future, and Men, Land and Phosphate. He has also written numerous historical articles and reviews.

Dean Davis is now serving as national president of the Honor Society of Phi Kappa Phi, scholastic honorary.

TWIRLER — Mary Helen Schenck of Biloxi, Miss., won admision to the FSU music camp for twirlers through determination.

She Was Determined To Twirl!

The Twirling Review which winds up the FSU twirling Camp Friday at 3 30 in Opperman Music Hall will have one performer no one had counted on.

Mary Helen Schenck, 16, of Biloxi, Miss., applied for admission to the camp but she was too late. Her application was turned down because the quota had already been reached.

Three other twirlers from Biloxi had applied earlier and had been accepted, so when they started getting ready to come Mary Helen did too.

She arrived on the train Sunday morning at 6 a.m. with one of the other girls not knowing if she would be allowed to stay or if they would send her home.

Miss Donna Kozla, who teaches twirling, said they were so impressed by the girl's determination that they made room for her. "She almost had to sleep in a broom closet," Miss Kozla said.

Money Is In Sad Plight

If tha anciant mariner were auddanly to find himself a college student, we wager that he would paraphrase "Money, money everywhere and not a cent to spend."

The college atudent today finds himself in a sad plight if he's in need of money. Sinca this seems to be a rather common atate of affairs, the Flambeau haa undertaken to discover exactly where money ia to be found. Three sources ware discovered.

Checking the most logical placa first, the placement office, we were sadly dismayed. For approximately every three atudents who will apply for a campua job thia fall, ona will be available. In the past academic year, there were an estimated 500-600 job openings; an estimated 1200-1800 atudenta were seeking them.

In the past, about one-sixth of the FSU atudent body worked on campua. With the advent of Morrison's Food Service, many of these jobs went out the window. Almost antirely undar student operation before, the cafeteriaa now hired "professionals."

Next wa checked with the scholarship office. Again, interesting facts ara brought to light.

Thare ara two types of scholarships available, one to scholars, the other to athletes. The athletes hava the upper hand.

Approximately $60,000 is available thia year in regular scholarships, to be divided among 275 atudents. With an axpected atudent body of over 8,000, this leaves much to be desired. We hope that the purse stringa of Florida will be loosened, with this grave lack in mind.

Athletes fair far better, however. Coach Don Veller reports that $136,000 has been allocated to our atrong athletes. Although this amount goes to about 160 men, it is divided into varying allotments.

Tha majority of athletic scholarships go to football players, aince thia is where we hava the most difficulty in "out-buying" other schools, and thia containa the most spectator interest, according to Coach Veller. FSU doea not receive as many funds as most of our competitors in the Southeastern Conference. We wonder how the other scholarship funds stand.

Winning an athletic scholarship is not as easy as it may appear, however. With all due respect to the rigors of sports training, another requirement is enforced by the Conference rules. Academically, the aporta hero must also pass 24 hours of classes. Rough. Slightly higher requirements are advocated by the FSU registrar's office.

The third, and least applied for, source of money ia in the form of university loans. With everything alse being so tight, this appears to be the wisest course.

"The best time for a student to work his way through college is after graduation," ia an oft-repeated quotation of Dean of Students R. R. Oglesby.

"Students will borrow for marriage, a lost weekend, and most anything except a collage education," he adds. Loan money ean usually he paid back within two yaars, recorda show.

Dean Oglesby's backing for his beliefa ara sound ones. He feels that when a student works, he misses out too much on many other aspects of university life. There's very little time left for the social aide of life, which is also very much a function of university learning.

University loans are granted at a very low rate of interest. If a atudent haa enough confidence in his ability to warrant a college education, he ahould have enough confidence in his futura to be willing to gamble a little on it while he's still in school.

And there you have the sad state of money affairs at our university. Since jobs and scholarships are limited, loans do seem the wiaest course.

Is Parking In 50 Yr. Plan?

If littia green men were to arrive on the FSU campus, we wouldn't have to worry about taking them to our leader. They'd have no place to park their flying saucer.

Perhaps the lack of parking space is part of the new 50-year plan. Students may be flying helicopters by 1990, so tha problem is solved by flat-roofed buildings.

Since thia is not 1990, howaver, we aincerely hope that a solution may be found to take cara of the problem in the meantima.

Students have been hoping that the wide area behind tha Student Center would eventually be turned into a parking area. But at the present, it appears that thosa desires are to be thwarted.

As part of the 50-year plan, a road is being constructed in that area to keep campus traffic on campua. Featuring an underpass across Woodward, the new road will run from behind West Hall to somewhere around Senior Hall.

Parking will be allaviated to some degree through new lots behind tha Schoola of Education and Business. But the problem is not completely solved by any means.

Anyone who has tried to reach the post office, bookstore, or cafeteria via car will attest to thia fact. Although the lot in front of these three main businesses appears apácious, during the rush hours parking places are no where to be found.

Tha road behind the Student Center will use up much of the potential parking space, it ia true. But it does seem that enough of the land could be salvaged to take care of some of the parking dilemma.

The next 50 years may find FSU with many new beautiful buildings and a far larger faculty. But it must not be forgotten, aa we ara sure it haa not been, that a greatly expanded student body will also be found.

As the campus grows larger, it will become more difficult to run from class to class. Some of the men in West Hall already find it so difficult to park closer to classes that thay prafer the long walk over. What will future generations do?

We advocate that every possibility of adding parking space behind the Student Center, regardless of how small it may be, be thoroughly explored.

FSU Aids International Spirit

With Amarican relations taking such a dark appearanca in certain areas of tha world, it is encouraging to see FSU contributing to international goodwill in Germany.

Word has just reached us that two alumnaa ara quite actively participating in the German-American Club in Heidelberg. Mrs. John V. Sherlock, wifa of an Amarican Army Lt. Colonel stationed in Germany, succeeds Vivian Marshall, FSCW graduate, as American president of the club.

FSU haa sent several political science graduates to our Stata Department, but this ia one inatance whera evan Engliah teachers can lend a helping hand.

Arkansas And The East: Challenge To America

By OLAF JONSSON

It may seem extremely farfetched to compara the crisis in the Middla East to tha crisis in Arkansas, yet there are perhaps some fundamental similarities in the principles involved in these two challenges with which the government of the United States and the American people ara faced.

In both cases there is a complex array of factora involved. In the Middle East there is oil, nationalism, colonialism, religion, and others. In Arkansas there are factors such as race relations, the authority of the central government over a state govarnment, and others.

But it is the contention of this writer that if we strip both these problems of all factors and leave only one basic generalization for each, one could easily find one which would fit both Arkansas and the Near East: shall social conflicts and the promotion of policy be carried on in public forums and courts of law with ideas as weapons, or shall it be carried on in the streets with rocks and guns?

The events of tha last few days tend to indicate that the peoples of the Near East and Arkansas hava shown preference for the latter alternative. In tha case of the Near East it is difficult to say to what extent the common man has made this choice sinca public opinion there is not very articulate, but in the case of Arkansas a majority registered this choice at the polls a few days ago.

The issue in Arkansas's gubernatorial election was not segregation versus integration, all the candidates were segregationists, and they all challenged the executiva branch of the federal government in its afforts to enforce a legal decision made by a federal court The issue was how to challenge these efforts, whether to do it through parliamentary and legal procedures or through the application of physical obstruction undar the cover of such vague and all-inclusive terms as "public safety"

This latter concept was the mandate of Governor Faubus, and tha people of Arkansas chose to follow him still. It is not tha first time auch a choice has been made, and many times such a choice has afterwards been justified by the philosophers as having been made in the value of a universal justice. How the philosophers will view the decision in Arkansas is something for the future to decide, but in the meantime the nation must decide something for the present if a ahowdown should again occur on this issue.

In the case of the Midole East, is the government of the U. S. seeking to obstruct the will of the peoples, their social and national aspirations? We should hope not. Rathar it seems that the American government is opposing the manner by which political goals are being pursued, opposing the doctrine of "physical obstruction" mentioned above, as it is a potential menace to "the legislative interesta of the international community"

Thus, it apepara that the men in Washington and the American people are faced with the sama basic challenge, both in their backyard and from their neighbors. Perhaps this challenge, the threat of violence, is always present in human relations in a more or less veiled form, but presently it seems to have almost risen to the surface both at home and abroad To be an American President in 1958 is no easy task and cannot be a success without broad popular thoughtful concern.

Irate Student On Bermudas

TO THE EDITOR:

"I have just read the July 25th edition of tha Flambeau and was rather startled by your editorial "'Bermuda Ban' Understood."

You claim, in your sweeping statements, that:

1. "From both men and women has come approval of the 'Bermuda Ban.' I have been here since February and have only heard bitter comments on this ban, mostly by girls, when the subject is brought up.

2 "And (the high school campers) don't seem to realize that they ara on the campus of F.S U" Having had opportunity to talk with dozens of these high school kids, I have found that they were extremely aware of their location, but couldn't believe, apparently, that anyone could be as out of date with life.

3. "Most of tha women ara indignant when they spot a pair of shorts in places where they had previously seen no reason for rules banning them. Men . . . also add overtones of discontent at "what the univarsity is coming to . . ." Where, dear Editor, do you get these ideas? I hava heard not one discouraging comment, only some longing sighs from women (and some men) that if they themselves only had the nerva (and figures and youth) to wear them, they would. These same people expressed the opinion that "If tha men can wear them, why can't we?"

Obviously, from the types of statements you make, you cara but little whather you stand nn firm ground or not Since you ara either tha spokesman for campus policy, or must follow it without a whimper and pay it lip service, little else could be expected.

LETTERS to the EDITOR

You are supposed to represent educated, responsibe journalism, but from what I can see, the "educated" part was lacking to a certain extent. No wondar the Board of Control decided to discontinua the F.S.U. School of Journalism, if this is any examplo.

And don't bring us men into this by putting statements in our mouths like "What is this campus coming to?" You may not hava blood in your veins but wa do. It is unfortunate that tha aged Victorian air lingers on at F.S.U in this regard and that fresh breezes rarely affect this place as they have at nther now-broad minded campuses Life is for tha living not for vocal fossils

PHILIP FAYEN

EDITOR'S NOTE:

My dear friend: This is very interesting, since wa obviously run in different circles. Mine happens to believe in a time and place for everything, whereas you represent the mora "broad-minded" segment (or should those words be reversed?). In case you're interested, much approval has been expressed regarding our stand. Perhaps you'd better broaden your circle, friend.

As to the bog-wash concerning lip-service to the Administration, that isn't even worthy of answer. Your little comments wouldn't even have been printed in that case. And may we add that if you think FSU journalists are uneducated, it perhaps might be better to educate us than to turn us loose without a school?

For your information, you would probably find me to be one of the most warm-blooded Mid-Victorian women on campus. Just remember that there are two aides to every question, and some of us do believa in propriety.

A Glittering Candidat[e]

By LANE GOURLIE

In this age of glittering generalities, we found the platform of a contestant for one of the Florida seats in the United States Senate most interesting

This gentleman went to all the trouble of having untold numbers of mimeographed copies of his campaign platform distributed. The holders of these gems bave truly a rare treasure.

In one place he statea, "We can lick the recession; we can restora prosperity; we can release the marvelous productivity of America and bring a richer and happier life to our people if we have in Washington farsighted, courageous, aggressiva and determined leadership."

Assuming that he is referring to himself as possessing this mulitude of aterling qualities, we can but laud the gentleman. He did forget to mention, however, upon what he bases this self-impression. He also neglected to atate bis recommendations of how to "release the marvelous productivity of America." We wonder what shackles our homeland.

Another interesting paragraph of doubletalk atates, "As a United States Senator I must take the oath to support the Constitution of the United States and I shall do so. Russian War Training

By MYGNON CHAMPION

Whenever a nation prepares for war, it eventually goes to war. History has proven this again and again

This implication upon our modern world is staggering; for unless history miraculously reverses itself, the United States and the Soviet Union will also eventually go to war.

That being the case, we had better take a realistic look at the facts The U.S military forces are dwarfed by those of Soviet Russia.

The Russian Army maintains 175 divisions in a state of combat readiness. The U.S has three Marine and seven Army divisions that are combat ready, plus eight others that are not ready. That brings it to a total of 18.

In addition to this, the Soviet Union is producing 700,000 trained soldiers each year who enter reserve units that can be equipped within 30 days. We cannot begin to compete with this

The Soviet Air Force has roughly 20,000 operational aircraft. Our Air Force and Navy have 20,000, but there is reason to believe that the Russians have more combat planes

Negro Ghost Stories

By ART MOORE
Student Body President

Art Moore has recently collected a series of ghost tales told by Tallahassee Negroes in connection with a class. We offer the following accounts from this series.

Minerva McBroom, born in 1891, is the daughter of an ex-slave She relates the following account of seeing the ghost of her dead husband. This was a vary real experience for her and she seemed to be able to visualize it in detail.

"I just come home from the hospital and was sleeping in my bed. I'd been mighty sick and my daughter was sleeping in the next room on the cot I woke up all of a sudden cause Ed (her husband) had took hold of my hand. When I opened my eyes he was a standing by the bed a smiling at me. We wus in the same room where he died and he had on his striped pajamas that he died in.

"I hollered at Johnny Mae (her daughter) to come in here and see yo' daddy Johnny got scared and when I hollered for her to come look at har daddy, Ed he stooped over and shuffled on out to the kitchen. That's tha last time I seed him til he came back later one evening This was about two years ago, but last year when I was a washing dishes and I saw someone walk up to the poarch. I went to see who it wus and it wus Ed in his same black suit, white shirt, and black tie I put on him to be buried in. He disappeared and I say to myself, ain't nobody but Ed."

Minerva has her own concepts of snakes.

"If a rattlesnake runs from you, someone in your family is going to die. The best thing to do is kill it before it runs or get out of the way before it sees you." A snake ran from her husband and six days later his sister in Tampa died. She holds this as proof that the saying is true It happened in her family just as the saying said. What more proof do you need she asks

She also has an explanation of why a house creaks and makes noises. "As long as yo... moving around the spirits s... out of the way. When you ... down to go to sleep you ... hear the house creaking ... other noises This ain't noth... but the spirits of those that h... died in the house ask... around. But Tribe Plans For Big Season

A pre-season look at Florida State's opponents for the forthcoming grid campaign indicates that Coach Tom Nugent has another strong schedule to face. However, Street and Smith's, noted football prognosticators, pick FSU to have a 5-4-1 record.

According to them, the Seminoles should down Georgia, Tennessee Tech, Furman, Tampa, and Wake Forest, lose to Florida, Georgia Tech, Miami, and Virginia Tech, and the Tennessee game is rated as a toss-up. Here are the run-downs—judge for yourself.

TENNESSEE TECH

With 18 lettermen returning and more depth at most positions, Tennessee Tech should be generally improved in 1958. Coach Wilburn Tucker, expecting early-game jitters, feels it may take a couple of games for the youthful Golden Eagles to get moving.

Tech's strong points will be the play at tackle, guard and halfback positions. Seven first-team men are gone, but the Eagles' entire 1957 tackle corps is back along with a number of fine guards and halfbacks.

If a service returnee, Rudy Schmittou, develops well at fullback, it will free veteran quarterback and fullback Al Cate for full-time work at the signal-calling post. Tech looks for its big worries at quarterback, fullback, and perhaps center, although there are capable center candidates with speed and size. Lack of experience presents the chief problem.

FURMAN

Furman has no illusions of an overnight ascension into national prominence. But with new coach Bob King at the reins, the Purple Hurricane is on the way up.

Furman has 22 of 28 lettermen returning from its 1957 team that won 3 of 10 games. Most significant of the losses were regular fullback Jim Grant, halfbacks Bill Weir and Jerry Penland, and end Dick Pfeifer.

Standout returnees include junior quarterback Bill Baker, who completed 88 of 150 passes last season, at one stage leading the nation in total completions and hitting a high of 27 completions in 40 attempts against The Citadel. The return of Baker and the top two pass receivers, ends Ray Siminski and Tom Avery, elevate Furman's passing potential above its ground promise.

The line which started the last of the season returns intact, as do two regular backs, Baker and halfback Ricky Horton.

GEORGIA TECH

It's a rare season when a Georgia Tech team wins only four football games, and that's what happened in '57. But the Yellow Jackets, who could have won five more games with the aid of 22 points, don't figure to have two below-500 years in succession.

A whopping total of 27 returning lettermen return to boost Georgia Tech stock for '58. Tech's starting ends, Jack Rudolph and Jerone Green, compare favorably with last year's fine flankmen, Jerry Nabors and Ted Smith. Sophomore end Fred Murphy is promising.

Both starting tackles and all 1957 reserves at that position are back. Sophomore Billy Shaw had bright moments in the spring. At guard, starter Leon Askew and top reserve Dan Theodocion are gone, but returning reserves save any loss of strength. Maxie Baughan, a sophomore standout in 1957, looks like a sure starter to replace All-American center Don Stephenson.

Tech looks for its backfield—with Stan Flowers the only graduated starter — to show considerable improvement. Walter Howard, Snooks Saye and Jimmy Sides should give Fred Braselton some relief at quarterback. Sophomores will lend depth at the halfbacks and at fullback.

WAKE FOREST

With 22 lettermen returning, including quarterback Charles Carpenter, who had to sit out the entire 1957 campaign after undergoing surgery for a ruptured spinal disc, things look much brighter for the Demon Deacons this year.

Coach Paul Amen, starting his third season as Demon coach, expects substantial improvement, but has warned that "we must be careful that we don't become overenthusiastic over our possibilities."

"We will be inexperienced since about 15 boys, either sophomores or converts to new positions, figure prominently in our plans. We will have more depth and our interior line play should be rugged."

The return of Carpenter, No. 2 passer in the Atlantic Coast Conference in 1956, plus sophomore Norman Snead should make Wake Forest a definite passing threat. Fullback Neil MacLean, leading ground gainer on last year's club, could be one of the outstanding runners in the South.

GEORGIA

On the comeback trail, Georgia in '58 figures to have more experience (26 lettermen), more depth, and more talent than any Bulldog edition in some time. Facing a schedule nowhere near their "killer" card of '57, the Bulldogs speak in terms of winning "six games, maybe more."

Ends Jimmy Vickers, Gordon Kelly and Aaron Box developed fast as sophomores last year, will have ample help from Jack Shamblin and junior college transfer Bill Herron. Alternate captain Nat Dye is one of the Southeast's best tackles and Riley Gunnels, two-year letterman, can hold his own at left tackle.

Georgia stacks up stronger at guard and center than at any time in the past decade. Guards Cicero Lucas, Pat Dye, Billy Roland, Mike Anderson, Hinton Davis, and Carter Ramsey form an exceptionally strong corps. In Dave Lloyd, Dude Thompson, and Phil Ashe, the Bulldogs have their strongest center combine since the days of Bill Goodwin and Clyde Ehrhardt.

There is experience and depth in the backfield. Junior quarterback Charlie Britt, senior fullback Theron Sapp, and junior left half George Guisler have great potential. Among sophomore newcomers, left halfback Fred Brown and quarterback Francis Tarkenton will see considerable playing time.

VIRGINIA TECH

Starting his eighth season at Tech, Frank Mosley faces the biggest rebuilding job in five years—but with probably the best material ever assembled at Tech.

How well and how fast the sophs develop probably will hinge on the leadership and performance of four men: Carrol Dale, left end; Jim Burks, captain and senior right tackle; Jay Whitesell, left halfback; and quarterback Billy Holesclaw.

A number of sophomores should begin to show well by mid-season, including Don Oakes, who saw some varsity action last year. Other promising first-year men are halfbacks Pat Henry and Johnny Watkins, and Jim Farr and Alan Whittei, tackles Bernie Vishneski and Bob Harris, guards Tommy O'Brien, Dana Moberg and Bloice Davison, and Mike Zeno, who might be the leading soph player at either center or guard.

TAMPA

The outlook in 1958 is a bright one for Coach Marcelino Huerta's University of Tampa Spartans. Despite the loss of 12 players from the first 22, Tampa figures to be big and fast, with 18 lettermen back in the fold.

Tampa's principal loss from a fine 1957 season (6-3) was Little All-America halfback Don Herndon, who graduated. But the 1958 Spartan backfield will have speed and power. Fred Cason, a 245-pound fullback, is back to employ his tremendous drive. Flanking him will be Paul Davis, a returnee from the 1956 Tampa eleven and promising sophomore Buddy Williams from Wauchula.

Huerta is confronted with depth problems at some line positions but not at tackle. Seven veteran tackles make for a bright picture there.

Other top prospects are Tom Scott, a lineman who transferred from Morehead College in Kentucky, and John Mitchell, another transfer who figures to lend depth to the backfield.

TENNESSEE

Tennessee retained 14 of 31 lettermen from its 1957 squad that chalked up a 7-3 record and defeated strong Texas A & M.

FSU'S TOM NUGENT

Colossal Style

The Irish Showman— And His Famous "I"

"Sometimes when you talk to Tom Nugent," wrote the Atlanta Journal's Jim Minter recently, "you feel as though Mike Todd is still with us."

Minter's point was simple. Florida State's energetic Athletic Director and Head Football Coach, in the colossal style of the late Mike Todd, does things first class.

It's been that way with Thomas Norman Nugent since, at age 15, he wrote he would be a head college football coach some day. That day arrived when he assumed command of VMI's football fortunes. That was in 1949, and within three years after Nugent joined the obscure VMI Keydets, he had won a Southern Conference championship and pulled an upset over mighty Georgia Tech.

PUT SEMINOLES ON MAP

Searching for The personality to put the Seminoles on the football map, Florida State officials in 1953 looked no farther than Tom Nugent. In two years, the Seminoles for the first time attained "major college" status. Thanks to Nugent's magnetic touch, football at Florida State has grown from a pickup sport in 1947 to a 1958 position that finds the Seminoles playing such tradition-steeped opponents as Georgia Tech, Georgia, Tennessee, Florida, and Miami (Fla.).

Nugent is a tireless worker whose enthusiastic interest in the entire program of intercollegiate athletics at Florida State resulted in his appointment as Director of Athletics last May.

Nugent has made great strides with Florida State football. In his sixth year as the propelling force behind the Seminoles, Nugent has attained a record of 37 victories against 24 losses and one tie while playing increasingly tougher schedules.

He's also become nationally known for his bright innovations. It was Nugent who presented to football the typewriter huddle, the double quarterback and the 'I' formation used so effectively by his own Seminoles. Florida State's annual June coaching clinic, which he fathered five years ago, is probably football's finest.

A native of Lawrence, Mass., the 45-year-old coach (he appears to be 30) was graduated from Ithaca College in 1936. He coached the freshman team there while continuing with graduate work. Later, Nugent returned to Lawrence and directed the Essex Training School teams in football, basketball and baseball. Four years at Essex produced two undefeated football teams and a 35-3 record.

AIR FORCE VET

After serving with the Air Force from 1941 to 1946, Nugent became head football coach at Williamsburg, Va., High School, where he won nine in a row. Then he moved to Hopewell, Va., High and in two years won 15 of 19 games. Then came his opportunity at VMI, where his teams compiled a 19-18-2 record over four campaigns.

One of football's most colorful coaches, Tom is a member of the Public Relations and Press Committee and Film Selection Committee of the American Football Coaches Association.

Nugent and his lovely wife (nee Peg Foley) have five boys—Tommy, 14; T. D., 8; Timothy, 3½; Jerry, 1½; and John, 3 months—and four girls—Kerry, 13; Peggy, 11; Patricia, 7; and Mary Ann, 2½.

NUGENT'S STAFF

The rest of FSU's coaching staff is: Don Veller, Bob Harbison, Frank Toomey, Hugh Adams, Charlie LaPradd, Paul Odom, Lee Corso, and Freshman Coach Herb Hughes.

ICELANDER THORKELL VALDIMARSSON takes a break from his studies to talk about his homeland, and to compare American and Icelandic universities.

Friend, Climate Bring Icelander

By JIM MILLER
Flambeau Staff Writer

Thorkell Valdimarsson is the only Icelander attending FSU. Valdimarsson came here last summer after attending Business College in Iceland.

He is a former textile purchaser whose business trips took him all over Europe, behind the Iron Curtain, and here to the United States.

Valdimarsson gave as one of his reasons for coming to FSU, "I wanted to get to a warm climate." He was also encouraged to come here by an Icelandic friend who had previously attended FSU. He said that he thought it would be good to learn business in its principle language, too. "In my country we speak Icelandic, which is a form of old Norse."

CO-ED DORMS

"I am very interested in everything that has to do with politics" said Valdimarsson. Fishing and skiing are his favorite sports but his main interest is in photography. He commented, "I have the equipment for developing at home in Iceland, but I have some cameras here."

He talked about differences between Icelandic colleges and FSU. "The Icelandic colleges are all free, because they are supported by a national lottery." He stated that since the colleges follow the European system students are not compelled to attend classes and the examinations are both oral and written.

The most surprising thing for Valdimarsson, at FSU, was the way boys and girls are separated into different dorms. "In Iceland you may live next door to a girl in the same dormitory."

He continued talking about Iceland with, "The Icelandic schools are set up so that there will be no language barriers." He said that each student has to take several languages, among them French, German, and Italian. Valdimarsson took six "winters" of English.

"The highest temperature in Iceland is about 65 degrees," Valdimarsson said. However he added that the thinness of the air in northern latitudes makes the 65 degrees much warmer that it seems.

"Ninety-five per cent of our exports are fish products," explained Valdimarsson, "and of this, 70 per cent goes to the Soviet Union. We buy our oil products from Russia under a barter agreement while they buy our fish." He said that school terms are from October to June so that the students can work in the fishing industry.

Dance Tomorrow

Interrupted Melody Plays Here Tonight

If you want to attend the campus movies you better hurry up and go! There will only be two more shown during the summer school session.

"Interrupted Melody" starring Glenn Ford and Eleanor Parker (in color) will be shown today and tomorrow in Westcott at 8.00 p.m.

The film explains how Marjorie Lawrence, famous singer, faced what appeared to be an insurmountable tragedy and how she overcame it. This is a compassionate and moving story with a background of some of the world's greatest music.

"Boom Town" starring Clark Gable, Spencer Tracy, Claudette Colbert and Hedy Lamarr, depicts a couple of tough "wildcatters" who are on the hunt for oil. The film is filled with exciting action from the roar of a gusher coming in, to the "shooting" of a blazing well with nitroglycerine to extinguish the rampaging fire. This film will be shown August 7 to 9 at 8:00 p.m. at Westcott.

LAST SQUARE DANCE

The last square dance of the summer will be held Saturday August 2 on the Tennis Court behind the Women's Gym from 6:00-10:00 p.m. Dr. William Tait, Associate Professor in Men's Physical Education, will be the caller.

The G-Bach Quintette will furnish the music and lemonade and watermelons will be served. In case of rain, go into the Women's Gym.

Screen Scenes

War Is Evil, Man Is Good

By Linda Arnow

Lilo Pulver and John Gavin, two new-comers to the screen, make impassioned love amid sirens, bombs and ruins in Universal-International's production of "A Time to Love and A Time to Die". The war-love story, taken from a novel by Erich Maria Remarque, is supposed to be a companion tale to All Quiet on the Western Front, a World War I saga.

When you dig out of the debris, this is essentially that old let's - pack - love - and - a - lifetime - into - three - weeks story. It does have a hopeful message — mankind is basically good and war is evil.

It seems that when Gavin, as a young Nazi corporal gets a three-week furlough from the front lines, he goes home like every other soldier to shovel his parents out of the ruins. But instead he conveniently unearths the daughter of his family doctor. After a bomb-blasting five-day romance (or was it four?), they decide they can face der Gestapo together so they get married. From there on life is one bomb after another.

Not to mention the resemblance to "All Quiet . . .", the movie parallels 'A Farewell to Arms". The general theme is the same, but this time the love is more licit. There are the same scenes of marching men, the dead and the dying, snow, and ruins. Gavin could almost double for Rock Hudson in some scenes.

There the similarity ends. This movie does not have the photography, acting, or realism of Hemingway's story.

NOT GOOD ACTOR

Gavin does not put in a top-notch performance although it was hoped that this movie would bring him stardom. He does not project himself into the part. He gives the feeling that he is uncomfortable in the role. In other words, he seems as if he is acting and even then not doing too well at it.

Lilo Pulver does a much better job, but still manages to look like a TV commercial for toothpaste at times. You can almost count each of her teeth. She is much more sincere and displays a greater variety of moods and expressions.

The author himself, Remarque, plays a bit part of a German professor who doubts Hitler's success. Although seen only briefly, he handles his few lines well.

The movie falls down on realism. The locale is completely German, as are the people in it, but many members of the cast speak with a poor, if any, German accent. I kept thinking that Gavin was an American because of his speech, and it took mental gymnastics to keep him straight despite his German uniform.

The movie, although lightened by sparks of humor, is a tragedy. The ending which is supposed to resolve everything and leave the viewer with message will probably depress those who like happy film fare.

In short, with bombs bursting in air, the love story's there.

Seminoles . . .

3-0, in the Gator Bowl.

But heading into their traditionally tough schedule, the Vols are "a long way from being a championship team," according to Coach Bowden Wyatt. Tennessee's big concern is the replacement of vacated backfield spots. The Vol backfield in preseason focus may be the weakest in the school's history. Nine of the 17 departed lettermen were backs.

Chief losses included All-America guard Bill Johnson, All-Southeastern tailback Bobby Gordon, fullback Tommy Bronson, blocking back Stockton Adkins, and wingback Bill Anderson.

Heading 14 returning lettermen is Carl Smith, the Vol's powerful, elusive fullback who is one of Tennessee's most explosive backs in years. Right end Tommy Potts is one of the most talented ends in the conference. Captain Bobby Urbano is the leading guard and veteran tackle Bob Shafer has plenty of strength and agility.

George Wright is the only tailback with varsity experience. But four sophomores, including Bill Majors, are challenging. Blocking back and wingback will be manned by newcomers yet to be tested.

MIAMI

The Hurricanes, beginning to thaw out after a winter which would not have been out of place in the midst of a mint-julep will be stouter than they were last year. Fran Curci, the quarterback, seized upon All-America notation as a sophomore in '57 and, in the Spring, wasn't the same man—just a lot better. The fellow weighs only 148 pounds, but he celebrated 1957 with 909 yards gained passing plus running the option and he'll operate behind a line anchored by two brutish tackles, Charley Diamond and Gary Greaves.

The team seethes with experience, for it was largely a sophomore unit last year when the Hurricanes did well enough with 5-4-1 and were second nationally in the matter of ground defense. The windy ones will field two thoroughly competent sophomore fullbacks in the vicious personalities of Jim Stevens and Frank Bouffard.

Then, too, Miami will have much more depth and can hit adequately at defensive leaks.

FLORIDA

One of the leading teams in the Southeastern Conference last season (6-2-1), Florida's Gators must replace 17 lettermen, including such standouts as halfbacks Bernie Parrish and Jim Rountree, tackle Charlie Mitchell, and eight others off the first two teams.

The Gators have strength at guard, where 5 lettermen return, at quarterback where 3 lettermen and a varsity reserve are back, and at center, where two experienced seniors take up the one-two role. Florida is lacking in experienced depth at tackle, halfback, and fullback.

Standout returnees among 21 lettermen back are tackle Vel Heckman, ends Don Fleming and Dan Edgington, quarterbacks Jimmy Dunn, Mickey Ellenburg, and Wayne Williamson, centers Gene Graves and Joe Hergert, and a complete corps of experienced guards.

Answer Found, Street Being Built

By LORA TWEEDLE
Flambeau Staff Writer

FINALLY OUR QUESTION IS ANSWERED!

The main reason for the digging behind the Student Center is a new street.

This street will run from West Hall, past the Geology building, under Woodward Street, behind the Student Center, and end up behind the new Business School.

An "exciting" feature of this road will be the under-pass on Woodward Street. This will allow traffic to go under, which will be much safer and will save time which you would otherwise spend waiting for the traffic to thin out to let you across.

Also the ditch by the Student Center will have a bridge built across it.

PARKING LOTS

Additional parking lots are being built by the Florida State Road Department beside the new Education building, and the Geology building. Parking lots will also come with the buildings that are being planned.

The main idea of the road is to relieve traffic from the main highway and for the safety and convenience of the students. This will give a straightaway through north campus, off the main highway.

The street should be finished by the end of this year and will cost approximately $165,000. It is a part of the 50 Year Plan to enlarge Florida State University's campus.

Foreign Teachers Will Attend Here

Twenty educators representing foreign elementary school systems will be on the campus of Florida State University in the fall on an international educational exchange program.

According to Dr. Marian W. Black, associate professor of education who is planning the program, the visiting group will represent elementary administrators and classroom teachers.

They are coming here under auspices of the Department of State under the Fulbright and Smith-Mundt Acts. These Acts provide for grants to foreign nationals to study in American universities. About 10 institutions in the country, including FSU, are participating in this fall's program.

TWIN MUSIC MASTERS—Gordon and Grady Wilson of Birmingham, Alabama (they're identical twins and we don't know which is which). They will receive Master of Music degrees August 9 here at FSU. Students of Ernst Von Dohnanyi, the 28-year-old Alabamans may now be separated for the first time in their lives but you'll probably see and hear more of them as a duo-piano team. They've appeared together widely in concerts and over television and expect to perform together in the future.

Twins Make Break After 28 Years

Identical male twins, 28 years old, Gordon and Grady Wilson of Birmingham, Ala. get their master's degrees in music at Florida State University in a few days and may now, for the first time in their lives, go their separate professional ways.

All through their boyhood and schooling, through two years in the army and through their previous professional musicianship, the two Wilsons have been together. For the past year they've been studying together at FSU.

After getting their Master of Music degree at commencement exercises on Aug. 9, Gordon Wilson goes to a teaching position at Birmingham Southern College. Grady Wilson does not at the moment know where he will be.

They're not breaking up the combine for good, though. After teaching for a year, they plan to take additional advanced university work and their ambition is to become a professional duo-piano team and make concert appearances.

They're not dress-alikes and they've gone their separate ways at FSU, although rooming together. Few on the campus have been aware they were twins. "Every day some one else finds out we are really two people and not just one fellow who really gets around so fast that he's almost in two places at once," said Gordon.

Their music instructor, Prof. Ernst Dohnanyi, the famous Hungarian - American composer and pianist, says he can tell his two students apart. "I'm not sure he can," says Gordon.

If you were watching the Arlene Francis Show at the right time in the Spring of 1954 you saw them as a duo-piano team after winning an Army talent contest.

Featured as a piano team, they also have made appearances with Virgil Fox, an eminent concert organist, in Washington, D. C. One of their favorite compositions, which they often played in concert appearances, is Brahms' "Variations on a Theme by Haydn."

TWINS GOOD ORGANISTS

The musically versatile twins are also skilled organists. Both were two-time scholarship winners to the Organ Institute of Andover, Mass. They studied there with Catherine Crozier of the Eastman School of Music. They have given organ recitals at Duke University, the Citadel, and at the Organ Festival in Andover, Mass.

The pianists are sons of Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Wilson. The father has worked 30 years on the Southern Railroad. The twins explained that although they liked music at an early age they did not get a piano until they were 11 years old.

"Our mother asked us if we would rather have bicycles or a piano for Christmas," said Gordon. "We chose the piano and haven't stopped since."

After graduating from Woodlawn High School in Birmingham, they served in the Army together as chaplains' assistants. Their service was at Ft. Jackson, South Carolina, and at Ft. McClellan, Ala.

Having completed their tour of military duty, they both taught for one year at the same school, Woodlawn High in Birmingham. Both taught piano.

LEFT TEACHING POSITIONS

"At this same time, we dated identical twin girls, both blondes and both piano students. That was really confusing," they confessed.

The nearest to being separated was in their second year of teaching, although they were still in the same city. "Grady taught history for a year at Hewitt Trussville School in Birmingham, while I stayed at Woodlawn High teaching piano," said Gordon. Last fall, they left their teaching positions to attend FSU.

On campus, people who see them together, do a "double-take." They are the same height, 5 ft. 11 in., the same weight, 175 lbs., and both have dark hair, crew cuts and they wear glasses.

"One of the amusing things that results from our being twins, is the waitresses' reaction when one of us goes into a cafe, eats and leaves and then the other goes into the same place and orders an identical meal," said Grady.

The boys, who are single and share an off-campus apartment where Gordon does the cooking and Grady the dishes, dress alike only for concert appearances and, "when we take piano jury exams, to confuse the jury," added Gordon.

The identical twins have maintained an almost identical scholastic average through their schooling. Some people claim to detect a subtle difference in their playing but both boys doubt there is much difference in that either.

"Outside of music, we try to maintain our individuality," explained Grady. "That's why we each have a car. We felt it was a necessity—not a luxury. We do double date sometimes, though."

435 Make Application For Aug. 9 Graduation

Thus far some 435 students have applied for degrees in August. Deletions and additions will be made to the list almost up until the last minute according to the office of the Registrar.

Graduation exercises will take place Saturday afternoon, August 9, 1958, at 3 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium.

New Dormitory Construction To House Over 800

By DIANE GODIN
Flambeau Staff Writer

Construction has begun two new dormitories, igned to house a total more than 800 students.

Dr. Jack Rollow, housing direc- is expecting completion of new women's dormitory, lo- ed next to Florida Hall, in the The men's dormitory, north- of West Hall, will not be y for occupancy until the 1960 semester.

Work was begun on the new ories July 10. Most of the ring and ground work on sites has been completed, and foundations and first floor have been poured, Rollow

SIMILAR

The architecture of both dorms closely resemble Florida Hall West Hall, with a little more hasis on angular design. The ion of many new features is ned, including a full scale eria in the men's dormitory extra elevators.

Increased storage space and dry facilities are also design- for the men's dormitory, which up in three floor units, simi o the present West Hall sys- with a lounge, office, and storage room every third floor.

A variety of facilities in the men's dormitory is planned, in- ding a typing room, sewing n kitchen, party room, and space in the basement. The floor features a large lounge an adjoining tea-room and ace which is complete with a becue pit.

PARKING

Parking lots will be built for dormitories. Access to the lot the rear of the new women's m will be from West Jefferson t. The West Hall lot will be rged for use of both men's mitories.

Improved windows in both dormi s are expected to cut down ise and heating expenses.

ollow added that this has been 's "biggest maintenance sum- in housing." New doors and floors have been put in Jen Murphree, new bathrooms are nned, university owned fra- ty houses have been painted, remodeling work was done in dis.

Library Sets Regular Hours

The Florida State University ary will begin regular sched- hours Monday, remaining from 8 a.m. until 10 p.m. Saturday, hours will be from m. until 5 p.m., and Sun- from 2 until 5 p.m.

The library will be open to- row from 8:30 a.m. until 30 p.m., and will be closed all Sunday.

"A large general education plement and reserved book ion will be located on the floor to aid new students," d Orwin Rush, Director of braries. "We want freshmen feel free to call on us at any e for help," he added.

In each division of the library re is a small continuing dis- of new books that arrive. idents are urged to check se books out directly from display, not waiting for them be shelved, Rush said.

Two Florida book collections on display in the library. One play of early FSU catalogues d pictures is located in the brary foyer. Another display of oks by FSU authors is found the rare book room. Students e welcome to come in and see em, Rush said.

TALLY-HO REGISTRATION

Registration for the 1959 edition of Tally-Ho, which has taken place this week in Longmire, will continue next week in the same location, ending Friday.

Students not reserving a copy during this time will not be able to obtain one when it is published, Tally-Ho officials emphasized.

The price of the yearbook will be $2 if the student desires to have his picture in the class section. Those not having their picture included may obtain a copy for $1.

Positions are still open on the yearbook staff for students interested in Tally-Ho publication work. All interested are urged by the staff to attend a staff meeting Monday at 5 p.m., 401 Longmire Building.

WORK BEGUN

FSU Picked As Site For Atomic Machine

By DOLORES LAFFERTY
Flambeau Staff Writer

Work has begun on a building on the Florida State University campus that will house one of only three such atomic machines on the North American continent. Completion is scheduled for 1960.

The housing for the machine is only part of a structure expected to cost $742,000 for which the 1957 Legislature appropriated funds. Walls several feet thick will house two nuclear accelerators and their control rooms.

The first, a $132,590 three million electron volt Van de Graff electron accelerator, is scheduled to arrive by Nov. 15, and by that time the university expects to have the building ready to receive it.

DECEMBER SET

The other, a 10MEV tandem Van de Graff positive ion accelerator, is to be delivered about December, 1959, according to Dr. Jack W. Eichinger, coordinator of the Nuclear Science Program.

The smaller machine, weighing about seven tons, is now being completed by the High Voltage Engineering Corporation at its factory in Burlington, Mass. A newly hired technician for the FSU Nuclear Science Program, Kenneth Chellis, now is in Burlington learning engineering details.

The smaller accelerator probably will be first used during the early months of 1959. It will be used for research in radiation chemistry and for such purposes as experiments with radiation in the preservation of meats and shellfish. FSU for several years has been experimenting with the effects of radiation on flavor, color, texture and nutritive value. These effects must be known before radiation preservation can be used commercially.

The two accelerators will be housed at opposite ends of the building, with laboratory space between for research done with the machines. Later two floors may be added to this basic structure, with adjacent buildings where classroom and laboratory space will be provided in several fields of science.

GREEN RETURNS

Dr. Alex E. S. Green of the physics department, who is back after a year's leave doing research at the Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory in New Mexico, will operate the tandem machine; and Dr. Russell Johnsen of the chemistry department will operate the 3 MEV machine.

One of the nuclear scientists, Dr. Raymond K. Sheline of the chemistry department, has been on leave for three years doing research in the laboratory of Niels Bohr, known for his model of the atom which has revolutionized chemistry, in Copenhagen, Denmark.

Altogether the scientists now assigned to the nuclear program, the coordinator said, are three from biological sciences, two from chemistry, one from geology and four from physics.

Auto Tagging Ends Thursday

All cars on campus must be registered by 8 a.m. Thursday, Sept. 25, according to Judy Dekle, Chief Justice of Traffic Court.

New traffic rules and regulations will be enforced this year, Miss Dekle pointed out. Copies of these rules are available in the new Traffic Court Office, Room 1 Westcott.

Only one type of sticker will be issued for all students, Miss Dekle said. This sticker must be placed on the left rear bumper of each car. Violation tickets will be issued if stickers are not properly placed on the car.

"All students should have a copy of the traffic regulations and should know them thoroughly," Miss Dekle emphasized.

STIFF FINE

A fine of $10 will be levied against owners of automobiles which are not properly registered after Sept. 25.

"We are looking forward to a good year," Miss Dekle stated. "If everyone will abide by the regulations, we will be able to eliminate a great many of the traffic problems."

Morrison's To Give Helpers Cash, Tickets

By DON SCOTT
Flambeau Staff Writer

Student employees of Morrison's Food Service can now be paid either with meal tickets or in cash, said Bob Sanford, General Manager of the food service at Florida State.

Previously, students were paid in meal tickets which were redeemable only at the university cafeteria and snack bars. Now the type of pay depends upon the type of job. A student job pays a $10 meal ticket for 14 hours work, and a part-time job pays 75 cents per hour and up.

The food service currently employs about 50 students and 175 time workers, said Sanford, but there are several positions yet to be filled by students. Applicants should file with the office in the Seminole Dining Hall.

Besides the Seminole Dining Hall, Morrison's operates the Student Center, Soda Shop and West Hall Snack Bar.

"I hope we have established a trend," said Sanford. "We fed 15,000 more customers in July 1958 than in July 1957."

Sanford attributed the growing volume of business both to increased enrollment and the new physical layout. Among the new features this year is the food control system.

"The new third person at the end of the line with the multi-counter is the food checker," explained Sanford. The multi-counter computes both the number of portions served and the total income from each item.

This information is transferred to a master sheet and is compared with the cash register total and the storekeeper's records.

This system results in more standardized portions and allows the managers to correct errors on the spot, said Sanford.

PKA Plans Dance

Pi Kappa Alpha Fraternity is officially opening this year's social season with a dance after the Furman-Florida State game, to be held in the Suwannee Room of the Seminole Dining Hall.

Many Turned Down

School Enrollment At All-Time High

By DIANA HOLROYD
Flambeau Staff Writer

Florida State University's enrollment reached an all-time high this year with a total count of approximately 7,500, according to Charles Walker, registrar.

Three hundred fifty applicants were turned away due to lack of housing space, according to Jack Rollow, housing director.

This year's registration figure represents an increase of around 300 students over last year. This increase accounts for the housing shortage, Rollow pointed out. There are no vacancies in university housing at this time, and 80 students are now in temporary housing, he said.

As of August 1, when housing fees were due, 96 per cent of all available campus housing was filled. Cancellations were high at that time, with approximately 1100 persons relinquishing their room reservations, Rollow said.

Registration for classes began at the Men's Gym Wednesday for upperclassmen, including 500 transfer students, with a record class of 1600 freshmen entering the scene yesterday. Doors are open at 8:30 a.m. and close at 4 p.m.

Students taking four hours or less may register tonight between 6:30 and 8:30 p.m., or tomorrow morning, even though they were assigned another appointment time.

Registration time has been cut in half this year, covering a period of only three and one-half days, Walker stated. To facilitate movement, faculty members representing the various departments are present at the class stations.

As previously, freshmen are able to meet their faculty advisors to make out their trial schedules immediately before entering the registration area.

Chest x-rays are no longer required, although they are available at the gymnasium.

Students may obtain student activity books in the large parlor on the main floor of Longmire Building. Also available there are booths for registration for Tally-Ho, student insurance, senior caps and gowns, senior Black Books, FEA, and the campus Literary Anthology.

Classes begin Monday, Sept. 22. At that time, classes may be dropped and added in Westcott Auditorium, between the hours of 9 a.m. and 12 noon and 1:30 and 4:30 p.m. After Friday, Sept. 26, dropping and adding may be done in the Registrar's Office in Westcott. Students should see their counselors before dropping or adding a class, Walker cautioned.

Students who have not yet found permanent housing are advised by Dr. Rollow to inquire at the Housing Office in the basement of Bryan Hall, where a listing of available housing in Tallahassee has been compiled.

Annual Frosh Talent Show Set Tonight

By PAT SENN
Flambeau Staff Writer

Capacity audiences are expected to crowd Westcott Auditorium twice tonight for the annual Freshman Talent Show. Performances will begin at 7 and 9 p.m. in order to accomodate the increased number of freshmen and upperclassmen.

Two favorite acts from the '57 show are returning to highlite tonight's shows. Try-outs held Tuesday through Thursday turned out a host of new acts including bongo drums and modern dance interpretations, according to Talent Show officials.

RETURNING ACTS

Returning acts include Jack Ryder pantomiming with "You Got Trouble" and the music of the "Pastels," featuring Tom Bernard at the piano, Mike O'Conner and Bonnie Whiteard on the guitars, and the singing of Clayton Squibb, Danny Miller and Ronnie Butler.

Past performers have gone professional at times. Dennis Smith from '56 was flown to California as a guest singer on Lawrence Welk's "Talent Search." Sandi Beskind from last year's show spent the summer niteclub singing in Miami.

Senior Class President Phil Knight chairmaned the show with the aid of Sandi Beskind, Nancy Gross, Donna Leto, Barbara Watson, and Jack Ryder.

FROM FSCW

The freshman talent show dates back to the Florida State College for Women days. According to Dr. James Carr, associate dean of men, "It's the highlite — enjoyment-wise — of orientation week."

This is Dr. Carr's fifth year working as faculty sponsor for talent night. He replaced Miss Elizabeth Lynn, assistant dean of women.

Frosh Cheerleading Tryouts Monday

Freshmen interested in trying out for cheerleading may report to Landis Green in front of the Women's Gym on Monday at 4:30 p.m.

TICKETS AVAILABLE

Tickets are still available for tomorrow night's game with Furman, according to Eddie Cubbon, athletic business manager.

Student tickets may be purchased at the Student Center Booth and at the gym until 1 p.m. tomorrow. They are also available Saturday at the Stadium from 9 a.m. until game time.

Students not having mailed ticket slips must prove they are students at the gym.

Guest tickets are two dollars for all home games.

Freshman Rat Loose Again, Sludges Patrol

By DEANNA MORRIS
Flambeau Staff Writer

The plague has erupted! Campus tranquillity is shattered! Red hats clash with the rich colors of shrubbery and masonry.

That most detested of all vermin, that despicable rodent, the Freshman Rat is again on the loose. Sludges are pitifully few to cope with the spread of the disease.

How can those paragons of success the FSU upperclassmen, keep their respectability if they are associated with the Red Cap, its FSU lettering and its accompanying rat?

SLUDGES HANDY

It is predicted that the pestilence will reach its greatest intensity the night of the Furman football game, when all rats will wear their Rat Caps to the game. Sludges will be on hand to make sure that upperclassmen will not become contaminated with the quarantined Rats.

The spread of the infection is being checked by the use of some well applied remedies. Sludges have made it a point to see every single rat, and to make sure that he or she knows

Seek 2nd Win; Tribe Set For Aerial Game

By FRANK RAMOS
Assistant Sports Editor

Florida State's Seminoles will be gunning for their second straight win of the young season tomorrow night when they meet Furman at Doak S. Campbell stadium at 8 P.M.

Hoping to extend its series edge over Furman to five to two, the Tribe has geared its defense to stop the passing wizardry of Purple Hurricane quarterback Billy Baker.

Baker, the nation's fifth leading passer last season, will be starting against the Seminoles for the third straight year. The 5-11, 180-pound junior completed 3-5 passes with one going for Furman's only score in last year's opener with FSU.

NUGENT'S FULLBACKS

Tom Nugent, FSU's head football coach, is expected to counter offensively with a hard-running fullback corps. Dink Lawrence, a 202-pounder from Saltville, Va., was the leading ground gainer in the FSU opener with Tennessee Tech. Lawrence is backed up by Fred Pickard who led the Tribe in rushing last year while operating from halfback.

Jim Calhoon, up from last year's freshman squad, and Paul Pasquale, a service returnee, give Nugent depth in the fullback slot for the first time.

Bobby Renn, the triplet-threat halfback from Henderson, N. C., will open at left half. Renn chalked up the best rushing average in the Tech opener and punted for a 40.2 average.

Backing up Renn will be Carl Meyer and Bud Whitehead, two outstanding members of last year's frosh squad. Meyer missed the first game because of a leg injury but will be ready for the Furman contest.

SIX SOPHS

Rated as a fine pass receiver, right halfback Jack Espenship will be one of six sophomores

Plans Underway To Rival 'Fall Frolics'

By VIRGINIA DELAVAN
Assistant News Editor

A weekend to rival Gainesville's traditional "Fall Frolics" is being tentatively planned by Student Body President Art Moore and his cabinet.

The proposed activities would center around the first gridiron meeting between FSU and the University of Florida, set for Saturday, November 22.

As announced by Moore at his first cabinet meeting September 14, plans include a torch-light parade or motorcade for the ball players Thursday night, a dance the following night and possibly another dance after the game.

The student body head said he also hopes to arrange for buses to carry students to the game. "Since," says Moore, "it is most desirable for all students to return that night (Saturday)," the buses would leave for Tallahassee immediately following the game.

Late permission for 2 a.m. for students attending the post-game dance was also suggested.

J. Ed Bell and John Calhoun have been appointed to obtain the buses. A block rental rate for buses will be offered to sororities and fraternities, as well as individual rates for other students.

Tickets for the Florida-FSU game will go on sale some time in October and will be sold up to the time of the game.

In other cabinet business, a three-man committee to take "definite action" on the honor system was selected. Members are Don Reedy, secretary of honor; Bucky Canon, Flambeau editor; and Moore. According to Moore, the committee plans a "comparative survey" of honor systems other than FSU's.

Frat Open House Rush Ends Sunday

Registration for fall fraternity rush ends this afternoon, with open house at fraternity houses continuing through Sunday.

In order to be eligible for rush, rushees must visit each fraternity house before Sunday. Houses will be open today between 3 and 6 p.m., tomorrow from 11 a.m. until 3 p.m.; and Sunday from 1:30 until 6:30 p.m.

Letters Policy

Letters to the editor are among the most interesting and readable parts of any editorial page. Therefore, the Flambeau welcomes and encourages them.

We will be glad to print all letters coming to us within the specifications of our policy.

WE ASK that the letters be short and to the point. Short letters are the ones most widely read and enjoyed. They make a letters column interesting as can be seen by looking at the columns of our national magazines.

So, if possible, try to have your say in 200 words or less. We reserve the right to edit letters of greater length.

EVERY LETTER must be signed. We eannot take the responsibility of printing something whose authorship is unknown. A request, backed with good reason, for anonymity will be honored.

We also ask that letters be pertinent to campus news or news issues of the day.

BY NO MEANS DO letters have to agree with the Flambeau's or the university administration's policies. (Which are not always the same.)

In fact, probably the best reading comes from letters controversial in nature.

And, of course, letters must not be obscene nor personal attacks on individuals. (But the actions of our public officials are always subject to criticism.)

So, drop us a line when you have something to say. The address is: Editor, Flambeau; Longmire Building; Campus Mail.

A Southern Disease?

A disease made its first appearance in the South this week.

It is the "school closing" disease. It is seen when public schools are closed rather than integrated in accordance with a Federal court order.

RIGHT NOW this disease can be seen in Little Rock and Front Royal, Va. However, this is only the beginning. It threatens to spread until it covers virtually all the South.

Many Southern state legislatures have hastily passed laws providing that schools close their doors rather than accept Negro pupils. These laws are about to meet the acid test in Arkansas and Virginia.

It is unlikely that the laws will stand in court. For they are still basically segregation laws and this is easily apparent to the courts. In fact Virginia's "massive resistance" laws do not claim to be any more.

ONLY BY ABOLISHING the public schools entirely can the South hope to avert integration in them. (And this says nothing of the other public facilities which must eventually be integrated.)

So the Southland now approaches a crisis.

It must decide whether it will have public education and integration or whether it will be segregation without education.

WE THINK THE leaders in the states choosing the latter course are cutting off the nose of the South to spite its face.

A more realistic approach is being taken by states like North Carolina, Tennessee and Florida. While the governments of these states could hardly be said to favor integration, they are not going to let the problem nullify 100 years of educational advances.

Good For Sigs

Last spring Editor Ron Hamm promised the Senate an Orientation issue of Smoke Signals. He has made good his promise.

Despite a budget cut of one-half its previous appropriation, the 'Signals' staff has published its first issue the earliest in the history of the magazine. First copies were distributed to freshmen and transfer students at their convocations Sunday night, an appropriate gesture aimed at "orienting" them with FSU writing talent, as well as the many other facets of her personality.

AS THE ISSUE is atill being distributed the general impression its content will make is yet to be determined. However, the fact that it has come so promptly is to be highly commended. Last year's "long-awaited" first issue did not make its appearance until December 6.

Now we are asking if, after this fine show of responsibility and industry, the magazine will be appropriated additional funds sufficient to publish its usual number of issues. Or will the actions of Senate limit this year's output to half this number?

Don't Fall Behind

Monday classea start—but not without ehallenge. Freshmen will quickly find themselvea confronted not only with biology, English, and social science, but with hour-long coffee breaks in the Student Center, rush parties, club meetings, and gab sessions in the dorms.

Midnite comes too soon and 8 a. m. even sooner. The first solution that usually comes to mind is letting those "first" class assignments slide. Unfortunately though, as any upperclassman knows, the pace never alowa down—even though rush week may be replaced by Homecoming, etc.

Freshmen should get active, not active in running in circles, but in two or three activities that particularly interest them. They'll soon find themselves doing better in the fields they chose, enjoying themselves more, and even having time for studying and aleeping.

Class Warfare--Sludges Vs. Rats

By BUCKY CANON

"Gee, here comes another one. I'm tired of sinaing Let'a get out of here"

As the two girls tried to walk away in a dignified manner, their ateps were broken with the cry of "Hey Rat!"

AND ANOTHER VICTORY had been woo by the sludaes in the fierce class warfare now racking the campus

Every fall sees the battle of sludges vs. rats renewed and this year's sophomores seem to be doing a good job of making the freshmen toe the line.

FSU is not noted as a school for hazina freshmen, but there were many creatfallen faces in the crowd of new students Sunday niaht when Soph prexy John Bell told them about the rat program

THE RAT PROGRAM beaan in 1950 and was first sponsored by the Student Senate Later the sophomore class took it over

Most of the procedure was initiated by the present senior class during their sophomore daya. A very unsuccessful program had been worked on them the prior year and they resolved to make it better.

They invented the aludges Every boy wanted to be a sludge and every female freahman wanted to be visited by at least one sludge.

THE RAT SONG was made up. Ironically its original use was for a hiah school sorority initiation Bob Kansky, then chief justice of Rat Court, merely adapted the words to the situation.

But last year's sophomores instituted the best procedure for Rat Court. Punishments were given out riaht during the court session which took place on Westcott stage.

If we can judse by the number of rat caps around (which have a habit of rapidly disappearing sometimes), our sophomores are doing a aood job and the class of '62 is fast becoming familiar with FSU's traditions, songa and cheers.

BUT A WORD TO the freshmen (who are probably ready for revenae).

Tradition has it that when Rat Week ends, you are entitled to throw the president of the sophomore class and the chief justice of Rat Court into Westcott Pool.

How To Look Like Upperclassmen

By DIANE GODIN

It's that season when the face of our campus breaks out with hundreds of red dots, under which tramp a new aeneration of freshmen. Even minus the tell-tale rat cap, they could not go unidentified by the observant upper-classman.

Through Orientation week it was especially interesting to note how the female frosh travel in shiny-faced herds of twenty or more—for protection?

And even sans rat cap, who could miss the male membera of this class strolling nonchalantly along through the 80 degree muggy Tallahassee Indian Summer encased in bulky crew-necked sweaters. Yes they were collegiate

WITH A FEW HINTS, they could easily pass as veterans—beginning, of course, with the elimination of that "too-new" look First, sending all those new clothes to the university laundry just once will give any wardrobe that "casual" appearance Minus buttons, color, zippers, and a few seama, you can almost achieve that classworn, steady dated look

And if the bookstore is out of used books by the time they flounder through registration, the same effect can be had by leaving any too-new books on the steps of the Seminole Club at dinner time

AND THE WORST giveaway is their attitudes. Who but freshmen think the food at the Seminole is aood? Who else would dare play "Yakkety-yak" on that untouchable addition to the soda shop, installed by some summer cynic when all the music majors were gone

Any unenlightened freshman with two bits and a yen for Elvis or the Eberly Brothers could cause a mass migration to the music school

ACROSS THE STREET, the new inhabitants of battle-scarred Jennie Murphree hava been aoing to bed each niaht innocent of the favor the university has bestowed on them. The fair lasses of this fort are now better barricaded behind new oak doors

Soon the season will be over and the red rash of rat-hats will disappear The time is only a few weeks away, when the herds will stop their daily trek to the mail-boxes, learn to smoke without gaggina, and things will become all too old

'Signals Copies Still Available

Distribution of the remaining copies of the Orientation issue of Smoke Signals will be made over the weekend and through Monday. Editor Roo Hamm said this week.

The magazines will be placed in Flambeau pickup boxes located in classroom buildings, the Student Center, Westcott Auditorium and the Seminole Club

Since fewer copies were printed than is usual, Hamm asks that each student take only one copy

Roughly 2500 'Signals' have been distributed so far, at the freshman and transfer convocations, sorority and fraternity houses and in the Longmire Day Student Lounge.

According to Hamm a good deal of the work on this issue was done before the end of school last spring Two of the atories were submitted from a magazine-writing class.

Circus, Gymkana Perform At Picnic

The chance to see a portion of Coach Jack Haskin's Flying High Circus, a Gymkana group performance, the cheerleaders, and to hear President Robert M Strozier await the freshmen at the annual frosh picnic tomorrow afternoon, according to picnic officials.

The new-comers to Florida State University will also have an opportunity to meet with their individual religious groups

Sponsored by the Inter-Faith Council, the picnic is open to all classes Tickets for the fried chicken box lunches are still on sale for $1

Although the picnic officially begins at 2 buses leave Bryan Hall every forty minutes from 12 30 on and begin returning at 5.

WOMEN'S CONVOCATION

The annual compulsory upper-class women's Convocation on Student Government will be held next Tuesday at 7 p m in Westcott Auditorium, sponsored by the Women's Senate, according to Committee Chairmao Jackia Soud

BUT THE BIG news from FSU today—and this is almo confidential—is this: President Strozier just gave the ao-ahe sign to beain bia plans for a student union that will be the sh place of Southern Universities.

Dean of Students R. R. Oglesby (who built one of the natio top unions for Oklahoma A & M) is anxious to know what faci ties tha studants want in it.

Florida Politics To Be Pepperless In Future

By HERB SCHMUCK

We Floridians have just had a taste of politics on a nation level. The climax of the Holland-Pepper senatorial primary wa one for the record.

Political strategy by both Pepper and Holland was imbued with comedy as well as important issues As a matter of fact, later in the campaign, issues became less and less important and comedy more and more prevaleot.

A CAMPAIGN that started as a contest betweeo liberalism and conservatism anded in a rhubarb of name-calling and accusations Pepper accused Holland of being endorsed by the Ku Klux Klan, the hooded bigots of the South, while Holland practically called Pepper a communist sympathizer for his "extreme gullibility on the Russiao situation."

Pepper denounced Holland as a "Rip Van Winkle" who had proposed little new legislation Holland countered that Pepper was seekina to abolish the closure rule in the Senate This would spell doom for Southern filibustera against civil righ legislatioo.

And so went the battle in the closing hours of the cam paign, like the two first grade who were playing tit-for-tat the arade school lawn

WHILE PEPPER was servi in the Senate, 1936-1950, he w a ataunch advocate of the Ne and Fair Deals Holland's twe years have been marked by decidadly conservative a proach

From latest reports, Pepp may be a candidate for the go ernorship in 1960 He'll be vyi with men like Ferris Bryant a Brailey Odham His chances winning are about as slim the possibility of his re-electi as Senator.

PEPPER, a pusher of progre sive legislatioo, has managed secure the Negro vote Th coupled with his atrength Dade County will not be enou for him to succeed in anoth statewide election. His unpop larity in north Florida won help either.

All in all, it looks like the pe ple of Florida will be eat their scrambled eggs withou Pepper from now on all the necessary rituals that come with a complete cure and disappearance of the Rat Cap.

If the Rats cooperate at the Furman game, the Sludges' duties will continually lessen until the Wake Forest game, when they will cease altogether.

RAT JUSTICE

Rats have already had a taste of the justice of their upperclassmen ideals. In the Rat Court, they showed many signs of returning health and spirit

Their wholehearted cooperation in recuperating has been greatly appreciated by their judges, and a word of congratulations must here be extended to all the afflicted.

Just because they are getting well, there is no reason to slack up on the treatments and all upperclassmen are encouraged to urge these little rodents to help cure themselves by helpina them to recite, to sing, and to march

All of this will make their little beings stronger and more apt to become accepted members of this celebrated campus.

…ECTED TO LEAD Furman's air attack against the Seminoles …morrow night is quarterback Billy Baker who last year was … fifth leading passer in the nation.

slated to start against the Purple Hurricane. Lenny Levy who was moved from left half to right half will share the duties along with Jim Hooks who has been switched from end.

Directing the FSU attack will be Vic Prinzi, a senior from Waverly, N. Y. Joe Majors and Bobby Conred are expected to direct the number two team in Nugent's two team system.

Leading the FSU linemen once again is little Al Ulmer. Ulmer was the leading tackler last year when he was only a sophomore. The all-Florida choice will open at left guard. Terry Moran who led the Tribe in tackles in the opener will play opposite of Ulmer at right guard.

Tony Romeo and Ron Hinson get the starting call at right end and left end, respectively. Romeo is backed up by Bob Fountain and Bob Kavanaugh while Pete Fleming and Bill Kimber will back up Hinson.

John Spivey and Bob Swosowski are expected to open at the tackle posts. Jack Hardy, a sophomore from Miami, will spell the center duties with Ramon Rogers.

TECH FALLS

In the Tribe opener with Tennessee Tech the Seminoles used their fullbacks to churn up the yardage. The combined running of Lawrence, Pickard, and Pasquale led to all three Tribe scores. Prinzi scored 14 points including one of the first two-point conversions in the nation under the new rules.

Prinzi scored from four and five yards out while Renn passed to Romeo from the 15 for the other score.

BASEBALL MEETING

Baseball coach Danny Litwhiler has set a meeting for all freshman and transfer men who are interested in playing baseball.

The meeting will be held Monday at 4 p.m. in room 206 of the Men's Gym.

IN THE PRESSBOX

By BEN BALSER
Flambeau Sports Editor

A crowd totaling almost half the population of Tallahassee was crammed into Doak S. Campbell Stadium Saturday night as Florida State and Tennessee Tech pushed through a sluggish season opener.

The Tech offense couldn't get moving and although the Seminole attack sputtered at times, it did manage a few drives that resulted in scores. Coach Tom Nugent and his staff did a fine job in preparing the Tribe for a game in two short weeks. The extra polish that the Seminoles showed on both offense and defense told the story of why Tech ended the game on the short end of the score.

Although the first game of the season is not always an indication of things to come, we feel that a few comments could be made pertaining to the Seminole's performance Saturday night.

The running of most of the FSU backs ranged from good to excellent. Vic Prinzi, the slender senior quarterback, only carried the ball six times but made it count as he racked up 14 points.

The fullback corps of Coach Nugent seemed especially strong for a change. Dink Lawrence, the starter, carried the ball 15 times and picked up 67 yards. The reserves, Paul Pasquale and Fred Pickard, ran like they wanted Lawrence's job.

Pickard blasted the Tech line six times in a row as the Seminoles drove for their second score. He ended the game with a 4.4 average. Pasquale was instrumental in a first quarter FSU drive that was stopped when Carroll Wright intercepted Joe Major's pass in the end zone.

RENN RAN WELL

Bob Renn, the smooth running senior halfback, threaded his way through the big Tech defense for several good jaunts. Renn's versatility was shown as he passed for one touchdown and punted three times for 42.7 average.

Of course all the credit cannot be given to the runners. Blocking is one of the most important components of a good offense and the Seminoles proved that Saturday night. Every time an FSU back scampered through the line there was a good sized hole for him to run through.

In some instances, Prinzi and Majors did not get adequate pass protection. One of the best individual blocks of the game was thrown by Renn as he took out a Tech defender who stood between Prinzi and the goal on FSU's second score.

FSU's passing game did not look exceptionally effective. Prinzi threw a few short passes that only amounted to seven yards. Majors completed two out of seven for 43 yards. Sophomore Bob Conrad made good his only pass for 19 yards.

Terry Moran and Al Ulmer, two scrappy guards, sparked on defense as they made 12 tackles and five assists between them. Lawrence was also a bulwark on defense as he made six tackles from his linebacker post.

GETTING THE SEMINOLES off to a fast start is Vic Prinzi as he scores the first FSU touchdown of the 1958 season against Tennessee Tech.

Georgia Tech Opens Season

Five of Florida State's opponents in the coming weeks kick off their seasons tomorrow night.

The teams in the order of their appearance on the Seminole schedule are: Georgia Tech, Wake Forest, Georgia, Virginia Tech and Florida State's three remaining opponents, Tennessee, Tampa and Miami, face FSU in that order following the Virginia Tech game.

Possibly facing the toughest encounter is Georgia Tech, the Tribe's opponent Sept. 26. The Yellow Jackets face powerful Kentucky, victors over Hawaii 51-0 last Saturday.

Besides the expectations of a close battle, additional interest is spotlighted on this game by Tech's announced plans to use two platoons. If the Engineers employ this feature of the game successfully against Kentucky, it's a good bet FSU will see it run against them the following week.

Georgia, State's foe Oct. 11, faces a rugged day also. The Bulldogs draw tough Texas for their opener. Based on the Bulldogs determined play at the end of last season and the return of virtually the same team this year, Georgia has been rated an even chance with the Longhorns.

Talmon New Business Head

No longer will there be separate business managers for each student publication, according to Dr. Reid Montgomery publications advisor. Under the new arrangement, one student will serve the Flambeau, Tally-Ho, and Smoke Signals.

Don Talmon has been appointed this years busines manager by Dr. Montgomery and Dr. R R Oglesby. Dean of Students. The change is permanent pending final approval by the Board of Publications.

Talmon's experience as business manager of the Flambeau, assistant business manager of the Tally-Ho, and classes in accounting were the bases for his appointment to the new $70 a month job The former business managers of the Tally-Ho and Smoke Signals will be offered assistant positions.

Dr Montgomery recommended the change last March; however, no action was taken on his proposal at that time. The Florida State University Auditor, Jerry Leonard, and FSU Business Manager, Rod Shaw, deemed the change to be necessary after an examination of the books this summer

Talmon, who was in favor of combining the three offices into one, said, "Both Dr. Montgomery and I have felt this was a necessary thing for the past year.

'No Martyr'—Starke

Negro Student Satisfied At Gainesville Reception

(Ed. Note: Herb Schmuck, Flambeau staff writer, interviewed George Starke while visiting the University of Florida in Gainesville last weekend. Starke is the first Negro student to enroll in a previously all-white Florida university.)

By HERB SCHMUCK
Flambeau Staff Writer

George Starke, the first Negro student to enter a white university in this state, is quite satisfied with his reception at the University of Florida thus far Starke is a freshman in the law school.

"I have no desire to be a martyr" Starke answered when asked if his entrance was motivated by the Supreme Court ruling on segregation "The ruling merely gave me an opportunity to take advantage of attending a school which would offer me the best conditions for my education"

"My reasons for entering the U of F law school were many. It is the best law school which is closest to my home (Orlando). It would also be the least expensive for me"

FLORIDA PRACTICE

"Furthermore I plan to practice law in Florida after I graduate There are approximately 23 Negro lawyers in Florida, none of which are interested in corporation law the field which I intend to major in"

The consensus of opinion by those students enrolled in the school of law is very favorable toward Starke's admission to the college

Jim Adams past president of the Phi Kappa Tau fraternity now a freshman law student said of Starke's admission

"He (Starke) has shown good taste and clear thinking in both attitudes and actions in his associations with other students so far He has avoided any attempt to force social relation that might appear unsatisfactory to other students

"I'm proud to be associated with the University because of the way they have handled the situation." Adams concluded

"GOOD IDEA"

Lloyd Winroth, a senior law student from Miami, said "If anyone meets the school's requirements, he should be allowed entry" Maurice Rosen, a senior law student from New York says: "It's a good idea . . . more power to him."

The U of F isn't the only college that Starke considered entering He wrote Vanderbilt University for a catalogue but did not submit an application for acceptance

Registration, which was the first opportunity for Florida students to observe Starke went off without a hitch

"I was treated like any other student and was not made a spectacle of Occasionally a student would engage in conversation with me, but usually it was just another law student wanting to know how my scheduling was going or what sections I had secured for various law subjects"

Everybody is more or less absorbed in the routine of registering and Starke was no exception to the rule

When asked if he planned if invited to join a campus organization or club, specifically the John Marshall Bar Association, he replied: "I want to engage in any activity the school participates in"

STUDIES FIRST

He added that his studies came first and that any extra-curricular activities would occupy his time only if his classwork permitted.

Starke had met few of his professors durina registration However, one professor of law did approach Starke and ask him what section he had for a certain course. When Starke answered, the prof said that he was glad that he (Starke) was in his section.

George Starke is a modest softspoken man He likes to read primarily non-fiction and is an avid sports fan. He never participated in inter-collegiate athletics while an undergraduate but likes to swim

Starke graduated from Morehouse College in Atlanta with a degree in business administration. He has also attended North Carolina College and Phillips College. He is a veteran attending Florida on the G. I. Bill.

Senate To Discuss Reapportionment

Flambeau Photo Alan David

THIS LI'L CHICK DIGS THOSE GUYS IN UNIFORM—Randy Wright, 2, sits waiting for some handsome ROTC student to come along. Actually she is just resting her tired feet while her mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Wright fight the registration lines as both of them are FSU students.

First Meeting Set Tomorrow

By VIRGINIA DELAVAN
Assistant News Editor

This year's scheduled study of reapportionment will be launched at the first meeting of Student Senate, set for tomorrow at 4:15 p.m. in 210 Longmire.

The last such survey of senatorial representation was made in the spring of 1956 resulting in realignment of elective precincts. Plans were made at that time to restudy the issue this year to determine whether the set-up was still adequate

The Senate will also appoint a committee to put up suggestion boxes in various spots around campus Though provided for in the Senate Statutes, this will be the first year the project has been undertaken according to Mattox Hair, Senate Chairman.

Students will be able to voice opinions on government issues and suggest legislative measures through this outlet Hair said.

SOLONS MISSING

Senate attendance will be light tomorrow, Hair said, as only 12 new solons have been elected The remaining members of the group, which usually numbers 36-38 will be selected by the student body about the middle of October.

All precinct senators, as well as the four freshmen senators, are yet to be elected The twelve presently serving were chosen in last spring's general election to represent sophomore, junior and senior classes

Concrete steps on these two measures and the remainder of the Senate's business for the year will not be taken until after the coming election.

WOMEN PLAN

Women senators held their initial meeting September 15

The group made plans for the upcoming women's Convocation and discussed governmental procedures for Women's Cooperative Housing units.

The convocation, compulsory for all upperclass women will be held in Westcott Auditorium tonight at 7 Its purpose according to Ada Leigh Wall, women's vice president is to introduce women to student government.

The two Cooperative houses, located off campus, house a majority of freshmen this year said Miss Wall Therefore, they will be governed by the existing freshmen house councils and will send elected representatives to these councils

Says Board Chairman

Operating Budget Destined For Cut

The 121 million dollar operating budget which faces the Board of Control is destined to be cut, according to Chairman James Love of Quincy

The board spent three days from the nine agencies in Florida and then handed them back so the institutions' members could try to devise ways to cut them.

Florida State University President Robert Strozier told the Board he could see no way to cut FSU's proposed budget of 24 million dollars He said FSU is growing rapidly and needs a 33 per cent increase in its spending over the 1957-59 biennium.

The FSU proposal for the next two years is some 6½ million dollars higher than the current budget. The proposal calls for four million dollars more for salaries about one million for general expenses, and another million in additional capital outlay.

The university also lacks housing facilities. "We had to turn down hundreds of qualified students this fall because of lack of housing" Strozier said.

'SHORTCHANGE'

In a like manner, the University of Florida's president Dr J. Wayne Reitz outlined his proposed operating expenses at $70,393,104 and said "If this budget is any less than this, it would be to shortchange the future of Florida"

Some of the activities which U of F wants to offer during the next two years are an advanced accounting program, a graduate program in veterinary science, and a freshman summer orientation program.

Reitz also said the nuclear science program needed $1,608,933—an increase of 93 per cent to strengthen the present program.

There is a possibility of a cut, however, by Florida A & M University officials. President George Gore admitted that some $700,000 could be cut from the initial request of $9,285,449. During the last biennium, A & M received $6,170,-913.

The current requests total more than 30 million over the current appropriations Chairman Love said "There are just so many oranges on the tree We'll shake off as many as we can."

William G Gaither of Miami said he didn't think the board could decide on cuts until the members had talked with the cabinet about the state's income "Education is like charitable cases," he said, "They're all worthy or useful but the dollars have to match them. I can see nothing in the budget which can be considered fat"

J. J Daniel of Jacksonville said "It will take work and study. I wish I did know where to make cuts"

Joe Hays of Winter Haven, newest member of the board, said going over the budget requests "We've just got to study this all out and then come up with a decision"

Ralph Miller of Orlando said "I believe building and new positions should be on a priority basis. Salary increases on a merit basis are of prime importance We want the best qualified personnel we can get."

Miller saw no more difficulty now than at any time before in considering requests. "It's just a job of coordinating expenses among institutions so that each gets its proper share," he said.

S Kendrick Guernsey of Jacksonville, vice chairman of the board, said he thought an interim session would be necessary, but Broward Culpepper of Tallahassee said he thought not The next regular meeting of the board is in Tallahassee Oct. 31.

The Florida Flambeau

State's Best Editorial Page 1957

Florida Flambeau editorials represent only the views of the student members of the staff. Signed columns on this page represent only the opinions of their autbors. Any student may auomlt either editorials or columns for consideration.

Our Policy

Every newspaper sets forth certain goals for which it strives — goals which give it a reason for publishing.

As there is a large turnover in both the Flambeau's readership and staff each year, it has become customary for us to outline these goals in print at the beginning of each new term.

Editorlally, the Flambeau has had a libaral history. With rare exceptions, freedom of the press haa always been respected and upbeld by the university administratlon.

In 1955 a student-faculty Board of Publications waa created to supervise the three student publications. They have stated their respect for a mature judgement on the part of the student editors as well as for editorial freedom.

The Flambeau has no reason to think that a different policy will prevail this year.

The Administration

The Flambeau, as an integral part of FSU, pledges its cooperation with the administration in its attempt to reach Dr. Strozier's ambition in making FSU "a great university."

Realizing that we are a vital communicative link between the university and the students it serves, the Flambeau pledges itself to further its acquaintance with the problems facing the administrators and faculty and to report these problems to the students.

This is not tn say that actinns of the administration will be above our criticism. Far from it. Often, in an institution of several thousand employees and many branches, some individuals or departments can lose sight of the common goal and become obsessed with their own importance. This we should not tolerate.

In past yaara tha university has ahown too much paternalism towards the students. This is a bangover from the FSCW days and seems to be alowly losing ground.

It is something, however, which must be guarded against. The student must not be denied the opportunity to make his own decisinns (and mistakes) merely for the sake of efficiency or so it can be said "We take care of our students at FSU."

Such denial leads to a resentment against the university which will harm it when the student becomes an alumnus and a voting citizen of the state. Nor will we have good leaders in the coming years if the youth of today have had their decisinns made for them during college.

We realize the university owes certain obligations to the parents of students and to the taxpayers of the state and must govern university life accordingly. The rules stemming from these should be few and simple however.

Student Government

This newspaper will support the student government. We realize there are many on campus who become cynics when discussing student government and its accomplishments.

But we believe that students ought to have a voice in the affairs of their university and only through organization on their part will they attain that voice. Student government is such an organization.

While tbe student government does its share in the promotion and planning of tha atudents walfare, tha Flambeau will be plaased to urge its readers to participate in their student government.

Too often we have seen men and women holding student government positions squabble and bicker over petty issues or personality differences and throw away their chance to accomplish something of lasting value.

Such actions will receive nothing but criticism from the Flambeau.

Discuss All Subjects

So far we have discussed only campus affairs. One might ask if the Flambeau will devote space to other issues of interest in the world.

Our position makes it mandatory that our first concern be about the events on the FSU campus. But we will not stick our head in the mud and refuse to admit the existence of the rest of the world. We realize that what happens in far away places today may affect our very lives tomorrow.

Our editorialists and columnists and would be letter writers can and will feel free to discuss subjects of interest in national affairs, the entertainment world, or the like.

We will give state issues a special place in nur columns for Florida is home to most of us and the state has built and maintained our university. Its actions affect us directly or indirectly.

Primary Goal

The Flambeau pledges itself, however, never to lose sight of its primary goal—the first goal of any newspaper—the accurate and readable presentation of the news. Good news coverage is the cornerstone of a good newspaper.

Good news coveraga means alertness on our part. This year we will attampt to dig a littla harder and a little deeper lnto the doings of the administrative and student agencies.

But there is more to a newspaper than news coverage. The news must be analyzed—yet it cannot be analyzed in such a manner that it becomes distorted. Through its editorials, columns and survey articles the Flambeau will attempt to give its readers a broad and analytical view of the news.

But, so far as is humanly possible, we will strive to keep our news columns straightforward and unbiased.

Rush Week

This week the attention of freshmen and transfer student will be focused on the campus' Greek groups as the fraternities wind up their rush and the sororities begin theirs.

FRATERNITIES and sororities are an integral part of most universities. Socially perhaps, they play a most important part.

We would like to say a word to the rushees here though.

FSU is not primarily a Greek campus. You do not have to get that sorority bid or join a certain fraternity to be a "somebody" on campus.

A QUICK LOOK at the leaders in many fields of campus activities will show you that a good part of them are non-Greeks.

This is not to disparage the fraternities and sororities. We're merely aaying "Don't feel as if the world has come to an end if you don't get that certain bid you've wanted."

Bookstores Defended

'Signals Editorial Uncalled For

By PAT SENN

Money — Money — Money there's always a lot of talk about it but rarely enouch on hand. So, sooner or later, some self appointed Patrick Henry is bound to mount the podium and chew someone out, thus easing his pinching pocketbook. Trouble and hard feelings occur when the sounding-off comes without many facts being known.

This time the soap box was the Smoke Signals, the orator, Gene Foster, the topic, "The L-o-n-g Profitable Life of a Text Book," and the victim, the bookstores.

MR. GORDON WHEELER, who manages the University Book store, hadn't read and didn't seem very interested in the article, however Mr Robert (better known as the Bill of Bill's Book store) Schuessler'a collar was a few degrees hotter as he welcomed Mr Foster or anyone alse to come over and get the facts.

Bill's general policy is a minimum mark down of 25% on books being resold. This year when a shipment of newly required freshmen history books got water-marked, he marked them down 40%. Students needed them, marked down or not, dry, half or all wet.

Some books are carried without profit as a service to the students and various supplies as corrasible typing paper and pencils are sold at a price slightly frustrating to up town merchants.

BOOKS ARE EXPENSIVE— no one will deny that, but that doesn't necessarily mean that someone is being gypped. Eight years of steady competition does a lot more toward keeping prices down than any half-baked editorial the Signals may run.

THE IRONICAL PART about it is that in the orientation issue of the Signals both book stores carried half page ads. Apparently, however, the Signals is beyond the need for mere money, for it's obviously trying to rid itself of two quite benevolent customers.

A lot of money has poured down the drain for "February" ads that didn't make an appearance until April — who buys books in April?

So-o-o-o it would appear that the Signals have stepped on some toes — namely their own.

Little Bits Of Info Help New Students

ED CARHART

Does anybody know what price scrap paper is bringing? I have a collection of pamphlets, diagrams and poop sheets that give such vital information as where the pencil sharpeners are located in the library to how close my car must be parked to the curb.

Just ask me such questions as what time the Student Center opens for breakfast, last call for supper at the Seminole, name of the housefellow on the 10th floor of West Hall, or even the location of the WPE building.

ALL THIS information is right at my finger tips. Well, almost at my finger tips. It may be in the stacks and piles of papers and booklets heaped on my desk. Each step of orientation is generously seasoned with a wealth of further directions, and another handful of mimeographed papers giving more directions, explanations and exceptions to those already received.

The conscientious atudent hauls these tidbits back to his room and spends long periods poring over them trying to digest the food for thought they offer. A trip to the Seminole only to find the doors locked or wading through a mob to register for the Tally-Ho and finding the line is for student insurance certainly adds the necessary incentive. This is what they mean by the school of hard knocks and, if nothing else, it is effective.

COPIES OF THE Flambeau and Pow Wow are windfalls of informatioo to the uninitiated. After a little practice you can soon size up those people that will have the answers to your questions by the look on their face and the manner they walk through the maze of halls.

There is no doubt all this printed material is an invaluable aid to the newcomer and even helps the old-timera keep up with the changes that are the rule rather than the exception.

Here are some items I would like to see added to the vast collection—

A DETAILED DIAGRAM of the history building — this one rates tops as a real puzzle!

A method wherein I could enter and exit from Opperman Music Hall via the same door.

The name of a aood safecracker who would be willing to help me get to my mail.

A few simple clues that would help me determine whether that sharp looking Miss at the next table is pinned, a society member or merely decorated for service to the cause.

A LIST OF TUTORS in the Greek alphabet. Such words as Sigma and Omega leave me dazed, especially when rattled off in a group.

A list of people willing to lend me five until my check comes in.

Another list of those people who are waiting for their checks to arrive.

These are just a few. I am sure you have more. One last word to the do-it-yourself fan: buy your own mimeograph outfit, run off a batch of your own creations and do your part in educating the uninformed. The uninformed and confused that is.

Could It Be?

Do's And Dont's For Frosh

By NANCY GENE BROWN

Hail, fellow seekers of knowladge! Hail

It was quite interesting to trudge around campus on the first day of classes and view students at the varying atages of educatiooal progress. Freshmen are pink-cheeked and bright-eyed. Sophs atrive toward the worldly, "I-saw-this-picture-before-and-we were-all-killed" look. Juniors, resigned to their fates, have glassy eyes and a glazed look. Seniora aeemed somewhat better, but have an aura of faint hopelessness—graduation is now within the realm of possibility.

Grit your teeth and brace yourselves for another uplifting year of adademic inspiration. To you, Freshman, a special word to the wise among you:

WHILE YOU'RE being inspired, try to keep your little pink footsies on terra firma. The firma the betta. Don't get carried away with calculus equations and Hegelian theoriea and Shakespearean drama—be practical.

Remember to write home at least once a semester. Remember to deliver linens spasmodically to the laundry. Remember, Jennie girls and others, to be in your cubicles at 1:15 and don't bang lingerie in the wiodows to dry.

REMEMRER TO TAKE time out from coffee breaks and bridae playing to attend at least one class per day.

Above all, remember to count pennies. Howl brokenly over the atrocious price of books, the economical outrages of campus eating establishments, and the unbelievable number of fees and dues and dooations which are assessed.

PENNY-COUNTING WILL be necessary for those of you freshmen who are depatably fortuoate enough to have acquired a State Teachers' scholarship. This is the state's contribution (witb red tape attached) of $200 per aemester, offered as encouragement to the atate'a future teachers.

There's only ooe catch. If you, gentle Freshmao, are like most of us, you used part of that $200 to pay feea. The remainder—and how handy!—was designated for book purchasing.

But lo! How the heck does one go about obtaining said remainder?

IT IS TOTALLY unobtainable for at least a month, probably six weeks, at which time it will belatedly arrive at the Student Bank. Much too late to assist with the expenses of books.

To whom ahould an appeal be made? To the State? To the School of Education? To whom it may concern?

Whoever you are, please take heed: can some arrangement not be made whereby these funds would be available at an earlier date for the benefit of scholarship holders?

You knew we were coming. Why didn't you have the cake baked?

Will Sherm Get Boot For His Party's Good

By BUCKY CANON

By the time you read thia Sherman Adams may be looking for a new job.

Then again, he may not.

THE HERBLOCK cartoon today pretty well sums up the political situation surrounding Sherm.

Republican politicos (especially those running for re-election this fall) are mighty anxious to see the controversial Mr. Adams go.

BUT IKE ISN'T in any hurry to push the vicuna coat owner out the door. "I need him," were the President'a famous words shortl yafter the Adams-Goldfine controveray set forth demands for Sherm's neck.

The cries were loud and vigorous in June and July—during the daya of the Congressional hearinga over Adams' mysterious gifts.

BUT ADAMS HUNG in. And the politicians figured that time would mitigate the memory of Adams' indiscretions from the public mind before the November election. Time usually is a great ally of individuals or partiea in trouble.

But time didn't. At least not in Maine. Two weeks ago voters of that rock-ribbed Republican state turned thumbs down on Sen Frederick Payne—a recipient of a Bernard Goldfine gift.

Now the demands are renewed for Sherman's scalp. The White House officials are saying that Sherm is still in, everyone from Drew Pearson on down is betting that Sherman Adams will resign shortly.

ADAMS AND IKE are probably reconsidering the possibility of his (Adams') resignation now. It ia their decision.

Ike has said he wants Adams to stay on and Adams who wields a great deal of influence and power is not likely to feel like giving it all up.

But they have the party to consider. Every GOP representative and about 15 senators have to stand for re-election this fall.

MAINE HAS ALREADY shown that Adams' continued presence in the White House "inner circle" is hurting their already dim chances for gaining senators or representatives.

So the decision facing Ike and Sherman is: the party or themselves.

If the choice is the party it will mean the White House high command has put the Republican fortunes this November above the necessity of an experienced administrative assistant.

This will be a sign of a resurgence in party intereat by Eisenhower.

IF ADAMS DECIDES to continue hanging in, it will mean that Ike just does not feel up to breaking in another presidential assistant and the party will just have to have Sherm hanging around its neck.

In other words, he's tired.

So we'll soon see. Unless Sherman Adams resigns soon he'll be a liability to the GOP this fall.

Talk About Talent, Beauties And Actors

By MARK AUSTIN

The talent show Friday night, playing to the usual packed crowd was better than it customarily is. But the gal who stole the show was Vasha Nowakowski, a freshman from Miami. She performed an impressive interpretative dance of a Negro deacon's explanation of the earth's creation.

She could have taken several encores had she wanted to.

There is some deep social significance here but you figure it out.

IF YOU FAIL to recognize some of your old chums 'cause they're not wearing their specs this year the answer is . . . contact lenses. You'd be surprised at the number of campus kids wearing those finger-tip sized bits of plastic.

Doctors say that in another three months over four million people will own them.

• • •

MAYBE THIS YEAR some of the young, aspiring campus actors will have a chance to see what they can do. Out of the old masters who dominated FSU productions for three years (such as Eli Ask and Bryant Sims) only Isa Cohen is back. And, with her talent Isa probably won't be here long.

Tryouts for the first effort, "Ring Around the Moon" begin today. It will be interesting to see if anyone can take the place of the FSU acting king, Eli Ask.

TALKING ABOUT acting, Jean Hayden, one-time Miss Jacksonville and winner of several campus beauty titles is back in Tallahassee. Jean had gone to study with a branch of the Actors' Studio in New York. That's the place where they teach actors to do exactly what they feel like doing.

The only trouble was, Jean said that too many actors felt like doing what she didn't feel like doing.

IN THE PRESSBOX

By BEN BALSER
Flambeau Sports Editor

Last year in a late season football game, FSU head coach Tom Nugent had five sophomores in his starting lineup. Against Furman Saturday night, Nugent had six sophs on the field as starters.

The funny thing is that most of the sophomores Saturday night occupied the same positions that last season's sophomores had played.

The only Junior that opened against Furman and started last season as a sophomore in the same position was Al Ulmer. The other four starting sophs of last year were either switched to another position or dropped out of school.

The soph starter at right guard last year was Abner [illegible]bee. Abner no longer plays football, and his starting position was grabbed by Terry Moran, a New Orleans [illegible], who has really come through in the first two games this year.

Paul Slaton, a rugged center from Miami, started at that position in this particular game last season. [illegible]on dropped out of school and in his place has started another soph, John Bell.

The starting right tackle Saturday night was junior [illegible]n Spivey. Last year Spivey opened at right end. This season he was switched to tackle and Tony Romeo another soph no less has the right end spot nailed down.

[PI]CKARD GOES ANYWHERE

The squat little man you saw wearing 43 and bul[ly]ing Furman players Saturday night was second team [ba]ck Fred Pickard.

Last season, as a sophomore, he ran with the same [illegible] from the right half position. Pickard was also [swit]ched this year and another soph has taken his place [at r]ight half—Jack Espenship.

There is little doubt that Nugent starts more sophs than any other major college coach in the south. His faith in a man's desire and ability overshadows the man's experience.

This theory has paid off for Nugent as can be seen [in] the performances of Bob Conrad, Bud Whitehead, [illegible] Swoszowski, Moran, Romeo, Ron Hinson, Bell and [Esp]enship so far this year.

In his first meeting with the freshmen football players about three weeks ago, Nugent stressed that anyone of them could be a starter for the varsity next year.

After observing Nugent's past and present actions pertaining to sophs, any freshman in the room knew he [wa]s telling the truth.

Seminoles Stop Hurricane, 42-6

Renn Runs Wild, Gains 130 Yards

By FRANK RAMOS
Assistant Sports Editor

Giving an old friend the bum's rush, Florida State's Seminoles bid farewell to Furman's Purple Hurricane with a smashing 42-6 victory Saturday night.

Closing out a seven game series with Furman which saw FSU win the last five games after dropping the first two, the Seminoles wrapped up Saturday's game early behind the fine running of Bobby Renn.

Renn, a senior from Henderson, N. C., lashed through and around the Furman line for 130 yards in seven carries including a 50 yard touchdown romp for the Tribe's first score of the evening.

After quarterback Vic Prinzi scored his second two-point conversion of the young season the Seminoles waited until the second quarter to score again.

A hard tackle by junior guard Al Ulmer made Furman halfback Hicky Horton fumble and Terry Moran's recovery led to the second FSU touchdown

CONRAD SCORES

Following two 17 yard gains around end by Renn and an 18 yard scamper by fullback Dink Lawrence around left end, third-string quarterback Bobby Conrad went over from the three yard line on a keep play.

Five plays later FSU scored again, this time Renn made the final yardage from 10 yards out. Ray Lamb's recovery of a Furman fumble led to the third score.

After forcing the Purple Hurricane to punt, it took the Tribe six plays to rack up touchdown number four. A combination of gains by Fred Pickard and the passing of Joe Majors put the Seminoles on the Furman three from where Pickard sliced off tackle for the necessary yardage to give the Seminoles a 28-0 halftime lead.

Rough defensive play once again led to another FSU score. Pushing the young Hurricane deep into its own territory, Tribe defenders forced Furman to punt again.

MAJORS TO KIMBER

Lenny Levy returned Tom Yates' punt 12 yards to put the ball on the Furman 26 from where Majors followed Paul Pasqual's eight yard gain with a 18 yard scoring pass to end Bill Kimber.

With Bobby Conrad directing the attack, FSU rolled to its sixth touchdown of the night. Starting on the Seminoles 46, Conrad pitched to Bob Kavanaugh for a 27 yard gain. Following a seven yard gain by Pickard, Bud Whitehead took a Conrad pitchout and galloped 20 yards for the score.

Johnny Sheppard used his automatic toe to make the score 41-0. It was Sheppard's sixth conversion of the season and brought his career total to 36-40

Furman quarterback Bill Canty successfully directed a fourth period Hurricane drive for Furman's only score. Subbing for Billy Baker, fifth ranked passer in the nation last season, who missed the game because of an injury, Canty completed passes for 20 and 17 yards with the last one doing the trick.

According to coach Nugent it was simply a question of manpower. "Furman fought all the way but I think we had better manpower." Nugent focused attention on the effective defense play of both the first and second teams, "particularly the second."

Bob Renn Named Fla. Back of Week

Bobby Renn, 175-pound senior halfback of Florida State University, was named the first 1958 Back Of The Week by The Florida State Sports Writers Assn.

Renn, A Henderson, N. C., native, streaked for two touchdowns and set up another as FSU was thumping Furman 42-6 Saturday night.

Georgia Tech Falls; Deacons Win Upset

Georgia Tech, FSU's grid opponent next week, lost its season opener to Kentucky 13-0, Saturday

Wake Forest, the Seminoles foe on Oct. 4, won its curtain-raiser as the Deacons upset favored Maryland, 34-0 Georgia's tough Bulldogs lost a squeeker to Texas 13-8. FSU meets the Bulldogs Oct. 11 in Jacksonville

VPI, GATORS WIN

The Seminoles' opponent of Oct. 11, Virginia Tech, won its first game of the season by besting West Texas State, 28-12

Florida's unteated Gators showed early season power as they rolled out a 34-13 win over Tulane.

Frosh Gridders To Play Four

Florida State University's freshman football team, defeated only once in college circles during the past two seasons, will play a four-game schedule this fall, Athletic Director Tom Nugent announced today.

The Baby Seminoles, coached by Herb Hughes, open the four-game agenda against the University of Miami freshman here Oct 3.

Miami's 1957 freshman team—one of the best in Hurricane history — halted a nine-game Seminole freshmen winning streak, 21-7, in the season finale at Miami last year.

The FSU - Miami freshman game will serve as a Friday night prelude to State's Oct. 4 clash with Wake Forest here.

Besides Miami, the Junior Tribe will face freshman teams from Furman, The Citadel, and up-and-coming University of Houston.

GAME AT PC

The Houston - Florida State freshman scrap will be played as the Baby Seminole's annual game in Panama City.

The 1958 freshman schedule: Oct. 3—Miami at Tallahassee, 8 p.m.; Oct. 17—Furman at Greenville, S C., 8 p.m.; Oct. 30—The Citadel at Augusta, Ga., 8:15 p.m.; Nov. 8—Houston at Panama City, Fla., 8 p.m.

Dr. Slosek

Ex-Navy Surgeon Is Hospital Head

By BONNIE PERRY
Flambeau Staff Writer

Beginning his second career as a doctor, Dr. Edward F. Slosek has been appointed medical director of the University Hospital at Florida State University. Dr. Slosek's first career encompassed 20 years of service as a Navy surgeon.

During World War II he saw service as a medical officer in the Pacific, Atlantic and Mediterranean, participating in landings at Casablanca and Sicily.

Since the war, Capt Slosek has served as chief of surgery in Panama, Canal Zone, at the Naval Hospitals in Beaufort, S C., and on Guam

He also has been assistant chief of surgery at the Naval Hospital in Chelsea, Mass., and has served a fellowship at Lahey Clinic in Boston His last assignment was at the Pensacola Naval Hospital as chief of surgery until his retirement on Aug 1

STAFF

Completing FSU's hospital staff are Dr E Thonnard, general internist· Dr Kranz, psychiatrist; Drs Cole and Kraeft general practitioners; Dr McCollough X-ray specialist; Mr. H F Bevis, pharmacist; and 18 registered nurses

"We have a very thorough and competent staff dedicated to the health of the students." Dr. Slosek stated "We are able to handle any emergencies in the University hospital other than operations, which are done at Tallahassee Memorial Hospital This is due to our small physical plant facilities"

"There is no charge for hospital rooms or medications while in the University hospital and only small charges for food." he continued "And the first consultation from an outside specialist, if needed, is free. Students are fortunate to have such complete facilities at hand for the small charge included in registration fees" he concluded.

FREE ROOMS

Dr. Thonnard stressed the importance of students availing themselves of Salk Vaccine and Tetanus shots, if not already completed. "A person needs a Tetanus shot every two or three years, especially if he is active," Dr. Thonnard said. "We have plenty of both on hand at present"

Doctors may be seen daily except Saturday evenings, and Sunday at these hours: 9 a.m to 11:30 a.m. and 1 30 p.m. to 4 p.m. Visiting hours are 2 p.m. to 3 p.m and 7 p.m to 8 p.m. daily. Emergencies will be seen at any hour

Orientation 'Signals Gets Favorable Nod

Smoke Signals is out and being read. Student comments on the whole are favorable—if not overly enthusiastic.

However, the senators who hold the scaffold over editor Ron Hamm's hopes for appropriations for three instead of one more issues, are more cautious

Senator Carl Butler said. "It's all right, but not much different from last year" Chairman of Senate Mattox Hair stated that he and the KA's all thought it was good. He felt it was hard to say anything definite about further money until he had talked with the other senators

"Real cute" was how newly arrived Lydia Speed described the Signals. Freshman Bob Donath of Fort Lauderdale commented, "There was good literary content. I enjoyed the magazine very much although I'd like more and longer jokes."

Junior Mike Tschirret said, "It was a great improvement over last year—but that isn't saying much" Gainesville auys, he commented, prefer beauty queens to masculine dancers

WFSU Ups Power Output

The Florida State University broadcasting station WFSU-FM, has increased its coveraae from 10 watts to 1000 wats, according to Roy Flynn, director of University Broadcasting Services

The newly installed antenna atop the Music Building will increase the reception area to a radius of 40 miles, taking in many areas that did not receive the station previously

The first broadcast on increased power, originally scheduled for Monday, has been delayed a few days due to the late arrival of an essential part of the transmitter.

The station, which primarily broadcasts serious music and informal adult educational subjects, will be on the air Monday through Friday from 7 a.m. until 8 30 a.m. and from 2 p.m. until 10 p.m. daily.

This year for the first time WFSU-FM will broadcast the required music for Humanities, with comments from Allan Thomson, humanities professor Programming on this feature is scheduled for 6 p.m. Saturdays.

Flynn stated that the stronger antenna is to enable people who are interested in FSU and its activities to receive a stronger signal

WFSU-FM listening rooms are being planned tentatively for Longmire Building and possibly for the library as well.

Nareyan Mavlankr, Indian Educator, To Give Economics Lectures This Fall

By ROSA NELL WILSON

An experienced Indian educator will be lecturing on economics of the Far East at Florida State University this semester.

In the U. S. on a Fulbright Grant and John Hay Whitney Foundation Grant, Nareyan Mavlankr is a former teacher of economics in the College of Commerce of Boona, India.

Because Oriental countries face similar problems, Mavlankr said, he will be lecturing here primarily on Japanese and Chinese economics.

A teacher for 20 years, he was an attorney before entering the field of education.

The Boona College, located in Bombay State, is a fairly new school exemplifying the great spurt in education and other activities which has occurred "since independence," the educator said.

NEW SCHOOLS

He pointed out a large number of new universities have been started in Bombay, increasing at a rate of five to one, since India became independent of Britain in 1947.

Comparing Indiao universities to what he has seen of American institutions, Mavlankr remarked classes are larger, with teacher-pupil ratio often as high as one to 80 or 90.

As a result, teaching methods vary and the lecture system is used almost exclusively, he explained The lack of teachers also means less variety in subjects offered.

A fundamental difference in the two types, the educator said, is that Indian uoiversities are largely examioing bodies, doing only post-graduate work

The prospective student selects a specialized type of college for undergraduate study, he added.

Mavlankr said a large number of Indian womeo attend college, especially in the field of humanities. More men are found in scientific schools.

A current major problem for Indian education is the need for a medium of instruction, he declared.

HINDU SPOKEN

English is no long used generally and the Hindu language established by the government for national speech has yet to gaio widespread acceptance The use of native languages, which vary greatly from region to region, makes it difficult for students to transfer from one school to another, he explained

In lecturing both undergraduates and graduate students here, Mavlankr expects to discuss such problems as industrial development and ways of increasing per capita income, as well as the varied economic systems of the Oriental countries.

Expressing the hope [illegible] valuable cultural interchange take place through his [illegible] with Americans, he said bo[illegible] tures should be mutually en[illegible]

"Much of Asia's future d[illegible] on the outcome of the Ind[illegible] periment," the educator dec[illegible]

SOCIALISM

Stressing that India's dem[illegible]tic socialism hopes to a[illegible] socialism through peaceful [illegible]mocratic means, Mavlank[illegible] plained this would mean [illegible] even distribution of wealth [illegible] out infringement on ind[illegible] freedoms.

Discussing India's plac[illegible] world divided ioto two [illegible] blocs, the lecturer said the [illegible] nation must follow ao ind[illegible]ent positioo and show tha[illegible] not necessary to be either [illegible] against either aide.

"We are on the aide of [illegible] truth, and justice That is [illegible] we have to convince p[illegible] about," he remarked.

[Tw]o Bills Passed

Campaign, Precinct Rules Altered At Senate Meeting

By VIRGINIA DELAVAN
Assistant News Editor

The Student Senate, in anticipation of the general election set for October 21, [pass]ed two bills Wednesday which will alter past campaigning and precinct regu[latio]ns.

The usual first reading of both bills was waived to allow the new rules to take [effect] before campaigning begins October 14.

[Bill] oumber one placed three restrictions on posting of [campa]ign materials and fixed a [scale] of three fines for viola[tions]. The fourth violation will [result] in automatic disqualifica[tion] of the candidate.

[Ca]mpaign literature may not [occu]py space under any cir[cum]stances before 5 p.m. on the [day] campaigning is set to be[gin]. This measure was felt nec[essary] to give all candidates [equa]l exposure of campaign ma[terial].

VIOLATIONS

[In] accordance with Tallahas[see] city ordinances, no posters [may] be placed on city property, [inclu]ding sidewalks and trees. [Viol]ations of these ordinances [have] occurred before, but ac[cordi]ng to Men's Vice President [...] Apthorp, last year was the [first] time the city had received [comp]laints from residents.

[Al]so, to post material on pri[vate] property, including The [...]er, the Mecca, Bill's Book [Stor]e and fraternity and sorority [hous]es, the candidate must ob[tain] the consent of the property [own]er.

[Th]e following fines were set [...] first offense, $1; second of[fens]e, $3, third offense, $10. The [Secre]tary of Elections, Sandra [Rose]nberg, and her elections [com]mittee will be on the alert [for] violations and disqualify [cand]idates with four violations.

[Pr]ecincts 13-16 were realigned [by t]he Senators and one new [...]ion precinct was created, [maki]ng the total of such voting [...]s to 17.

EQUAL DIVISION

[Th]e groundwork on this bill [was] done by Miss Rosenberg and [Atto]rney General Gerry Gordon. [The] new set-up provides more [equa]l division of the five pre[cincts] which include all the [sorori]ty and fraternity groups.

[An]other factor in the move [was] the moving and construc[tion] of several Greek houses in [diff]erent areas from their sites [in 1]956, when the last reappor[tion]ment was made.

[In] addition to these major [acti]ons, Senate also:

Women Top Men In Grade Averages

By DON SCOTT
Flambeau Staff Writer

The campus grade averages for last semester are out, and the women did it again all the way around.

Both the overall women's average and the sorority average were above the general student average, while the men's average and fraternity average were below the student average.

The three sororities and three fraternities with top scholarship averages were, Zeta Tau Alpha, 2.9; Kappa Alpha Theta, 2.8; Pi Beta Phi, 2.8, and Lambda Chi Alpha, 2.4; Sigma Chi, 2.3; and Phi Kappa Tau, 2.3. The all sorority average was 2.7 and the all fraternity average was 2.2, while the all student average was 2.5.

The women also averaged higher than men on an all student basis. The women's average was 2.7 and the men's average was 2.4. The undergraduate women's average was 2.6 and the undergraduate men's average was 2.3.

By classes the figures stacked up like this, seniors were on top with 2.8; juniors were next with 2.6, sophomores next with 2.4; and freshmen last with 2.1.

What does all of this mean? It simply means that some students, namely the men in general, aren't studying as they should. Dr. R. R. Oglesby, Dean of Students, thinks the fellows haven't disciplined themselves enough to the point where they make average or better grades. Men students, especially freshmen, should seriously consider just why they are here, and realize that studying is the most important occupation at college, stated Oglesby.

Dr. Donald Loucks, Dean of Men, agreed that freshmen students don't study as hard as they should. "Normally, consistency is a jewel, but the fact that the overall average for freshmen students was 1.90 during the fall semester and 1.91 during the spring semester brings little comfort to those of us interested in academic achievements of our students," he said. (Three successive semesters with below "C" average results in academic suspension from the university.)

"That this freshman overall average was lowest of the four classes is not in itself surprising. But it is rather distressing to note that that this average is below 'C'. I urge every freshman student to get off to a good start this fall by preparing and following a strict study schedule," he added.

In contrast, Miss Katherine Warren, Dean of Women, had a word of commendation for the women on campus. The figures show that all women's averages, except those of freshman women, were above the all student average.

The women have very good study conditions in the dorms, noted Miss Warren, because it is kept quiet at night and the women are free from interruption. "I think they (women students) deserve a commendation for seeming to put first things first, since we are here primarily for scholarship."

HOUSING SHORTAGE BRINGS CRAMPED QUARTERS—These men, victims of the current Florida State University housing shortage are living in what used to be the library at West Hall. They are shown here studying, sleeping and dressing.

Fewer 'Homeless' Than Last Year

By NANCY GENE BROWN
Flambeau News Editor

Students are still living in emergency housing, according to Dr. Jack Rollow, Florida State University director of housing.

However, these students, currently living in lounges and libraries in Florida, Cawthon, Landis, Senior and West Halls, should be placed in permanent residences, Rollow continued.

As compared to a total of 125 students living in emergency housing at the beginning of last year, only 60 had to be housed on this basis this year, Rollow stated. Some of last year's "emergencies" stayed in such locations for the entire first semester, he continued, this year, however, they should receive permanent room assignments "within the near future."

"Our guess has been correct that we will have enough loss of students to allow those people now in temporary housing to be housed," Rollow said.

Living conditions for these students are relatively comfortable, he pointed out. Rooms are equipped with clothes racks, double-deck bunks, study tables, and dressers, with extra study areas easily accessible.

MAID SERVICE

"They (the men in temporary housing) get maid service twice a week," Rollow stated, on the same basis as men in permanent housing.

Also still facing a lack of housing facilities are a few married students. The housing office is still working to help alleviate this situation.

Dr. Rollow outlined plans currently under way to alleviate future housing problems. However, he said that "we can't possibly take care of the expected increase in enrollment with the housing now under construction."

Now going up are two dormitories, one for men and one for women. Rollow pointed out that by next fall, FSU will experience a natural increase in its enrollment of 200 to 300, or a large enough demand to fill the new dorms.

$8½ MILLION

The university expects to spend 6½ million dollars within the next five years, providing accommodations for a total of 1,140 men and 270 women, 256 apartments for married students, and residence hall quarters for 200 graduate students.

But the anticipated enrollment of 10,500 by 1965 is expected to overflow university housing facilities again at that time—even if the state does approve the university's construction program.

Projected enrollment figures—6,300 by 1960 and 10,500 by 1965—are made on the assumption that the two new state universities and 20 new junior colleges will be in operation within the next few years. Another basis for the estimates is that there will be no major changes in university entrance requirements.

Georgia Grid Ducat Sale Starts Oct. 6

Tickets for the Georgia-Florida State game in Jacksonville October 11 may be purchased beginning October 6 at 1 p.m. at the Westcott ticket office. Student tickets are two dollars each with coupon no. three and guest tickets are four dollars each.

A ticket booth will be located outside the Student Center Friday afternoon. Tickets may be obtained at the Men's Gymnasium until 1 p.m. Saturday.

Tickets for the Wake Forest-FSU game will go on sale Monday at 1 p.m. in Westcott and the ticket office in the Men's Gymnasium.

Students will use activity book coupon no. one for free tickets to the game, and coupon no. two for guests. Guest tickets are priced at two dollars each.

For the University of Florida-FSU game November 22, the price is two dollars with coupon no. ten. Opening sales dates for tickets to this event will be announced within the next two weeks.

Students should purchase tickets as early as possible in order to obtain good seats, said Eddie Cubbon, athletic business manager.

Navy Sponsors New Nurse Program Here

Dean Vivian Duxbury has announced a new program sponsored by the Navy Nurse Corps that will enable Florida State University Nursing students planning a Navy Nursing career to obtain their senior year's education without personal expense.

"The basic collegiate student in her final year," Dean Duxbury said, "is eligible for enrollment and under this plan will not commit herself for more active duty after graduation than the nurse who had financed her own education and wanted a commission in the Navy Nurse Corps."

Dean Duxbury also stated that the Army has had a similar program for the past three years which enables a student planning to enter the Army Nurse Corps to receive financial support in her last two years of education.

Elaine Greiser and Faith Sterling are now entering their junior year under the Army Nurse program and are beginning their clinical experience assignment this fall.

Mrs. Lois Selvaggi, assistant professor of nursing, is faculty coordinator for the students. They will be taught and supervised by university faculty at all times.

Marching Chiefs Featured At Football Game

Florida State's Marching Chiefs, 120 strong, will hold a "Southern Jubilee" in Atlanta tonight during halftime ceremonies of the Georgia Tech-FSU clash at Grant Field.

Under the direction of Manley Whitcomb, the Chiefs will open with a drill to the music of "Rampart Street Parade." They will also present a "Quickie Minstrel Show" featuring a team dance by Dee Rivers and Sister Warwick.

A softshoe specialty by eight Seminole majorettes, a sliding trombone novelty, a grand promenade and salutes to FSU and Georgia Tech are on the program.

The Chiefs, who have appeared on several nationally-televised shows also are scheduled to perform at the FSU-Georgia game in Jacksonville October 11 and the first Florida State-Florida meeting in Gainesville November 22.

Tickets Only Function Of Westcott

Mrs. Ruth Tate, chairman of the Westcott Ticket Agency, has announced that the only function of the ticket booth this semester will be to handle tickets to all student events.

Students must go to the Special Events office, room 15, Longmire, to obtain their activity books. The activity book coupons then must be exchanged for reserve tickets at the office in Westcott.

Activity book coupons can be exchanged for tickets to the remaining football games, all Artist Series programs, all theatre productions, the Light Opera Guild production and all basketball games.

"Students must have tickets for these events," Mrs. Kathryn Vernon, Special Events chairman, stressed. "Activity book coupons will not serve as substitutes."

In addition to special events, Mrs. Vernon's office will handle all reserve space on campus, excluding classroom space, which is still being arranged through the registrar's office.

RUSHING ACTIVITIES TO END MONDAY

The final activities of fraternity and sorority rush will be held today through Monday.

Men's formal rush will be officially concluded this afternoon with issuance of bids by the respective fraternities.

A total of 375 men turned out for the 500 available positions during men's rush which began last Thursday.

WOMEN END

Some 725 women conclude their visits tonight in the sixteen sorority open-house parties. Invitational parties begin tomorrow and continue through Monday evening. A day of silence and signing of preferential cards Tuesday will be followed by the receiving of bids and pledging on Wednesday. According to Jean Hunter, Panhellenic President, there are only 343 places to be filled.

Rushees should remember, said Miss Hunter, that all parties are of equal importance, that they are expected to pay for their meals, and that no favors should be taken from sorority houses. Also, they are allowed to have only one date with any one chapter tomorrow and Monday, but may attend two parties at the same house on Sunday.

RUSHEE HELPERS

Helping the rushees through their first two nights of formal receptions are representatives from all sororities.

They are Susie Hay, Clarice Cock, Kay Taylor, Pat Wilson, Linda Sherman, Judy Smith, Patty Miller, Mary Powel, Roslyn Anderson, Jeannine Graham, Carol Traylor, Martha Frazier, Dagmar Jones, Suzanne Slappey, Mary Beth Roberts, and Sandra Stewart. These counselors lose all identity of sorority affiliation until they have completed their duties.

Foreign Students Tour Library

Miss Higgs of the Library School has announced that there will be a tour of the Library for the foreign students tomorrow morning. The students will meet in the library at 9 a.m.

Former Co-ed Holds Recital

Soprano Alice Eddins will present her graduate recital in Opperman Music Hall Monday evening beginning at 8 15 p.m.

Mrs. Eddins has returned to FSU from Jacksonville, where she has been teaching since her graduation in 1953. She is now studying for her Masters degree in voice.

The concert will include selections by Mozart, Schubert, Brahms, and Menotti, with Puccini's Un bel di, from the opera Madam Butterfly, highlighting the program.

Mrs. Eddins will be accompanied by Roy Henry Johnson.

Roles Still Open For Speech Play

A few parts are still available in the Speech Department's fall production of "Ring around the Moon" said Mr. Richard Fallon, production director.

Auditions were held Tuesday and Wednesday nights with callbacks last night. The rehearsals will begin tonight at 7 30 p.m. in Conradi Theater. Anyone especially interested in acting in this production is asked to be present tonight.

Backstage workers are needed for this play and anyone desiring to help may see Mr. Fallon at rehearsal tonight or at his office in the History Building during the day.

This musical comedy to be presented October 23, 24, and 25, will have a cast of 15 persons.

1958 Tally-Ho's Still Available

Reserved copies of last year's Tally Ho will be held until Oct. 3 for those who had pictures made or registered for copies, according to Don Talmon, publications business manager.

Hours for distribution Monday through Friday will be 3-5 p.m. in Room 20 Longmire. After Oct. 6 copies will be sold for $1 on a first come, first served basis.

Students who have not registered for the 1959 edition should do so between Sept. 29 and Oct. 1 from 3 to 5 p.m.

Music Group Open To All

Membership in Sigma Alpha Iota, professional music fraternity, is open to all women students even though they are not in the School of Music, according to Aurelia Pitts, membership chairman.

To be eligible for rush, non-music students must have taken twelve hours of music and have a 3.0 average in music and a 2.5 overall average.

Those interested who have the qualifications should see Miss Pemberton in the School of Music Office.

Dance Group Holds Tryouts

Theatre Dance Group tryouts will be held in the dance studio of the Women's Gymnasium on Oct. 2, 1958 from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m., according to Nancy Adams, publicity chairman.

ONE OF THE TWO NEW women's graduate students houses that the university acquired is the former Kappa Delta House at 318 S. Copeland. The houses will provide quarters for 41 graduate students.

The Big Disappearance

There's been a mysterious disappearance on campus this week.

Know what's missing? It's rat caps.

A WEEK AGO today you could walk around campus and you were literally in a sea of them. Today, anyone found wearing one is laughed at and told "he doesn't know what the score is."

Anyway, we're wondering why the disappearance

IT'S NOT THE fault of the freshmen. A freshman boy will get rid of his telltale cap just as soon as he deems it safe. And while a gal might look cute with one on, it soon becomes bothersome.

So, it's probably the fault of the would-be enforcers—the sophomores.

BUT THE SOPHOMORES needn't feel bad. They are not the only class unable to keep rat caps on the freshmen heads after Orientation Week ended. In fact, we doubt that any class can claim success at this.

It takes a lot of planning and work to make a really good Rat program. And classes tend to interfere with this work.

ALL OF WHICH poses the question, "Need Rat Week be extended after Orientation Week?"

From past experience, the answer would seem to be "No."

BUT IT'S YOUR question, frosh. Within a year you'll be wearing those ominous looking "sludge" armbands and throwing terror into the hearts of pretty freshmen girls.

Can you make next year's frosh do what you didn't do?

Help USF Now

Two of our better known state dailies are engaged in an editorial argument which seems to have all the bearings of Florida's perennial sectional conflict.

The argument concerns the money being used to build the new University of South Florida in Temple Terrace just outside of Tampa. The State Legislature in their last session voted $8,500,000 to begin construction of that institution.

THE STATE BOARD of Control last spring put that project very high on its priority list. At the same meeting the Board authorized the construction of new buildings at other state universities, including the three under construction here.

The new buildings—at both the new and established universities — were expected to be financed by a broadening of the sales tax voted by the Legislature.

NOW IT SEEMS the revenue from the tax hasn't lived up to pre-passage estimates due to legal loopholes, the recession, etc.

The state cabinet now doubts whether even $134,000 can be appropriated to USF to fill the land and establish a firm foundation for the new school.

Monday Tha Tallahassee Democrat suggested editorially that the state's limited money supply cnuld best be used by adding onto the already present universities in Gainesville and Tallahassee.

SUCH ADDITIONS, they said, would be able to accommodate more students at less expense because of the already existing student services.

This got The Tampa Tribune's dander up. In a reply, they charged The Democrat with speaking for "the vested interests in Gainesville and Tallahassee." North Floridians, The Tribune said, were really interested in keeping the schools in their section for economic reasons.

THE TRIBUNE WENT on to say that a new university was needed in this state and the university should be located near "the mass of people."

The Flambeau agrees that another state university is needed—quickly. For Florida's tremendous population growth shows no sign of any let-up. This means more and more students.

WE ALSO THINK new universities should be located in large population centers. Such location will ease many of the university's problems in housing, supply and other areas.

Because of its constitutional prohibition of debt, Florida will never have an over abundance of money.

Governor Collins and the state cabinet should get the ball rolling on USF now. Any delay will only cause Florida educational pains in the years to come.

Advisor Gone; Help Needed

Since the departure of Miss Joan Guthridge last spring, FSU's post of Foreign Student Advisor has been vacant, leaving some 125 students without a counselor.

The advisor's job is so varied in its demands that it is difficult for one person to cover all parts of it well. Yet, since the minimum number of students for a full time advisor is 250, FSU's counselor will have only a half time job.

NOT ONLY IS the advisor responsible for such technical details as visas, passports, and immigration red tape, but he must also help the students to adjust to campus life.

Those foreign students who leave their country to study abroad are usually the best products of that nation's educational system. They are leaders in both their field of study and their character, but to completely change one's social life, methods of study and surroundings poses a problem even to the most well adjusted.

THE PROBLEMS OF the students are at present being handled by at least four departments on campus. Some of those helping are Dean of Students R. R Oglesby, Miss Elizabeth Lynn of the Dean of Women's office, Dr. J. F. Carr of Financial Aid, Assistant Dean of Men Robert Brewer, and a Senior Assistant, Mildred Stewart.

Even though they are doing the job, they can only solve the immediate problems, and cannot help the foreign student in all the ways an advisor could.

ACCORDING TO DEAN Oglesby, University officials are considering someone for this post, but the possibility of having an advisor soon does not look too promising. Because of the budget, the university cannot issue a salary for any position not filled at the beginning of the fall semester.

There is a foreign student organization, and its chief purpose is to promote better relations between the foreign students and the rest of the campus. This is the International Club that meets every two weeks. This organization hopes to have at least as many American students as foreign in its membership.

As the university cannot be of as much help to foreign students now as in past years, we urge our red-blooded native students to help fill the vacuum and make some friends here.

It is this group which helps keep our campus from having a "provincial" atmosphere

American Tourists Don't Learn

By DIANE GODIN

We all feel that Europe would be terribly educational. This agreed, droves of students go there every year. And most of them go with an attitude one would have visting a zoo or a museum

THEY LOOK, but most can't listen. And when they return, it's "What did you see?" not "what did you say?" Where would they learn to say even "Thank-you" in any other languages.

We all learned "God bless America" the first day we spent as students. We stand pledging "One nation, under God. . . ." And what are the other nations under?

MOST FLAG-WAVING Americans agree that we are way above other nations Yes, Americans are lucky they have so much to be proud of, with our freedom and democracy Too bad about our diplomacy. It won't even work in Little Rock.

This attitude of American superiority is a type of naive nationalism that is constantly being nourished in our not-too-superior educational system. It is outmoded, and even more, it is dangerous

HERE AT FSU the best students from foreign countries are treated more than often as intruders rather than guests We should feel privileged to have such guests.

How many students have taken advantage of their presence to learn something of their customs or religions or to try to converse with them? Seldom over a dozen Americans attend the international club meetings held twice a month . . . There are less than 200 foreign students on campus who are easily ignored by most other students We don't stop to think that it isn't easy for them to ignore all of us.

PHILIP WYLIE, in his book, The Innocent Ambassadors draws a grim picture of the typical American tourist. Most of these tourists consist of the wealthy, middle-aged or over types with nothing more to do than order hamburgers in Venice and a coke in Copenhagen and complain about the lack of conveniences such as public toilets

In the minority are the student tourists, but Wylie seems to feel that they are our only chance to become a more welcome and less obnoxious visitor abroad.

WE AMERICANS are opportunists Let's not lose this one, which is possibly more vital than sending up another rocket.

It is becoming more and more expensive to travel abroad Too bad that typically American we consider the expense as only monetary.

Movie Review

Cat On A Hot Tin Roof Here Until Wednesday

By JOHN HULL

Cat on a Hot Tin Roof, starring Elizabeth Taylor, Paul Newman, Burl Ives, Judith Anderson, and Madeline Sherwood, Presently playing a week's run at the Florida Theater.

Bottles, beds, money, old football acquaintances and money keynote Tennessee Williams' Cat On a Hot Tin Roof. The plot is of a serious nature—mainly a shaky marriage, a dying man with ten million dollars, and a money hungry son with a productive wife (five kids with another in process).

Placed in a 28,000-acre Mississippi plantation a touch of the "Old South" "Big Daddy" (Burl Ives) returns to straighten but his family and die.

BRICK (Paul Newman) a failure at pro-football, doesn't want his luscious wife (Liz Taylor) or Big Daddy's bankroll—only the bottle with the proo mark, 'xxx'

Jack Carson (known as Gooper) evidently a populace builder at the advice of BD, and wife with all of those kids, have plans for BD's dough involving their future prosperity

Brick's big kick with Maggie (wife) is reminiscent of his old pigskin buddy It seems Brick had idealized one of his old college ball friends enough to put together a pro team which fizzed up North

ACCORDING TO OUR BOY Brick, Maggie had seen too much of his associate (or vice versa) in a hotel room. Secondly Brick's buddy took the big step out of the hotel room window after this assignation with Maggie (some girl)

Big Daddy, intent on straightening out Brick, Maggie, and their marriage so he can give them the money, can't decide whether he likes his family or people for that matter but reaches an agreement with Brick for a happy ending which goes "I ain't afraid of dying if you're not afraid of living" Somehow Goodper and May aren't so happy about this little reunion

BIG MAMA (everybody's big) being somewhat of a philosopher doesn't trust a man who doesn't drink (BD does) and believes that when a marriage goes on the rocks the trouble can be found in the bed.

The movie although written by Williams has the ring of William Faulkner due to its setting and the type people

The color and scenery is outstanding all backed up with a strong cast.

Faculty Doesn't Park While Students Can't

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to make some comments concerning the parking conditions this semester.

As most of the upperclassmen here realize upon returning to school this fall, all the parking spaces available on the circle around Westcott have been reserved for the faculty.

All of us realize that the faculty must have places to park, but is it fair to give them more spaces proportionately than the students and above all the best spaces

Already I have noticed that there are spaces available in front of Science Hall that alone proves that the faculty does not need them

I spend an average of 16 hours a day in Science Hall but can I park in front of it—NO!

The solution would be to revert to the system used in the past. Let the first come be first served

Activity Fee May Be Raised Next Year

By MARK AUSTIN

HERE'S THE NEWS: This time next year you may be pa[ying] $90—instead of $75—for your registration fees.

And here's the story behind the news: Far-seeing Student Body President Art Moore has been doing some research. And he has found that FSU registration fees are far below that of the average southern university.

This means trouble.

Proof of some of the problems we are in for was brought up in the Student Senate late last year, when the Senators showed that with the rising cost of operating expenses, and with no more money coming into the student activity fund . . . well, something has got to go Last year two issues of Smoke Signals went.

What's it going to be this year?

Art has a strong point here —either get more money, or cut more activities — but there is a stronger point that's worrying him.

And that is the new student union. It's going to a beautiful thing — indoor — outdoor swimming pool, bowling hall, theatre —show place of the South, they say

ONLY TROUBLE, we don't have the ten percent down the government says we must have to start building. And there is no way to get it.

Except raise the student fees.

I say Art has the right idea. The bulk of our money goes for cost of living at college not for the fees. And an extra fifteen bucks multiplied by 7,000 students twice a year means a lot of student activities

I say Art is right There is only one place in which I disagree. The fees should go [to] $105.

Gates Not Opened By Starke's Admission

By HERB SCHMUCK

Last weekend, before I interviewed George Starke, (Negro [law] student at the University of Florida) I had the opportunity to t[alk] to Floyd Yaeger. Yaeger, 28, is a recent graduate of the U of [F] law school.

We talked mostly about the significance of the acceptance [of] the Orlando Negro to the university Is the admission of Sta[rke] a prelude to total integration of a prominent Florida universi[ty]

WE THINK NOT. George Starke is twenty-seven years old [...] veteran, and, in every sense of the word, a mature individual

Maturity, the point which I shall dwell on for a moment, [is a] prime factor in the Starke case When an individual attains w[hat] may be termed professional maturity, he is no longer easily s[us]ceptible to the influence of society

THAT IS, he is more engrossed in himself or his own perso[nal] endeavors and less concerned with what everybody else thinks [or] does

Starke, I believe, has achieved this status of maturity He [is] not the proverbial racial demagogue type but still believes in [his] rights as an American and a human being

THE STAFF AND faculty of the U of F have also obser[ved] this That is why Starke was admitted. It would have been q[uite] simple for the university to detain Starke's acceptance if [it] really wanted to

Mr. Yaeger thinks that this type of maturity cannot be [ac]complished in the South on the undergraduate level by either Ne[gro] or white students. Therefore he concludes that integration [on] this level is something possible but not probable for many year[s].

IF THE GEORGE STARKE case proves to be successful, [we] can be assured that some of the other graduate schools at Flor[ida] will be integrated in the future.

Integration on the public school level is another story [en]tirely It is here we must concede that a real problem exists [in] the South

The Supreme Court seems to believe that what has taken [the] North decades to adjust to can be achieved in the South imme[di]ately. But this, as I have said, is another story.

Should U.S. Fight Over Chinese Islands

BY

CHARLES GUTHRIE

Who are the rightful owners of Quemoy and Matsu?

Red China? Nationalist China? The United States?

THE QUESTION of the ownership of Quemoy and Matsu, whether rightful or not, lies in the fact that it will be done so at the point of a gun. Who is willing to fight? Are we? Will we?

After losing the battle on the mainland, Chiang and his gang of loyalists were pushed into the China Sea What with military defeats, Communist infiltration in his regime and lack of public sympathy, Chiang sailed to his island retreat and concentrated on licking his wounds for the next few years. After recuperation, he planned a comeback to free those on the mainland, who from reports are living better than they ever have.

Now there was two China's. However, one thing Red Boss Mao Tse-Tung and Nationalist leader Chiang agreed on — there should be only one China. But which one?

CHIANG HAS PROMISED the people of China liberation from the crushing rule of Communism. But even a gallant man like Chiang can see that he is going to need help in this awe inspiring task His help—the United States

At the present time the United States is engaged as actively as possible without using their own fighting men in this crisis of puppets If an invasion [of] Quemoy and Matsu were [to] take place, would the Un[ited] States intervene? No! Even [a] heroic brief case toting sta[tes]man would try to make a d[...] probably an un-interesting [...] as far as Mao and the [...] headed bearer of good tid[ings] are concerned.

IF MILITARY INTERVENTION is taken by the Un[ited] States in the Quemoy-Ma[tsu] crisis, this country will not [only] be branded as an aggressor [by] the Communist world, but [also] by the United Nations. [The] United Nations has no cho[ice] the facts are plainly and e[vi]dently stacked against [this] country.

The pact which the Un[ited] States has with Formosa cle[ar]ly states that this country [will] only defend Formosa if [the] need arises. There is no men[tion] of Quemoy and Matsu

WILL THE UNITED STATES intervene? No! It is clea[rly] evident then that Quemoy a[nd] Matsu should and will be a p[art] of the Communist Peoples R[e]public.

Will the Red Chinese s[...] at the islands? For the prese[nt] yes. Although safe in a co[n]quest on Quemoy and Ma[tsu] Mao and his gang of thugs w[ill] find rough going in a sim[ilar] attempt on Formosa.

When and if Red China at[tacks] Formosa, the Un[ited] States will fight probably w[ith] results like the Korean fa[...] but we will give them th[eir] money's worth, you can bet [on] that.

Football guessperts all over the country who have even heard Florida State, feel that tonight's clash with Georgia Tech will the turning point in the Tribe's "suicide" schedule.

These pigskin prognosticators feel that an FSU victory over Yellow Jackets might act as a shot in the arm to the Seminoles enable them to go on and defeat some of the other toughies the schedule.

The consensus of opinion seems to be that FSU will take ll five games and lose the five away. This is reasonable since the Tribe meets the most rugged teams—Tech, Tennessee, Georgia, Miami and Florida—on the road.

Some say that the Seminoles may knock off one of the big but just which one it will be is hard to decide.

From here, it looks like Georgia Tech will have too many horses the Seminoles to handle. Last season was supposed to have Tech's rebuilding year and as a result should have a well soned club this year.

Kentucky didn't take this into consideration last Saturday n it downed the Yellow Jackets, 14-0, but we feel that the loss only make the Ramblin' Wrecks work harder against the minoles

It's not often that a team coached by Bobby Dodd loses two ames in a row.

Georgia's line might prove too big for the Seminoles to run ough and Miami's untested, but potentially powerful backfield. be too much for the FSU defense.

How about Florida? Well, if the Seminoles do upset the Gators ll be the greatest thing since vanilla ice cream.

That leaves only Tennessee. We feel that if FSU whips any he big five it will be the Orangemen of Knoxville.

The Vols line is about as light as the Tribe's and Coach den Wyatt lost ten of his eleven starters through graduation st might be the Seminoles' meat.

The only advantage that Tennessee will have over the Tribe hat it uses the single wing offense. Most of the men on FSU ense have never played against a single wing in college. That ans they will have to really prepare themselves for this game.

'S ALL GUESSWORK

Keep this in mind however, all predictions are pure and simple sswork. This is especially true in FSU's case. When you have angerous passer like Joe Majors who can throw for the winning chdown in a matter of a few seconds, no game is a cinch.

Or who knows when Bob Renn may spot some daylight gh a big line and streak all the way for a score?

It's improbable—no, impossible—that anyone can say for sure s going to win what game and when.

OTES FROM HOGANVILLE

FSU's ambitious sports publicity director, Pat Hogan, has mpiled the following tidbits of information that might give you few different angles on the football picture.

Georgia Tech surrendered only one touchdown in six games at Grant Field last season. Georgia got it in a 7-0 season-ending verdict, after the Jackets had blanked Kentucky, SMU tie, Duke, Florida (tie), and lost to national champion Auburn n a field goal.

Three Seminoles are batting 1.000 in statistical departments. nny Sheppard, the Tallahassee extra-point specialist, has 6 for ough two games, running his career total to a sparkling 36 40. Senior quarterback Vic Prinzi has attempted and made double" extra points and sophomore quarterback Bobby Con- as connected on all four passes he's thrown.

For the second game in a row, sophomore guard Terry Moran d Seminole tacklers. Seeing limited action against Furman, the 5-pound New Orleans product had four individual stops and ree assists, running his two-game chart to 11 solos and four lping hands.

In 10 games last season, 15 Seminoles carried the ball at least trip. After two games this campaign, 16 Florida State backs lugged the ball for a combined rushing average of 5.5 yards 105 running plays.

Six Sophs To Open Against Engineers

With a sophomore-studded lineup, the twice victorious Florida State football team moves into Grant Field in Atlanta tonight to tangle with the Southeastern Conference powerhouse, Georgia Tech.

FSU coach Tom Nugent will have six positions filled by sophs at kickoff time tonight.

The Seminoles' line is comprised of five sophomores and two juniors. Both end positions will be handled by first year varsity men. At left end will be Ron Hinson of Waycross, Ga. who is filling in for the injured junior, Pete Fleming.

The Tampa strongboy, Tony Romeo, is slated to start at the right flank spot. Bob Swoszowski, an Orlando sophomore, will open at left tackle and the team's leading tackler, another soph, Terry Moran, will start at one of the guard spots.

The two juniors in the forward wall, John Spivey and Al Ulmer will start at right tackle and left guard respectively.

Jack Espenship, a Lake City product, is the soph starter in the FSU backfield. Vic Prinzi, a slender senior, will open at the signal-calling post and another senior, Bobby Renn, will run from left half.

Dink Lawrence, the powerful 202 lb fullback will be in his usual spot against the Yellow Jackets.

The Engineers opened their season last week on a losing note as they were downed by Kentucky, 13-0. But, according to pre-season predictions, the Ramblin' Wrecks are still one of the power teams in the SEC this year.

The Tech team is highlighted by a big hard charging line, followed by a "pony" sized, but swift backfield.

The Yellow Jackets are led by junior quarterback Fred Braselton who was the top passer in the SEC last season. Braselton played every minute of every Tech game last year.

Braselton is backed up this season by an outstanding sophomore signal-caller, Walter Howard. In the spring game last season, Howard ran the team like a veteran, and sparkled on offense.

The Tech halfback combination boasts two men who weigh just a little over 170. At left half is Cal James, brother of Auburn's All-America quarterback, Fob James. Frank Nix, a Mississippi scatback holds down the right half position.

Probably the lightest fullback in the SEC is Lester Simerville who only goes 175 lbs. He will be at the power post for the Yellow Jackets tonight.

The bulwark of the Tech line is 212 lb. Maxie Baughan, who will probably see most of his action on defense. Bob Stane (202) and Ted Thomas (198) will be at the tackle spots for Tech.

Jerry Green and Gerald Burch will be at the end posts and will act as targets for Braselton's bullet-like passes. Burch does the punting.

The lightweight Seminoles will have their work cut out for them, as Tech coach Bobby Dodd will probably take advantage of the new liberalized substitution and will use a two unit system.

TECH ALWAYS WINS

In the last meeting between the Yellow Jackets and the Tribe in 1955, Tech came out on the long end of a lopsided 34-0 score. The two teams also met in 1952 when the Engineers took it 30-0.

In 1903 Tech beat FSU 17-0 and in 1904 the Yellow Jackets won again 35-0.

Forty-six Seminoles made the trip to Atlanta, six of them native Georgians. A crowd of 30,000 is expected for the scrap.

GEORGIA TECH'S ACE QUARTERBACK. Fred Braselton will start against the Seminoles tonight in Atlanta.

PRIMITIVE MEDICINE EXHIBIT—Here Charles Guthrie examines an object d'art in the FSU Museum located in the second story of the Seminole Club. The exhibit presently being shown is one on Primitive Medicines and Methods.

'Primitive Medicine' Featured At Museum

The "Primitive Medicine" sign over the door of Florida State University's Seminole Cafeteria has nothing to do with the food served within It pertains to an exhibit of Primitive Medicine upstairs in FSU's museum.

"This exhibit features herb medicines used by aboriginal peoples that are still in use today, such as the Coca Cola nut, a narcotic, used in the drink by the same name," said Dr. Hill Smith, Director.

There are also displays of utensils used in the administrative ceremonies of these peoples.

"Our museum," said Dr. Smith, "is basically experimental We use colored lighting, captions and three dimensions Some of our techniques have never been used before, so we can explore and expand the field of museum exhibition economically."

On Nov. 1, a new exhibition called "Mood" will open "What you get out of the exhibit is created by what your experiences have been up to that point. Each person will view it a different way," concluded Dr. Smith.

Total Enrollment Up Two Hundred

Enrollment for the Fall semester has reached the highest point in the history of Florida State University.

According to figures released by Mr. Charles H. Walker, registrar, total enrollment thus far has reached 7,418, as compared to the final figure of the 1957-58 Fall semester which was 7,203.

Continuing the trend of the past five years male students again outnumber females, with this year's breakdown being 3,992 men to a total of 3,426 coeds.

A slight increase of these figures is expected due to the fact that late registration will continue through October 3.

Placement Office Gets New Room

Things are looking up for 1959's graduates seeking jobs through the Placement Office located in the basement of the Longmire Building

James C. Hardy, placement officer, reports his bureau has acquired a small room next door to the present temporary facilities, and that the acquisition will help alleviate the present crowded conditions

Last year the Office played host to representatives of 125 companies and agencies offering employment to Florida State University students and graduates This was an increase of 25% over the previous year More than half the graduating class was registered with the bureau, seeking help in obtaining job placements.

Calling the present facilities below the minimum requirements, Hardy said the Office cannot offer the necessary privacy and conveniences needed by the students and company representatives.

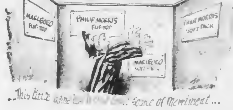
ONCE MORE UNTO THE BREACH

Today begins my fifth year of writing this column, and what an eventful five years it has been! What things have these old eyes not seen! What great discoveries have rocked the world the anti-proton, for instance, and the anti-neutron, and high-low split, and Brigitte Bardot!

In these five years it has also been discovered that American smokers like two kinds of cigarettes filter and non-filter. The Philip Morris Company makes both kinds. I mention the Philip Morris Company because they pay me to mention the Philip Morris Company They sponsor this column. I write it and then they give me money. Then I take the money and pay my grocer, my butcher, my gardener, and my four madrigal singers. In this way full employment is maintained and we avoid a repetition of the Panic of 1873 when bread riots killed over 98 million people in Muncie, Indiana, and millions of others were reduced to ghost-writing Ph. D. theses to keep body and soul together.

But enough of gloom Let us get back to cheerful subjects, like the products of the Philip Morris Company For those of you who wish filter cigarettes there is Marlboro, which now, more than ever, gives you a lot to like a brand new improved filter and a wonderful flavor that comes breezing right through. For those of you who wish non-filter cigarettes, there is Philip Morris, a mild natural blend, flavorful, fresh, and thoroughly agreeable. For those of you who can't decide between filters or non-filters but have an affinity for packages, I should like to point out that both Marlboro and Philip Morris come in both the crushproof Flip-Top Box and the good old-fashioned Soft Pack, and you will surely want several of each for your collection.

Speaking for myself, I smoke both Marlboro and Philip Morris in both packs What I do is make kind of a fun thing out of it. In my bedroom I have four signs, one on each wall, which say in turn, "PHILIP MORRIS—SOFT PACK", "PHILIP MORRIS—FLIP-TOP" "MARLBORO—SOFT PACK" and "MARLBORO—FLIP-TOP". When I get up in the morning I put on a blindfold and then my faithful cat Rover spins me around six times and then, with many a laugh and cheer, I walk forward with my finger outstretched and the first sign I touch is the cigarette I smoke that day!



...This little game is a great source of merriment...

As you can imagine, this little game has been a great source of merriment to Rover and me, except for one untoward incident one morning I was stumbling around in my blindfold and fell out the window right on top of a man named Fred R. Timken, a census taker, and broke all his lead pencils. He was cross as a bear, and though I offered him both Philip Morris and Marlboro in both the Flip-Top Box and Soft Pack, he refused to be mollified. In fact, he refused to put my name down in the census, so when you read population figures of the United States, will you please add one?

But I digress We were speaking of Philip Morris and Marlboro who will bring you this column throughout the school year. In this space I will take up vital aspects of undergraduate life, like high-low split and Brigitte Bardot, and it is my fondest hope that the column will be half as much fun for you as it is for me.

SAEs Bikini Change Not Successful

By Flambeau Staff Writer

Bikini changes right on the French Riviera proved interesting for two SAEs while they were on a ...ng tour through Europe this summer.

Though the French women were quite skilled at ...nging — with only a towel ...pped around them—I'm afraid ... and I have a lot to learn," ...essed Claude Grizzard.

...zzard and Stan Lewis, both ...s majoring in business, at...ed this Bikini changing feat ...g with other interesting ex...ences, such as helping Ger...s celebrate the 80th anniversa... the Heidelburg fire depart... while on a two months' tour ...ropean countries

SAILED JUNE 30

The two men sailed from New ...k harbor aboard the Groote Beer on June 30, after working a month for their parents. Grizzard worked in the production department of Grizzard Advertising Agency in Atlanta, and Lewis painted the house for his mother in Miami.

Aboard the Beer, neither of the SAEs got seasick (though both did on the return trip home). A daily schedule began with eating supper, staying up until breakfast and "partying", sleeping until lunch, and lounging around on deck until supper.

One night, entertainment consisted of the brave southerners raising the Confederate flag up the ship's flag mast, while the 798 other students aboard sang, "Dixie." Incidentally, 600 of the passengers were women students

After nine days on the Beer, the group disembarked at Rotterdam, Holland. Here, the FSUers bought themselves a Volkswagen after a week's tour of this country along with 20 other passengers.

FAIR IMPRESSIVE

The World's Fair in Brussels, the men's first destination upon leaving Holland, was the "most impressive thing in Europe," says Grizzard. "The U. S. pavilion was the best one there, having been constructed for $12 million. It was round with a hole in the top where the rain came through, reflecting on a pool. Around the pavilion were flags of each state," he continued.

Lewis felt that the Russian pavilion was not intended to be impressive as far as beauty is concerned. "It was however intended to show strength and power. This was illustrated by tremendous statues of a male and female workers, five or six times life size, as you entered the pavilion."

From Brussels to Koln, Germany, the travelers went, then continued down the Rhine to Heidelburg and Munich. In Munich, Grizzard and Lewis were able to buy a liter of beer for $.25 or one mark. By now, the connoisseurs of beer knew that the "best beer" is made in Germany (and Denmark).

They'll also frowningly admit ... Spain and Sweden produce the worst beer!

The prettiest women the two had encountered so far on their trip ...ved in the Austrian alps, the men agreed. Copenhagen could also claim some beauties. As for the rest of Austria? Grizzard summed up their feelings, "Vienna is like Washington, D. C. The political influence is quite evident."

While in the Roman Forum in Rome, the adage, "It's a small world" was proven to be quite accurate. Money watchers Grizzard and Lewis decided they weren't going to buy a guide book. And why should they when surely two American women who were also in the Forum, wouldn't mind sharing theirs? The two noble men started talking to their fellow countrymen and one of the women k... staring at Grizzard.

"You're Claude Grizzard," she finally said, and Grizzard was amazed. This woman belonged to the same sorority as his sister, Martha, a 1958 FSU graduate. "I don't remember her name," he shamefully admits. "I'm a stickler for names."

While in Victoria, Spain, Lewis ran into the back of a parked car. Though there were only a few dents in the volkswagen, and none on the other car, the two SAEs were hauled into jail. Lewis knew only a little Spanish, Grizzard, none. Nevertheless, they managed to pay only a $2.50 fine instead of $10. And—were "kicked out" of jail.

Hitchhiking became the mode of transportation after selling the car in Holland. It was while hitching that the two men got

Inter-Faith Council Gives Frosh Picnic

By DELORES LAFFERTY
Flambeau Staff Writer

Freshmen were honored at the third annual picnic at the Reservation presented by the Inter-Faith Council last Saturday afternoon. This was one of the first parties that started the ball rolling for freshmen and upperclassmen activities.

Bryan Hall junior counselors presented a fashion show and tea showing the new students what was appropriate to wear at different campus functions. Lane Gourlie was commentator for the Wednesday afternoon affair. Reynolds Hall presented a similar show with separate floor parties given afterward by the juniors.

Three sororities on campus have new house mothers this year Mrs. Fleta Roubieu, Chi Omega; Mrs. Grace Fifield, Kappa Delta; and Mrs. J. R. Moody, Pi Beta Phi are the new chaperons.

Tallahassee alumnae of Alpha Omicron Pi sorority entertained active members at a picnic supper and social at the home of Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Eichinger, Jr. on Lake Bradford. After a swim and dinner the two groups met for a join business.

The Phi Ma's celebrated their return to school with a night at the Reservation last Thursday. After breakfast was served by the pledges the group returned to campus.

Delta Tau Delta fraternity entertained freshman boys during this week with several dinners and a dance with the music of Lawyer Smith and Jim Thorpe's band. Freshman and sorority girls were invited to entertain the rushees. Chi Omega and Kappa Delta sororities staged skits as part of the entertainment.

The SAE's and their dates started the semester with a post-game combo party last Saturday evening. Music was provided by Billy Bowles and the Devilaires

Artist Series Sets 'Candide' To Be Opener

Voltaire's Candide and Shakespeare's "The Ages of Man" are two of the five University Artist Series presentations forthcoming this year, offering students a variety of intellectual entertainment.

Following Candide, October 22, and "The Ages of Man" December 12, the Series will present The National Ballet of Canada January 15, The Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra March 2, and George London, Metropolitan Opera baritone, on April 9

Candide will be presented in musical form, based on the Broadway production, with the two stars repeating their Broadway roles.

After performing at the Edinburgh Festival last year, Sir John Gielgud will perform in Shakespeare's "The Ages of Man", an anthology divided into three portions: Youth, Maturity, and Old Age

The National Ballet of Canada, which played to two packed houses here in 1957, is back with another outstanding performance.

The Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, one of the first ten such orchestras in the country, will bring their ninety pieces to Westcott March 2, under the direction of Max Rudolf, former conductor with the Metropolitan

Winding up the Artist Series presentations for the year is George London, Metropolitan baritone. London has performed both in Europe and America with leading symphony orchestras and on radio and television

Season tickets for these presentations are available until October 10 at the Westcott Ticket office for $9

Circuit Judge Removes Dorm Strike Pickets

Several sheetmetal workers picketed two of the prospective new dormitories at Florida State University last Monday. The men, formerly employed by the Clyde C. Taylor Company and the Florida Sheet Metal Works Incorporated, are members of Local No. 57 of The Sheet Metal Workers International Association.

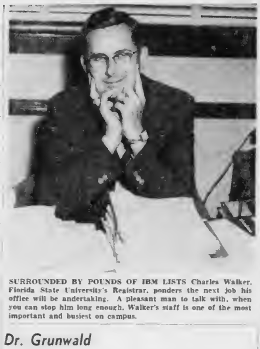
James Dye, attorney for the pickets, said that some of the men were fired by Taylor because of union affiliations. The rest are workers of Florida Sheet Metals have joined the ex-Taylor men in picketing the jobs.

A temporary restraining order forbidding picketing of the FSU jobs was issued by Circuit Judge Hugh Taylor. However, picketing continued at the Penny-Woolworth building in downtown Tallahassee

Dye claims that Taylor has violated the Florida Constitution by firing the men because of their union affiliations. He also added that the men will seek compensation for the time they have been out of work.

A second temporary injunction was issued Tuesday by Circuit Judge Ben C Willis which halted picketing at the Penny-Woolworth building also

The contractors claim that the fact that other jobs are being picketed has created a work stoppage that they say will cause "irreparable" damage with respect to the contract deadlines which have to be met



SURROUNDED BY POUNDS OF IBM LISTS Charles Walker, Florida State University's Registrar, ponders the next job his office will be undertaking. A pleasant man to talk with, when you can stop him long enough. Walker's staff is one of the most important and busiest on campus.

Dr. Grunwald

Chemistry Professor Given ASC Award

The American Chemical Society has chosen Dr. Ernest Grunwald of the Florida State University Chemistry Department to receive its annual award in Pure Chemistry.

The presentation of the award will be made the first week in April when the ACS meets in Boston. The prize includes $1,000 given by Alpha Chi Sigma Fraternity.

The first ACS award was presented to Nobel prize winner Linus Pauling of California Institute of Technology in 1931. The second Nobel winner to receive the award was Glenn T. Seaborg of the University of California at Los Angeles.

PH.D AT UCLA

Dr Grunwald was an instructor at UCLA in 1947, where he earned his Ph.D., he then worked as a chemist for a cement company before coming to FSU in 1949.

He went to Columbia University under the Frank B. Jewett Post - Doctoral Fellowship in 1948, and served as visiting assistant chemist at the Brookhaven National Laboratory in 1950. In 1955 he was awarded the Chaim Weizmann Fellowship for study at the Weizmann Institute of Science in Israel.

Apart from his research in physical-organic chemistry, for which he received the ACS award, Dr Grunwald has published 45 articles on research including a general education textbook on chemistry with Dr. Russell Johnson.

FROM GERMANY

Since coming to FSU, Dr. Grunwald, a native of Wappertal, Germany, has received research grants from the Research Corporation, the Office of Ordnance Research, Office of Naval Research, the Naval Science Foundation, the Sloan Foundation, and the Air Force office of scientific research.

The ACS said the Award in Pure Chemistry is given for "research of unusual merit for an individual on the threshold of his career. Special consideration is given to independence of thought and the originality shown in the research."

their real impression of Europe.

"The Europeans are more civilized than we think," Grizzard commented. "It's not necessary to take a two months supply of tooth paste. Also, the countries are more economically sound than we Americans give them credit."

Lewis' funds were running low by the time the two reached Copenhagen, so only Grizzard went on to Stockholm by train to see the European track championships. Lewis stayed in a youth hostel for only $.30 a night the few days his companion was gone.

Grizzard hitched back to Copenhagen following the tournament. "The one disadvantage to hiking was that I got rides only to the edge of towns and had to walk through all the small towns and villages."

The two, up-to-their-usual-tricks, SAEs did not sail back to the United States on Sepaember 6 without one more experience added to their souvenirs and memories: they unbolted a toilet and ran it upt he flag mast

Registrar's Post No Bed Of Roses

By PAT SENN
Flambeau Staff Writer

Florida State University's registrar's office has you coming or going. And heading up its scores of files, IBM cards, and 38 personnel is registrar Charles Walker.

Each year FSU students have at least four direct contacts with the work of Mr. Walker and his staff. They send out pink slips, grade sheets, and keep the permanent records of students' grades. They handle admissions, registration, and "selective retentions."

They even sponsor a visitation program to high schools in order to encourage new students; plus managing the selective service and veteran relationship between campus males and Uncle Sam. In their "spare" time they also manage transfers, transcripts to other [illegible] qualifications for graduation, etc.

[illegible] alker is a soft-spoken southerner with an easy smile. He's a tall man, but it's the unexpected flash of his piercing blue eyes that you notice first.

DEEP INTEREST

While waiting for Mr. Walker to finish a phone call, you get an inkling of his deepest in[illegible] you spot the school pictures of three children under the glass on his desk. He's fondest of speaking of his wife Lois, whose talents range from serving as president of the faculty wife's club last year to teaching 19 piano students and serving as organist for First Baptist Church.

Then comes 13-year-old Ann, a member of the Florida High band; ten-year-old Carolyn, who serves as violinist for the family; and 8-year-old Edwin whom Dad brings to see the FSU football game

Highlighting the whole summer was their three-week tent and sleeping bag camping trip

"Tallahassee is the most wonderful place to raise a family of any place I've ever seen," commented Mr Walker. Later he told of his increased anticipation for the gretaness of FSU in the future.

LIKES TO COOK

Being Sunday School Superintendent and a deacon at First Baptist Church doesn't leave too much spare time for hobbies, but Mr. Walker lays claims to being a well received chef at home. He and his wife also enjoy attending the Tuesday night film previews between PTA meetings and other obligations

Mr. Walker came to FSU as assistant registrar in July of 1948, from Cumberland University where he was registrar and assistant professor of psychology. He was promoted to his present position two years later.

He was overseas with the army during 1943-1945, but returned to school to receive his Master's in administration and psychology at George Peabody University

Freshman Candidates Begin Filing Today

Four Students Share Lead In Speech Play

By DEANNA MORRIS
Flambeau Staff Writer

Four students share the ad in Jean Anouilh's Ring Around the Moon, first Speech Department production of the semester.

Chosen at tryouts last Thursday and Friday, they Stanley DeHart, Cay Cranford, Susan Caffrey, Jean Hayden.

Opening on Oct. 23, Ring Around the Moon will continue three nights

The play is directed by Mr. Richard Fallon of the Speech Department.

WHOLE CAST

The entire cast includes: Stanley DeHart, Hugo and Frederic; Ralph Black, Joshua; Cay Cranford, Diana; Susan Caffrey, Madame Demortes; Jean Hayden, Isabel.

George Goldstein, Patrice; Barbara Rush, Capulat; Steve Kleid, Messerschmann; Bill King, Romainville; and Barbara Speisman, Mother.

Also included are: Jane Seymour, Lady India; Jerry Leverett, General; and Beverly Davenport, Footman.

"DIFFERENT TYPE"

Jean Anouilh is also the author of Antigone and Time Remembered which, starring Helen Hayes, recently had a successful run on Broadway. The play was translated by Christopher Fry, who is himself a playwright of renown.

The central figure in the play, a ballet dancer, falls in love with the lead. The title expresses her feeling of one in love.

A "different type of comedy," the play spoofs the inconsistency of love. The lead (Stanley DeHart) plays the part of identical twin brothers, who are often confused with each other.

LOVE CHARADE

It is a charade with music on the general theme of love. The whole play revolves around a ball. The common aspects of love, the adventurous, the ultra-romantic, the melancholy, are made fun of in the resolution of the love affairs

The style and theme are parallel to Twelfth Night, known also as What You Will, by Shakespeare

An air of charming abandon is set with the use of music, comedy, and original staging. Charles Reimer is responsible for designing the set

Piano accompaniment will be provided by Robert E. Glotzbach of the School of Music.

Tally-Ho Picks New Editors

Managing Editor, Helen Wheeler; Photographer, Dick Parks; Business Manager, Don Talmon; Assistant Business Manager, Jean Magill; Photography Editor, Harriet L. Engle; Class Editors, Janet Davis and Nancy Bates.

Greek Editors, Nat Hobbs and Monty Gillham; Sports, Bob Me...; Campus Events, Tile Guin...; Beauty Editor, Lynn LaGrange; Exchange Editor, June Roberts; Literary Advisor, Evie Morris; Advertising Manager, ...i Shesrouse.

Chi O's Celebrate Golden Anniversary

Chi Omega sorority will celebrate its 50th year on campus next weekend by presenting a $500 loan scholarship to Florida State University

President Robert M. Strozier will be present to receive the scholarship from Bonnie Tapley, active chapter president, at the Saturday morning presentation ceremony.

Mrs. Elizabeth Dyer, national president, will be among the alumnae visiting here for the weekend. Friday the alumnae members will meet at various Tallahassee alumnae homes for a reunion.

After the ceremony a coffee will be given in honor of the group's president, Mrs. Dyer and the alumnae. Deans of each school of the university and other faculty members have been invited for the affair.

Chi Omega was founded nationally in 1895 and on this campus in 1908.

All God's Chillun Got Shoes

NOT A SHOE SALE, but pairs of flats left in front of a sorority house during rush Friday night. Most girls walked from house to house in flats, but wore heels to the parties.

Pledging Tomorrow

Lone Male Joins In Sorority Rush

By MIKE ANGELOTTI
Flambeau Staff Writer

With the issuance of bids at Longmire tomorrow afternoon, and pledging ceremonies at the individual houses early tomorrow evening, women's rush activities will be formally concluded.

Actually being present during rush in some sorority houses as an observer and a mock participant in others, instilled in me a point of view seldom available to most men

The fact of being a male attending feminine rush was unique in itself, but the fact that I derived more from it than the mere pleasure of being in the midst of so many beautiful women is astounding.

"RUSH" APT TERM

Joining a congregation of rushees enroute to a party Friday night, the delusion that "rush" is a word picked at random to describe the affair soon dissolved itself. It is as appropriate a description as "dark" is of night.

A total of ten visits to ten different houses were made by the individual groups, each meeting lasting 15 minutes, with five minutes in between. The campus terrain, pressure of time, and primping for the next house made the trips from house to house about as reserved as Elvis singing "Jailhouse Rock."

STREWN SHOES

But the female animal, not to be slighted by the nature of things, came prepared. Probably their greatest boon was the extra pair of "walking shoes" they carried. The changing of footwear was quite a ceremony, heels inside and flats outside. This should account for the mass of shoes strewn on the sorority lawns this past week

Particularly impressive were the beauty and warmth of the houses and congeniality of the hostesses, which literally radiated throughout—a true example of what can be accomplished by working together to achieve a mutual aim

BUSINESS??

Were I of the female gender, the desire to become a member would be strong indeed, but being a male—here in my room, all alone, with the memory of hundreds of beautiful women just a few hills away—is down right frustrating!

One wonders of the reasoning behind business before pleasure, for if this assignment was business, who needs pleasure?

Anthology Staff Sets Session For Tonight

The final planning sessions for the Florida State Literary Anthology will begin tonight at 7:30 in the Longmire Lounge, Editor Mark Austin said

"All persons on campus interested in working on the Anthology are certainly welcome," he said. "Since anyone on campus—faculty or student—can submit stories, we must have a literary board to decide on the best of them. We are going to set up that board, along with the other working committees, tonight."

TO SET DEADLINE

In the planning session the group will also decide on a deadline for the submission of stories. The Anthology, which will appear in December, will be composed of the best fiction, poetry and essays produced on the FSU campus during the year 1958.

The 100-page pocket book has already "caught on." Austin said. During registration orders were taken, and others received since that time bring the number of orders to near a 1,000 total.

One feature of the publication is the plan to distribute it widely outside the state. In the future Austin envisions that critics may see in it what may be called a "Florida State" school of creative writing

PREXY BACKS IT

This week the anthology, which its sponsors believe to be the first in southern universities, got the financial backing of President Robert M. Strozier, who contributed $10 toward its support.

The regular edition sells for 50 cents, and a special textbook edition, with an outline prepared by the English Department, sells for $1.

Austin said about 15 or 20 high schools in the state have ordered it for supplementary use, and a writing class in the University will use it for the same purpose.

Rat Week Over For 1958 Frosh

"Nothing more, I guess," was the comment of John Bell, president of the sophomore class, concerning the future actions of sophomores on Rat Week, 1958.

When asked why the freshmen were allowed to cease wearing their Rat Caps Bell said "I guess the sludges became too busy with other things and didn't want to mess with it any more." Apparently the 1958 Rat Week at Florida State University is officially over.

Rat Week began with the freshmen convocation September 14, during which the freshmen were supposed to have donned their red caps with the gold FSU lettering for a three-week wear.

A session of Rat Court was called Thursday night of Rat Week, where negligent rats were "tried" before a jury of sophomores in front of the whole freshman class. Offenders were compelled to sing, lead high school yells, and duck thrown pies

Originally, Rat Week was to end with the Wake Forest game this Saturday, but it looks as if it was allowed to draw to a sputtering, spasmodic close when rat caps disappeared last week.

Art Gallery To Feature German Painter

Florida State University's Art Gallery will feature as its October exhibition 67 works by Walter Gramatte, a little-known but interesting German Expressionist.

The first major American showing of the watercolors, drawings and prints which make up the exhibition was at the Walker Art Center, in Minneapolis last year. They are the property of Dr Ferdinand Eckhardt, director of the Winnipeg Art Gallery, who has agreed to permit their circulation in the U. S for a period of time.

In the University Museum, adjacent to the Art Gallery, the exhibit "Primitive Medicine" continues through Oct 15. The primitive medicine display is an impressive combination of exhibits of ancient artifacts used by medicine men, herbs used by them and still used today, and the lighting and background effects to create a mood in keeping with the exhibit.

The Art Gallery, opening the year under a new curator, Jack Breckenridge, who holds a Master of Fine Arts degree from State University of Iowa, will hold a November showing of graphics by Karl Zerbe of the University faculty.

Following an exhibition of Japanese prints in January there will be a show in February of painting and sculptures by Rudolph and Artemis Jegart.

Among other shows for later in the year are one in "New Directions," which will demonstrate the trend of a number of artists who have been associated with abstract expressionism, and the annual show of the best work of students for the year 1958-1959.

International Club To Meet Thursday

The first meeting of the International Club will be held in the Large Lounge of Longmire, Thursday at 7:30 p.m.

All American students are also urged to attend this meeting.

Dean Clarifies Bermuda Rule

Dean of Women Katherine Warren has requested that women students refrain from wearing Bermuda shorts to Faiver's, Howard Johnson's, and The Quaker House after 5 p.m. on Saturday.

This statement does allow women to wear Bermudas before 5 p.m. to these places.

This action was taken because the above establishments are not patronized exclusively by students of Florida State University as are the Mecca, the Corner, and the Sweet Shop.

The rule states that Bermudas may be worn all day Saturday on campus and the immediate business areas.

Seminole Lady Of The Week

SEMINOLE LADY OF THE WEEK—A graduate student in Public Administration, Fran Kovas was chosen as the first in a series of Seminole Ladies to be run in the FLAMBEAU each Friday. Fran was photographed by our roving-photographer, Tom Maida, at the Lake Bradford Seminole Reservation.

Only End Zone Seats Available For Gator Tilt

By NANCY GENE BROWN
Flambean News Editor

Five thousand end zone tickets will be available for Florida State University students for the University of Florida game in Gainesville November 22.

"The student tickets begin on the goal line and go around the end zone," said Eddie Cubbon, FSU athletic business manager.

An additional 5,000 tickets near the goal line have been reserved for FSU boosters, alumni, and season ticket holders giving FSU a total of 10,000 reserved seats for the game

NO ROOM

"It's impossible for them to seat a delegation of 10,000 visitors in desirable locations," Cubbon pointed out

This seating arrangement is "the best they could give us," he said, due to the fact that a large Gainesville student and home town turnout is anticipated. They will receive their customary seating: the remainder goes to the visitors.

Slightly better seats could have been provided by splitting the FSU delegation and putting half of the group in the opposite goal-line area. The present seating arrangement was made in the interest of keeping FSU students in a mass.

"DISCRIMINATION?"

Cries of "discrimination" were raised in a Miami game when the visitors to Gainesville were end-zone customers. However, objections were to no avail, no other seats were available. FSU is in the same situation

When visiting teams bring delegations of only around 1,000 to Gainesville, it is possible to give them better seats, Cubbon said. But a demand for 10,000 seats for visitors is impossible to fill.

SAME DEAL

Rooters for teams visiting FSU would receive approximately the same treatment, Cubbon pointed out, since the best tickets in the stadium go to FSU students and season ticket holders

The date for sale of U of F game tickets will be announced in the Flambeau "within the next three weeks," Cubbon said. They will go at a price of $1 for students, along with the activity book coupon; guest tickets will be sold at the full price of $4

Tickets for the Georgia game in Jacksonville October 11 will go on sale Monday at $2 each with the activity book coupon. Guests tickets are $4. Georgia students will pay the same price for tickets, Cubbon stated.

Kromhout To Speak

Dr. Robert Kromhout, Physics Department, will speak on Nuclear Magnetic Resonance Work at FSU, Thursday at 4:30 p.m., in the science lecture hall, 124 Science Building. Coffee and refreshments will be served at 4 p.m.

THE NEW SCHOOL OF BUSINESS BUILDING which will be dedicated Saturday, includes this periodical library which will house what is planned as the largest and most complete collection of business reports and house organs in the South. Here students have begun work filing collection, expected eventually to number 15,000.

Two More

Board Approves Extra 'Signals

Two extra issues of Smoke Signals have been approved by the Board of Student Publications for this year

Transfer of funds from the student publications reserve to pay for additional magazine issues was approved at the board meeting Thursday at the request of Editor Ron Hamm.

It was estimated about $1,200 would be needed to print the two extra issues in addition to the two already scheduled.

The first issue of Smoke Signals was distributed during Orientation Week this fall.

Other issues are scheduled for November, February and May. Four magazine issues have been printed in previous years

HALE CHAIRMAN

Tom Hale, student member, was elected chairman of the publications board. Dr. Reid Montgomery was reelected board secretary.

After some discussion the board approved combining the separate publications' business managers into one position

Don Taimon has been appointed business manager for the three student publications at a salary of $70 a month.

Dr. Montgomery and the board chairmen were asked to work out necessary adjustments to make the new plan permanent.

The board passed a resolution commending the 1958 Tally-Ho editor and staff on promptness of delivery and "general fine quality" of the edition delivered last spring

Number and quality of ads in the edition were discussed, but no action was taken

ANTHOLOGY

After discussing the proposed literary anthology edited by Mark Austin, the board agreed to invite Austin and representatives of the English Club and English Department to the next meeting

Last May the board suggested the anthology project be assumed by the English honorary club.

Copies of the board's Statement of Policy will be distributed to publication staffs and the board, Dr Montgomery said.

Time and place of the next meeting will be announced later.

Linda Gormley, Ray Smith New Frosh Cheerleaders

Thursday afternoon was a big day for freshmen Linda Gormley and Ray Smith, when they were both picked to be on Florida State University's cheerleading squad

They were chosen out of the 50 who tried out. All the contestants had three days to learn three cheers—Hi Florida, Garnet and Gold, and Sittin' in a Wiggam. They were put in groups of six from which seven finalists were chosen

Both of the new cheerleaders graduated from Leon High School in Tallahassee

LEON YELLER

Linda was on the cheerleading squad at Leon for five years. She also participated in Anchor Club, Student Council, Tri-Hi-Y, Melodiers, and was a diver on the school's swimming team, through which she won the Florida and Georgia diving championship

She was named Miss Junior and Miss Senior in high school, was May Queen of Leon and won the Miss Marine contest.

By putting all of her accomplishments together the senior class named Linda as Best All Around.

FUTURE PLANS

Linda plans to become either a laboratory technician or a diving coach after completing her studies at FSU.

Ray was also active in high school, best known for his acting ability. He was in both the Junior and Senior class plays and in Thespian Night.

His other activities included Hi-Y, Forensic, Pep Club and football manager in his Junior year. He is also interested in art, especially painting and fashion illustration.

Ray plans to major in psychology, but is not sure whether he'll use that in his future career.

Let Lights Blaze Sundays

Once upon a time the lights in the Florida State University library blazed bright on Sunday evenings.

This was nearly two years ago—beyond the memory of half the student body. Yet it happened during the spring semester of the 1956-57 year.

THE ACTION had come only after a vigorous student government campaign the previous semester.

But it didn't last long. When students returned the next fall, the library was closed Sunday evenings.

Flambeau and student government efforts to reopen it again have fallen on deaf ears. But we ask once more.

AN OPEN LIBRARY Sunday nights would be a great benefit to FSU students and faculty members. Of all the weekend (the time between the last class Friday and 8 a. m. Monday) Sunday evening is the time most convenient and most used for study.

It is the students and faculty for whom the library (if not the whole university) exists. It should be opened for their convenience.

Finances should not be an excuse for keeping it closed. If the library is really short of funds, however, we think most of the students and faculty would be willing to trade the present Friday evening open policy for one Sunday evening.

PLAIN OBSERVATION will show anyone who bothers to enter the library Friday night that it is little used. And no wonder! With all the various activities scheduled on campus for that evening, who would want to go to the library?

After a relaxful weekend, however, the library seems a much more pleasant prospect on a Sunday evening.

We do not ask that the full facilities be opened. It will be sufficient to just make available works for study or reference. Books could be checked out at other times.

OUR LIBRARY was open once before. Can't it be opened again?

The sight of our massive library with lights aglow in the crisp Sunday evening is more in keeping with a progressive university, than is the sight of a library dark and silent.

Juke Box Must Go

A monster lurks in the Soda Shop, its four chrome feet firmly planted on the hallowed tile floors over which years of music, art and philosophy majors have stumbled.

And from its neon innards, it belches forth such unholy noises as to make every ear cringe and each stomach turn.

NOT ONLY does it block the path to the coffee urn, it even blocks the continuation of a tradition.

Who can discuss Nietzsche or Tolstoy through the din of "Judy, Don't Be Moody"? Who can concentrate on drawing on the table or bang out the percussion section with the lone soda shop tea spoon during the distraction of "Birddog"?

It's downright sadistic to butcher tradition in such a manner.

This perhaps bears investigation. It might be a plot of the music faculty to get everyone back to the practice rooms. Then again, Morrison's could be using it as a final resort to speed up soda shop service.

We hope it won't work. The Soda Shop diners are not giving up. The volume has been reduced to a whisper, and lack of dimes may lead to its inevitable starvation. Dirty trays are persistently being stacked upon it in attempt to disguise it from any outsider with a stray dime.

Let the day come when once again the inhabitants of the depths of Longmire can digress and digest in peace.

Prejudice Again

A recent news item tells how a California chapter of the 40 et 8 Society (a World War I overseas veterans' organization attached to the American Legion) had its charter removed by the national officers because it had a Chinese-American as its president.

Is this the kind of democracy that was fought for in 1917? If it was, the veterans might as well have stayed at home.

What is the crime of this Chinese-American? Being yellow-skinned and slant-eyed? Fighting for his country?

It appears to us that his crime was joining the 40 et 8 Society. He's probably too good for them.

Anyway, it goes to show that racial prejudice is more than just a Southern problem.

Vodka Breakfast Solves Mystery

By MIKE ANGELOTTI

A valuable lesson may be here learned by those of you who endeavor to excel in the fields of philosophy, psychology, and stuff.

I had just finished my usual breakfast of apricot juice and vodka this morning when a most perplexing question entered my mind The nature of the thing was unusual to say the least, and the solution obviously impossible so I therefore prepared a second breakfast and proceeded to ponder this riddle of awakenina

Ten minutes later the diagnosis and elucidation of a mystery of the aaes was complete Now in my moment of triumph I wish to share my rejoicement with the world

THE QUESTION: Exactly what occurs to the chicken before it hatches from the eag?

Diaanosis and Elucidation:

For the purpose of clarification and intimacy we will dispense with the usual terminology for the subjects and refer to the chicken as Mortimer and to the egg as Harold.

OBVIOUSLY, we must have a beainning What more appropriate moment can we find than the utterance of those very first words upon being

Says Mortimer "Gee!"

HE IS NO DOUBT profoundly interested in the world around him, namely Harold The magnificance and wonderment of it all, his curiosity abounds and he is instilled with an immediate desire for adventure and enlightenment

Trembling with excitement, Mort enters the track of satisfaction eagerly, but alas! Harold is a megare dry saltine for the driving hunger so strongly entrenched in the mind of our friend.

"POOR ME," he thinks "Harold you are such a terrible disappointment. Such a great pity that my tender, searching soul must be so deprived by such a dastardly calamity as you." Our hero succumbs, he can do nothing but lie there and grow, grow, and grow, and arow. He is complete despair. "What is life, woe is me"

Then one day Mort discovers that he can now touch all part of Harold without moving at all, as a matter of fact, soon movement approaches the realm of impossibility.

"What possible aood reason can there be to justify this intolerable existence?" he asks himself "The end must surely be oear"

JUST AT THAT MOMENT, Mort detects a solid, rhythmic tappina noise on Harold Then a speck of lieht beams throuah. "Good arief," he exclaims "What is that?" The hole became larger, Harold was being destroyed. Mort is terribly frightened and then relieved "I am beina freed from Harold to a bigger Harold Oh joy! Oh joy!"

Mortimer is released. Mortimer is ecstatic. He slowly begins to discern the objects around him So many things, all moving, all different, and all to be seen

HE IS MORTIFIED. He cries out, "Where is my Harold?" But Harold is no more

Having completed both this amazing display of deductive illusion and breakfast for the third time I was beset upon by the all too obvious moral of this tremendous and brilliant mental achievement. Moral: Enjoy life while you can for although all men are created equal, after you are born life is a real hazard

Placement Office Almost Forgotten

By ED CARHART

The notorious dragon, "Lack-of-Funds," has reared its ugly head in FSU's affairs again. This time the Placement Office has fallen victim to its lethal blows.

Last March the Office was moved from the Westcott building to Longmire Hall with the official explanation that the move was merely a temporary one. Unfortunately the Placement Office is still to be found in the basement of Longmire.

UNFORTUNATELY because the Placement Office plays a very vital role in the life of the prospective graduate and even the graduates themselves. This office acts as the intermediary between the student and his future employer.

In addition to this important task, the Office keeps a complete dossier on each student that registers with them. This dossier contains information, evaluations and recommendations which the student will find invaluable in later life.

IT SEEMS POOR policy to deny this important function the best facilities possible. When Florida State University is entertaining men from such companies as Southern Bell, Dow Chemical Company or Shell Oil, who are interested in hiring FSU students, I fail to see how we can afford to put anything but our best foot forward.

The fact of the matter is our Placement Office presents an extremely poor appearance—one that none of us would be proud of The chief reason for this is a tricky engineering problem that exists in the ceiling of the room.

CONDENSATION from pipes in the ceiling has permitted . strange brand of fungus to take up residence on the walls of the office To help combat the condition a hole has been cut in the ceiling. These factors do not help to make the room a showplace for visitors. In fact, they have a tendency to raise the eyebrows of the impressionable guest

Some of the other factors against the present location are: the difficulty in finding the office, crowded conditions, lack of privacy for interviews and the fact that the office has been moved three times in the last two years.

WHAT IS BEING DONE to move the office into suitable, permanent quarters? R. R. Oglesby, Dean of Students, had this to say about the situation: "We realize the existing facilities are not adequate but we are hampered by the lack of funds and space" He emphasized that the present location is still considered a temporary one only and that the office will be moved into suitable ones as soon as possible.

"This office has an important job for what good is it for us to graduate students if they can't find jobs?" he asked. The Dean went on to comment that there were no definite plans at this moment to move the Office due to lack of space. He felt the present location was the best available and the University would remedy the situation as soon as it was possible.

This attitude on the part of the school is heartening and proper facilities for the Placement Office are something to look forward to I don't see how we can ever be a "great" university if we fall short on the important points

Want To Be Popular? Give Freezer To Co-op

By MARK AUSTIN

Even though the 22 girls living in the off-campus Selby house are bright kids (every one of them is here on a scholarship, and so far they have exempted a total of 92 hours), they have a problem they can't puzzle out.

Lack of transportation forces the girls to buy groceries a week at a time But they can't stack a week's chow for 22 kids in their two little icebox freezers.

If any Phys Ed. or Math majors can figure out how to do this thing you're welcome to go over to 620 Pensacola St and try your hand.

Or better yet—if anybody has an old, beat-up freezer lying around, take it over there and you'll be better loved than Bobby Renn after a winning touchdown

WELL, THE TROUBLE has started. Saturday's paper carried the state auditor's complaint about FSU

IF YOU'RE ANY more comfortable in some of your classes this year, it's because the university spent about $200,000 renovating this place during the summer. And a lot of it went into air-conditioners.

THOSE WHO SAW Leon High stomp Alabama's best team, Murphy High last Friday night, found out what spirit really is

In the final minutes of the game, with Murphy behind two touchdowns, and Leon possessing the ball, the Alabama cheerleaders were still shouting, "Go, Go, Wheah, Wheah We wanna touchdown over Theah!"

Now that's spirit.

VALUE OF COLLEGE EDUCATION DEPT: The other day a guy came up and asked if I knew there were 33 phonemes in the English language

No, I told him, never knew that

"Well neither did I, till I went to class yesterday," he said. "We spent the entire hour on it . . and now I feel so much better equipped to cope with the world about me.

Oh yes, a phoneme is a pair of words spelled similarly but pronounced with a distinctly different dialect.

Library Reserve Room Is Really Social Hall

By LARRY BLOCK

The first week of the new semester has passed and, if all, most of the freshmen are digging themselves out of the of homework that has encumbered them.

I'm fairly certain that in their daily tour of the campus the sight of our hall of learning—the library—has caught their eye.

AS ONE APPROACHES this magnificent building, we must first open one of the glass doors before entering any room.

The room on the main floor if one turns to the right is called the reserve room—or as it is affectionately named by most—the social room.

If you really want to study, don't go in there.

HOWEVER, MEN, if you need a date, or want someone to talk to—this is the place for you. From what I hear it's the most popular place around.

Unfortunately, the reserve room does contain some very valuable property. I'm talking about the books, not the girls.

To the experienced term paper writer (which freshmao will learn about in the near future), there are certaio books which can only be found in that room.

AS ONE BEGINS the walk through, pausing momentarily to glance (done by both male and female) briefly about and wave quickly at the magazine rack readers, the trek starts.

Anyone with any upbringing at all would never go by a friend or acquaintance without stopping to say hello and pass the time of day—besides someone might think we were turning into a snob.

Finally we see an empty seat at one of the many tables sit down—next to an attrac member of the opposite se course And it's off to work go. Well, anyway, that's we started out to do.

EVEN THOUGH the en building is air-conditioned must be something in the that makes people thirsty that water fountain sure ge workout.

In today's modern age of alles, atom bombs, chain tions, etc., the library is outdone in this department er There they have their little chain reaction—ever what happens when one pe begins to cough; in ten seco it has worked itself around entire room.

It sounds like the ante room a TB ward.

ANOTHER PLEASANT so heard round the room is the telephone, and just as really digging into those tex the fire alarm goes off beg your pardon, it's on warning bell announcing 15 m utes until closing time

Big Time Drinkers May Cause Accident

By HERB SCHMUCK

Back in October of 1954, Martin Dyckman wrote "We're going to have to do something about the li boys who are getting very big-time drunk at our footba games"

Dyckman, who wrote the controversial Dissenter, was perha the most well-known and widely read columnist the Flambea ever produced. He wrote the above because he was mad abo what he had seen at a football game

LAST FRIDAY night, I think I must have felt as Dyckm did the day he wrote his column on that incident. There was football game just a bunch of drunk kids literally sprawled o the top of a procession of automobiles about 12 o'clock in t morning.

Drunk kids clinging to fenders, hoods, and tops of movi vehicles is quite a sight Some people can even manage to laug but it takes guts to do that.

Somebody told me, as I watched the stream of cars wind dow Jefferson Street, that it was the fraternities celebrating the coming-out of the new pledge class

I DON'T CARE what it was or who it was. The fact rema that human lives were in danger. Fortunately no one was injured . . damn fortunately

People who preach sermons on the evils of drink disgust m But I do have one weakness—human life. I enjoy living and like people Therefore, I want other people to go on living too

THOSE CHILDREN who were part of the demonstration I sa Friday night were endangering their lives. Is it their fault? Ar they aware of the seriousness of their conduct?

I don't know but I certainly do care. These kids that hav to get inebriated and play games with their lives need some kin of help and guidance

TO FRATERNITIES I offer this plea. Don't try to impres some naive freshman with a fifth of "Old Crow" Try a little that good old-fashioned brotherhood and fellowship we hear so much about.

It is your duty as active members to exercise this type of influence on the new crop of pledaes in almost every kind of socia activity they participate in.

Being able to drink sensibly and knowing when to quit is pa of being a mature individual as we all know. Fraternities can b a good place to learn how to indulge properly.

To the rest of you people, I offer another of Dyckman's pea of wisdom: "Someone who's aoina to get soused can do it just as easily somewhere where nobody can get hurt"

He Wants To See Fee Raised To $100

LETTERS to the EDITOR

TO THE EDITOR:

I want you to know I am for raising the registration fees to $100 a semester

HERE'S WHY: 1) I don't think the tax rates should go up just to support the student union fund. 2) I want to see a student union—a good student union—built. Tallahassee doesn't have enough recreation facilities We, in the University, need to make our own facilities We need a larger student union, a bigger place to dance, a free record player.

(3) And I want to see a cafeteria in that student union, run by the Hotel and Restaurant Department, to act as a yardstick on food costs on campus. I think this cafeteria will serve as an excellent training ground for students. If the University bas faith enough in Restaurant and Hotel majors to grant them a degree, they should have enougb faith in them to allow them to run the cafeteria. The use of this cafeteria as a lab for Hotel and Restaurant Management majora would tend to minimize costs

I THINK we should have a plan similar to that of Florida Southern College under which the students may pay for their entire semester's food at registration. This would be advantageous to the University because they would be able to approximate the number of students who would be using these facilities, thus giving the cafeteria administration a better method of budgeting.

Sincerely yours,
BRIAN RICHARDSON

'Outlook Bright' Says Nugent

...a pre-season football banquet, Florida State's head football ... Tom Nugent stated, "The Georgia Tech game will be the ...game of the season. It will give the coaching staff an indica... just how good we are."

But what is in store for FSU's football team now that the ...rgia Tech game has been played? After reviewing the game ... Nugent declared, "The outlook is bright for the rest of ...season. The team has come along fast."

After watching the FSU-Tech game from the pressbox at ... Field Friday night it appeared to us that Florida State had ...ed up its third victory of the season. But this win won't ...up in the record books.

...will show up as a big moral victory and one that is liable ...ow up as a factor when the Seminoles meet the likes of ...ia and Tennessee.

...ERYONE PROUD

Nugent stated after the game that he was particularly proud ... great way the boys played against the pressure applied by ...a Tech and the impressive crowd of over 40,000.

But Nugent wasn't the only one that was proud of the way ...be had played against the Engineers.

It was a noisy and proud crowd that surrounded FSU's ...ers as they readied themselves to go back to the hotel from ...stadium to shower. The milling crowd was mostly made up ...FSU students who had gone to see their team—the one that ...described as too small for the likes of Georgia Tech.

But mixed in that crowd were members of many of the ball ...s families, equally proud of the way their sons had played. ...were Georgia Tech fans—fans that were stunned by the way ...highly ranked Engineers had been pushed around for better ...alf the game.

One fan after another walked up to the tired bedraggled FSU ... to offer them their congratulations on the fine game they ...ust played.

The players were anxious to go back to the hotel to change ...their soaking wet game uniforms but they too were glad to ... the excitement that surrounded the play that they had ...ust 10 minutes earlier before an opening night crowd that ...come to see Georgia Tech whip a supposedly weak Florida ...team.

...IBE DETERMINED

But the Seminoles were a determined team that night. It was ...m that was made up of players like Al Ulmer, a 176 pound ... from Clearwater who was pointed out to one football expert ...hotel lobby before the game as FSU's starting guard. The ...all expert was then heard to exclaim, "He's a guard?"

But when the game was over this same football expert knew ...had spoken too soon. Because Al was once again the tough ...n in the Seminole line.

Sheppard

It was a team composed of players like John Sheppard. Sheppard kicked the field goal that brought FSU's scoring draught against Tech to an end. It was the first time that Sheppard had ever kicked a field goal.

The Tallahassee place kick specialist had always done a fine job of booting conversions, in fact he had booted 36 out of 40 in his brief career. And when the chips were down Sheppard made the kick true.

It was a team composed of five sophomore starters Nugent stated after the game. "It was a remarkably well done job. Especially considering the number of new boys who played."

PICKARD PLEASES

Then there was Fred Pick... a 165 pound fullback from Columbus, Tennessee. Pickard was ...ading ground gainer Friday night and when it was brought ... attention of many of the game writers that he was only ...unds they found it almost unbelievable.

Before the game, Georgia Tech's head football coach Bobby ...odd said that he had more depth than FSU and he thought it ...uld pay off in a victory. He was later shown to be right.

Tech Breaks Halftime Tie To Down Seminoles, 17-3

After fighting Georgia Tech to a 3-3 halftime score, Florida State's Seminoles gave ground and the Yellow Jackets struck for two touchdowns to down the Tribe, 17-3.

A crowd of over 40,000 saw FSU's place kick specialist, John Sheppard, boot a 31-yard field goal which marked the first time the Seminoles have ever scored against the Engineers in four meetings.

It was the first field goal in Florida State history.

Tech got its three points with two mintues left in the first quarter. Tommy Wells kicked the field goal with the ball on the five.

During most of the first half, FSU fans were delighted with the show of power running displayed by Fred Pickard, FSU second team fullback.

The Seminoles gained 72 yards rushing during the game. Pickard got 49 of the yards in ten carries.

The first time the Engineers got the ball in the second half, they drove 60 yards in 11 plays for the touchdown which broke the 3-3 tie. Sophomore halfback Frank Nix drove over from the FSU six for the TD.

Just before the end of the third quarter the Seminoles got a break which might have enabled them to catch and even pass the Yellow Jackets.

Renn booted a high punt which Tech halfback Joe Delaney took as he signaled for a fair catch. Delaney dropped the ball however and it was pounced upon by FSU center John Bell, an Atlanta product.

FSU then had possession on Tech's 26. On the first play Renn took a pitchout and passed to Tony Romeo for another first on the Yellow Jacket's 16.

Pickard then lost seven yards which was followed by two incomplete passes. Then the Seminoles pulled a bit of razzle-dazzle as Prinzi passed to Espenship who lateraled to Renn.

When the tacklers were removed, FSU had a first on the Tech five.

Prinzi tried a keep around the right end and was dropped for a 13-yard loss as he attempted to get away from pesky Tech defenders.

On the next play Prinzi hit Espenship with a two yard short pass. Another short pass gained only a yard. At this point Joe Majors entered the game for FSU. His last down pass was batted down by a Georgia defender.

The Yellow Jackets took over and drove out of the shadow of their goal posts. After punting to FSU, Tech held the Seminoles and forced them to punt back.

Hungarian Composer-Pianist Will Give Opperman Recital

Prof. Edward Kilenyi will appear in a piano recital at Florida State University's Opperman Music Hall at 8:15 p.m. Friday, Oct. 3.

Among the three selections on his program are the four Rhapsodies of Prof Ernst von Dohnanyi, a fellow member of the faculty who began teaching the younger pianist in Budapest when Kilenyi was 11.

Besides the Dohnanyi Rhapsodies, Apus 1, Kilenyi will play a Beethoven sonata, Opus 10, and the Twelve Etudes of Chopin Opus 25.

During the summer Kilenyi gave recitals at Atlanta and Savannah and on Oct. 17 he opens the recital season in Miami. He has concerts scheduled during the year at Milwaukee, Knoxville and the University of Wyoming.

Friday night's recital, the second faculty recital of the year, is open to the public without charge.

A native of Philadelphia, Kilenyi is the son of a Hungarian-born musician who counted George Gershwyn among his pupils. At the invitation of the Hungarian composer-pianist Dohnanyi young Kilenyi went to Budapest. There Dohnanyi supervised his musical education, taught him personally and eventually took the young virtuoso with him on a concert tour in Hungary, playing Schubert works for the four hands.

Before playing in the United States Kilenyi triumphed in Europe through several seasons of extended concert tours. American audiences, already familiar with his many Chopin and Liszt recordings in Columbia Masterworks albums, first heard the native son in person at his American debut at New York's Town Hall in October, 1940.

A member of the FSU faculty since 1953, Kilenyi recently introduced a new form of piano recital in which audiences make their own selections from among the 32 sonatas of Beethoven. Last year at FSU he gave an all-Dohnanyi program.

Business Bldg. Dedication Set For Tomorrow

The School of Business will dedicate its new $1,087,500 home tomorrow morning, in a half-hour ceremony during FSU's Legislative Recognition Day

For legislators and the public getting their first look at the new School of Business Building, the occasion will place on exhibit a building functionally designed for three purposes—classroom study, faculty research and preparation, and conferences of business leaders

For the faculty and the student body which Dean Charles A. Rovetta said numbers a record 1600, the building furnishes a final home for what is now the second largest division in the university.

BEGINS AT 11

The dedication will be at 11 a.m at the building's main entrance. After the dedication the school will hold open house

Legislators and the public will have an opportunity to inspect the building in detail from 11:30 to 3 p.m. and faculty members will be on hand to explain facilities Seventy-eight members of the Legislature have accepted invitations to attend Legislative Appreciation Day, said Jack Madigan, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce-sponsored day

The game between FSU freshmen and University of Miami frosh tonight is the first item of the schedule of events honoring the legislators.

Buses will take the legislators to this and all other events on the schedule

Dedication of the School of Business building is next on the program Gov. Collins, Sen. Wilson Carraway, Board of Control Chairman James Love, FSU President Robert Strozier, and Dean Charles A Rovetta of the school of business will appear in the 30-minute ceremony.

Parking Spots Available, Says Traffic Head

The real traffic problem at Florida State University is simply a matter of all drivers wanting the best parking spaces, Dr. James Carr, traffic committee chairman, said today.

He declared sufficient parking space is available but drivers apparently insist on parking directly in front of buildings instead of two blocks away on lots such as the one at Call and Copeland Sts

Cars driven by day students and others from off-campus create the parking problem, Carr pointed out, since upperclassmen on campus have parking space near the residence halls.

The area around Westcott seems less congested this year, he noted probably because classes have been shifted to new buildings, carrying the congestion with them.

Reserving parking spaces around Westcott for faculty cars has resulted in increased turnover since many faculty members move from one building to another between classes, the committee chairman explained.

Increased number of two-hour spaces also means more rapid turnover he said

Carr said 3,500 to 4,000 parking spaces are available, a ratio of one space to each one and a half cars.

He compared this to the ratio of one space for every three cars which is generally used in determining the number of parking spaces needed.

Compared to other universities FSU traffic rules and regulations are not strict, Dr Carr remarked.

He mentioned the University of Wisconsin, where only upperclassmen may have cars and are not allowed to park on campus, Notre Dame, where only students over 21 living off-campus may own or operate cars; and the University of Virginia, which plans to ban all undergraduates from using cars in a two-county area during their first three years

Dr. Carr said traffic rules and regulations seem to be observed better than usual this year

LAST CALL FOR TALLY-HO PICS

All students who did not appear for Tally-Ho picture appointments should go to the Tally-Ho office, fourth floor Longmire, to have pictures made.

This should be done as soon as possible, emphasized Desse Pinckard, Tally-Ho editor.

Senior men should wear white shirts with solid dark ties; undergraduate men should wear white shirt, dark tie, and coat.

Undergraduate women should be attired in dark (black or navy blue) sweater, with a strand of pearls.

WFSU-FM began its first broadcast at full power Wednesday. Barbara Bevis, a student announcer, is preparing for her turn at the tables.

SENATE CHAIRMAN MATTOX HAIR raps the gavel bringing Wednesday's Student Senate meeting to order. The group, currently with only 12 members, discussed library hours and registration fees.

On Sundays

Senate To Ask For Extra Library Hours

Student Senate will ask library officials for an extension of Sunday hours to 10 p.m the group decided Wednesday.

This resolution, said Senator Wall, "purposely does not state a compromise such as exchanging Friday for Sunday. We want to see if we can get both."

Student sentiment for the move has been high during the past two years of early closing hours, Miss Wall said The longer hours would benefit students with early week assignments, she pointed out.

Senator Wall has been appointed to approach the proper authorities and set forth the Senate's request.

RAISE FEES?

A representative of Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity requested on behalf of his group that Senate study the possibility of raising registration fees from their present level of $75 per semester to $90 or $100.

The fraternity feels that this move is necessary to "make FSU the best University in the South, as we think it can be."

Senators Van, Moore and Coleman will investigate the move and make a report to the legislative body.

In other action, Senator Brown asked for appointment of a traffic committee to project a study on future traffic and parking conditions for the new dorms and classroom buildings going up on campus.

Brown said that the University expects an enrollment of 10,000 within several years and there "won't be adequate parking space" unless steps are taken.

Brown will head a traffic committee of three appointed by Senate Chairman Mattox Hair and including Senators Moore and Koch.

APPOINTMENTS HEARD

Senate also heard appointments for three committees submitted by Student Body President Art Moore. The appointees will be investigated by the Senate Elections and Appointments committee, Diana Holroyd, chairman

The tentative appointments are:

Board of Publications: Ken Bowes, Bob M .

NAMES BLASTED

President Strozier has received a complaint from Dr Robert H. Miller of the philosophy department, about the street names approved by Senate last fall, Senator Mickler said.

The names were scheduled to be voted on by the State Board of Control this month. Miss Mickler will talk to Dr. Strozier about this complaint.

Finally, the solons revised rules of procedure pertaining to attendance at senate meetings. The previous rule made three unexcused absences grounds for impeachment.

Under the new statute, five absences on the part of any senator, excused or unexcused, will result in automatic suspension.

Hillel To Meet

Hillel Foundation will hold a general meeting of all Jewish students at Temple Israel, 507 South Copeland Street at 6 p.m. October 5.

The program for the coming year will be given, and a social hour will follow.

WFSU Plans Special Shows

Programs of special interest to humanities and English students are being planned by Radio Station WFSU-FM

The station announced plans recently for a series of programs related to such fields of study.

Beginning the series at 3:30 p.m. Wednesday will be "Poets at Mid-Century," including discussion of new poets of England and other topics.

Music, poetry and drama will be featured between 5:30 and 6:30 p.m. on Saturdays.

Directed especially to students in humanities 201 and 202, the programs will parallel subject matter of the two courses

"The Creative Mind," offering 30-minute talks by outstanding people such as Frank Lloyd Wright, Allen Tate and other artists, philosophers and writers, is scheduled for November

Planned for after Christmas is a broadcast on "Contemporary Poets of Other Lands," including readings in English and the language of the poets.

Eighth Band Day Set Tomorrow

FSU's eighth annual Band Day will take place during halftime at the Wake Forest Game tomorrow night The show will be dedicated to the visiting Florida legislators.

Nearly 2,000 bandsmen, including members of the FSU Marching Chiefs, will participate in the ceremonies. The 35 bands will come from the Tallahassee and South Georgia area.

After lunch Saturday there will be a practice in the stadium followed at 4 p.m. by a parade through downtown Tallahassee.

New FSU-Theme; Committies Named

By NANCY GENE BROWN
Flambeau News Editor

The orchestra of Larry and Les Elgart will provide the sounds for Florida State University's Homecoming dance of 1958

The band and the dance, as well as Pow-Wow, the annual Homecoming parade, and campus decorations will follow the general theme of "A Look at the New FSU", said Dr. Lewis Killian, over-all faculty Homecoming chairman.

The parade Friday afternoon, October 31 kicks off the week end. Pow-Wow that evening, to be held in Doak S. Campbell Stadium, will feature skits by campus organizations and the coronation of the Homecoming Queen

BARBEQUE, GAME

Next on the Homecoming agenda is the annual barbeque Saturday morning It ends in time for the Homecoming game, this year featuring Tampa University as the Seminoles' gridiron foe

Capping off the activities of the weekend is the dance Saturday night, November 1

Date for opening sales of tickets for the weekend will be announced in the Flambeau in the near future

Dr. Killian and Miss Daisy Parker are serving as general faculty Homecoming co-chairmen. Jim Apthorp is student dance chairman, with Miss Marie Williams as faculty dance chairman

Subchairmen involved in planning various phases of the dance are Kay Hufford, Carline MacDougald Kay Dermond, Betty Jane Atkinson, Jack Champion and Prissy Wann Faculty advisors for this group are Dr. Stephen Winters, Mr. Thomas Wright and Mr. Ralph Richard.

POW-WOW

Faculty chairman in charge of making arrangements for Pow-Wow skit competition is Mr. Richard G Fallon

"We hope that every dormitory, fraternity, sorority and university group will plan a skit on the theme of their choice," Fallon said.

Entry blanks for the skit competition may be obtained in Room 117 History, or through the Interfraternity Council or Pan-Hellenic offices.

The skits will be presented at 8 p.m October 28 in the Music Amphitheater with the student body invited to attend. The two best skits will be presented at Pow-Wow

The skits must not exceed ten minutes in length, including setting up, and each group must set up and remove its own props. Skits should be planned for effective presentation in Campbell Stadium

"This year we will not insist that groups stick exclusively to the theme in decorations, floats, or skits for Pow-Wow," Killian said, although this has been more or less a policy in the past.

January Grads Must File Now

Students who expect to graduate at the end of this semester must file an application for a degree in 102B Westcott today, if they have not already done so.

Students cannot be assured of graduation if application is made after this date.

Charles H. Walker registrar, reminds all students who will complete requirements for undergraduate or graduate degrees that applications must be filed in the Registrar's Office, and not with the student's major department or school.

Applications for a degree are used as a check sheet for graduation, showing the quality points earned A diploma with the name printed exactly as listed on the application is ordered.

Fulbright Fellowship Forms Must Be Made By Nov. 1

Applications for Fulbright fellowships must be completed and submitted to the University Selection Committee by November 1.

"Recipients will be chosen on a competitive basis," according to Dr Albert Leduc of the Department of Modern Languages, who is FSU Fulbright advisor.

Applications are open to seniors and graduates in their major field.

The fellowship pays full educational and living expenses, including travel, for one academic year, sometimes amounting to $2,500. There is no restriction or objection to married applicants or families, but no financial provision is made for dependents

Requirements include an outstanding academic record and a study project suitable for the foreign country. Applicants are also required to have a working knowledge of the language of the host country sufficient to carry out the proposed study and communicate with the people of that country.

The most popular countries for foreign study are England, France, Germany, Italy. Other countries participating in the program include South America and the Far East.

All Fulbright graduate study awards are under the international educational exchange program of the US government. Approximately twenty foreign countries have signed educational agreements with the United States, which provides for student exchanges

Fulbright fellowships are also offered on a post-graduate level and on a teacher exchange basis Several members on the FSU faculty have completed Fulbright study, including two members of the University Selection Committee.

The last FSU recipient of a Fulbright fellowship was Franklin Ryan Edwards from Quincy, Fla Edwards studied piano and composition in Paris the past year.

Dr. Leduc said that several students have filled out preliminary papers, and two students have already applied.

Beer Mugs Fly

A crockery-collector has absconded with two beer mugs, according to Wesley Holden, victim of the theft.

Trouble is, says Holden, the mugs contained a large quantity of the amber liquid at the time of their disappearance.

Holden asks that the thirsty one return the mugs to his residence, 428 West College. They have sentimental value.

Think Fee Raise Over

A cry for increased registration fees has been raised on this campus. Using the Flambeau and the Student Senate as sounding boards, backers of the plan are creating the impression that the student population as a whole favors this step.

DOES IT? At least one member does not (re. today's letters column). We wonder how many other "tightwads" have serious doubts about contributing from fifteen to thirty dollars more per semester to register than they are presently paying.

This increase may be inevitable As has been pointed out, the current seventy-five dollar fee is below many other universities. And as the state is short of tax revenue, the students may be expected to help pay for improvements in which they will benefit.

In addition, FSU has reached a stalemate where allotments to Student Government, and ultimately to campus organizations, are concerned. Since no more funds are available this year than last, several budgets have been reduced or completely erased.

The State Legislature has, of course, the final say on this issue. It seems likely that there will be increases made. The Board of Control is in a quandary trying to find the funds to satisfy requests of state universities for a total of $121,000,000 for the operative year. The Board may see in a higher registration fee a partial solution to its problem.

FSU STUDENTS should consider both sides of the issue before scrambling on either bandwagon. It would be great to have a beautiful Student Union, a "showplace of the South." Organizations would be happy to get more money in their coffers.

But will the same student who gripes over food costs, high prices of Artist Series and football tickets appreciate the above improvemente if he wakes up some morning next fall to find himself paying a sixty dollar increase to pay for them?

Fee Raise Means Country Club

TO THE EDITOR:

After reading two articles published recently in the Flambeau concerning registration fees being raised I have become somewhat confused about one point and thought you might be able to help me. The one point I am confused on is this. What is the REAL purpose of a college? I was under the impression that I enrolled in and paid my fees to a place of higher learning and higher education.

Maybe I am lost, is it possible that I could have enrolled in the local association of "Keep Up with the Jonses?" I have always thought of the purpose of a college as being a little more then "A show place of the South," or a country club where by paying high enough initiation fees one might have free records and more free magazines.

Am I in the wrong place or have I by some accident acquired a misconception of the REAL purpose and goal of a college?

Sincerely (Confused and Poor),

Students Are Mature When Rat Caps Go

TO THE EDITOR:

The curious case of the disappearing rat caps must loom a paradox to a solitary few on the FSU campus.

The hasty stashing of the gold caps—traditionally the brand of the scholastic greenhorn—was carried out with the speed of the oldtime shell game.

"First you see them, then you don't," goes the con man's pitch.

In a little less than two weeks, the rat was a species as extinct as the dodo bird.

THE FEW DAYS the freshmen wore the caps must set an all-time record for the disappearance of the tacky head gear Something similar to the four minute mile

Certainly no freshman class ever ditched their caps quicker. Not an outcry was raised. Who cared less?

WHY?

The hasty vanishing act seems to reflect a trend in American universities.

The obiquitous freshman welcoming ceremonies—rat caps, hazing, paddles—have, in the past decade, made a gradual withdrawal from the college campus

THE REASON: A more sophisticated, socially adept, mature, intelligent type of freshman student has appeared.

Born into a highly complex technological society, the freshman grew up in a speeded-up, constantly changing world.

THE RAT CAP is a relic of a bybone era of raccoon coats, goldfish gulping, and rakish Stutz Bearcats The sentimental picture of the ivy-encased Gothic classrooms has gone with it.

A modern university—a greater university—needs no link with that segment of its past.

For the rat cap is an idealized symbol of that past. It was intended to be a symbol of class unity, a mark of lower caste for those who wore it.

It's good to see the freshmen reject the rat cap and become a part of the student body.

Snarf Not For Integration?

TO THE EDITOR:

It is conceivable that a majority of the present student body may be in favor of racially mixed classes at FSU but what about individual membere of the faculty?

Would Prof Snarf, with his diabolical cunning, his snide remarks, his cutting sarcasm, keen humor and his crude sense of authoritarianism be receptive to integrated classes? I think not

Men: How To Date Cheaply

By DIANE GODIN

So Friday finds you happily minus the virus-of-the-week, but sadly minus adequate funds to provide for diversion. Then let this column be your manual. Don't let lack of money force you to bloom on that wall, when with a little imagination you can find endless entertainment.

FIRST ADVICE: Some figuring is in order. Begin by acquiring copies of the Flambeau and This Week. Quickly scan the pages, noted all activities tagged with the word, "free" Your list will include anything from coffee concerts to campus movies.

Thus armed, prepare the correct attitude. Forget thet adjective "free" et this point . . . frequent connotation being, "We dare you to sit through it"

APPROACH IS NEXT in order of importance Don't be apologetic. Dont' explain your situation unnecessarily. An aura of mystery can be to your advantage when you can keep your date intrigued as to why you are set on going to that lecture on the mating habits of the spoonbill

A good intro would be "How 'bout going out for a drink?" Your date will be too flabbergasted when she discovers herself in line for coffee at the English Coffee hour or realizes your intentions for learning all about physic sources of ancient Greek mythology—to complain.

IF YOU ARE a real salesman, you could convince her that you have always harbored a secret desire to play the oboe This, of course, will naturelly lead to requesting her attendance at a junior practice recital with an oboe solo.

Dinner dates, too, are ever-popular, and if you've got religion, you've got Sunday's supper . . . for thirty cents at the BSU house

IF YOUR GIRL already knows that you're tone deaf, or that you know nothing about mythology, or if you saw the campus movie on TV last summer, coffee makes her nauseous and she's an atheist, go a step farther.

Ask her if she'd like to watch Sputnik III pass by at the campus planeterium, or if she'd like to go out to the university art gallery.

And if all else fails to stir her imagination and you are uninspired as to what to try next, try a proved remedy . . . inspiration point

Dear Mama Seminole

DEAR MAMA SEMINOLE,

Georgie happy to be back with tribe in friendly village. Glad to see many new braves and squaws. They soon to pick a chief to sit with council of chosen in Big Teepee on hill. Georgie hope young blood bring new life to village (Even if we gottum break stem of peace-pipe to makeum greyhairs pick up bottom of breechcloth off ground.)

TRIBE VERY LARGE now and must build many lodges. Braves in great west lodge angry like hornets when home destroyed by bears cutting and bending many birches and making heap big noise They drag more dirt from big hole in around to make mud-pies when water comes from the skies.

Last moon of November finds whole tribe on big Gator hunt in not-so-friendly village across Suwannee. Georgie and tribe face hunt and contest with hot air tribe with no fear

GATOR ROAR sound much like death rattle of a bloated sow and hot air of hurricane smell like inside of blackfoot moccasin.

Georgie go now Mama Got to grind hatchet and tune tom-tom for pow wow with forest medicine men when next sun set. Me think we give-um taste of own medicine.

Your loving papoose

Odds Are You'll Get The Bug

By MARK AUSTIN

If you haven't been feeling hot lately, the FSU Virus is probably the criminal.

One fifth of the campus—about 1500 students—have been treated for the bug in the last 30 days. And you can guess how many hundreds of students are nursing the thing along on their own, without going to the infirmary.

"APPROXIMATELY eighty to ninety percent of the students that were treated in the infirmary or were in the hospital this last month were there because of the virus," Dr. Slosek FSU Medical director said

So, if you haven't caught it yet, odds are you'll get it within the next two or three weeks. That's how long it will take the campus to become acclimated to the virus.

But don't worry—above all, don't panic, Dr. Slosek says—you may get a sore throat or a cold for a few days, but after that you'll be immune.

Danger, Adventure Highlight 'Key'

By JOHN HULL

The Key, starring William Holden, Sophia Loren and Trevor Howard is presently showing through Sat, at the Florida Theater.

As in most Enlish movies William Holden and Sophia Loren portray a very dramatic story in semi-darkness. Holden is a tug boat captain in the dark days of World War II, and Loren stars in her fourth story apartment.

DURING ENGLAND'S dark days of the war, German U-Boats were in their heyday knocking out unescorted supply freighters relieving England. Afterward the Germans would lay in wait for a salvage boat to come for a little gunnery practice (if the luckless ship were still afloat).

Tug boat captains' lives were cheap but Holden (Capt. Ross) did not agree—Loren (Stella) was the shore prize.

It seems Stella was madly in love with a captain who didn't make it back and it had left her somewhat demented.

THIS FIRST LOVE, however, was not one to leave his wife-mate unprovided for so he passed a key to one of his close friends (another captain) who was to take care of Stella in case of his death. (He sure took care of Stella)

But the other captain, not to break tradition also passed a key to another captain in case of another death in the family. Thus the game of musical keys continued.

Stella, a thrifty girl (not that she is known for thrift) always kept a coat when one of her lovers did not return and by this time has a whole closet full.

Seminoles Face Deacons

IN THE PRESSBOX

By BEN BALSER
Flambeau Sports Editor

After the smoke of last Saturday's grid battles had cleared. word seemed to spread that 1958 was going to be the year he return of wide-open football.

Army, in its 45-8 rout of South Carolina, drove the Game- defense crazy by using a so-called "lonesome end." In formation, the right end is split out to the sidelines about ards.

In doing so he provided a problem for the South Carolina field defenders. This problem became even more acute be- the end never went back into the huddle and Army could ts plays faster than usual.

Out in Norman, Okla., the mighty Sooners of the University Oklahoma, a traditional power team, burst forth with a new offensive system as they buried West Virginia.

Bud Wilkinson's crew ran everything—men-in-motion, split halfback flankers and unbalanced lines—everything that ed so out of character for the usual Oklahoma offensive

Wisconsin, another team that usually wins by pushing the l down the opponents throats, even loosened up a little and ved some wide-open ball to beat Miami, 28-8.

The question than pops up, is there a trend in college football year to open up?

After a brief analysis and chat with FSU head coach Tom ent we answered the question No, not really. As pointed out Nugent, teams all over the country have used wide-open nses traditionally.

The comment on last Saturday's games has come about be- se of one reason. The teams that seemed to open up were the ols that have always been among the top ten in the nation. y have been the teams most constantly in the public eye. And important, they have been the conservative teams.

Conservative being used here in reference to the type of fensive series used. The off tackle smashes, quarterback keeps, ap plays and other similar power plays were used extensively these teams.

Now that some of the top teams in the nation have opened some people have deducted that football is going to open up again

They seem to overlook the fact that teams such as FSU, .. and most of the Texas teams have been playing wide-open he past few years.

An especially good example cited by Nugent is Stanford. Last on in every one of its ten games, Stanford used a split end a halfback flanker. If this isn't wide open, what is?

What might have been the factors that have pushed these big ns to loosen up their offense? Off-hand, Nugent mentioned One obvious force is pro football.

When the pros play their Sunday games they have such wide n games that sometimes each team runs up at least thirty nts The public likes this type football and college coaches ze it

The second reason is the new rule pertaining to liberalized bstitution. Now that a man can enter the game twice in a arter, coaches are willing to take a chance with specialists nce again.

Seek Third Win; Pickard To Start

By PHIL ROYCE
Flambeau Sports Writer

Florida State gets its stiffest home test to date when it meets the surprising Demon Deacons of Wake Forest in Campbell Stadium tomorrow night at 8 p. m.

The Seminoles, stopped in their tracks last week by Georgia Tech, go after their third straight home victory of the season against the North Carolina Deacs who have been the talk of the football world while winning their first two starts this year.

The Tribe defeated Tennessee Tech, 22-7 and Furman, 42-6 to kick off their home schedule on a winning note before dropping a 17-3 tilt to the Yellow Jackets in Atlanta Last Friday night.

Wake Forest, in its opener, astounded just about everyone and shocked Maryland with a 34-0 victory. This win broke a 12 game losing streak for the Deacons Last week the tough Baptists topped Virginia Tech 13-6 in the rain.

The Seminoles expect to see the air filled with passes tomorrow night. Wake Forest has three topnotch slingers in their stable, sophomore Norman Snead, junior Charles (Preacher) Parker, and Charlie Carpenter, senior and Wake Forest co-captain.

SNEAD BOMBS

Snead bombed Maryland connecting on eight of 18 passes for 150 yards and three touchdowns. This performance earned him honors as "ACC Sophomore of the Week"

The Deacons running attack is led by their 198-pound fullback, Neal MacLean. MacLean is the fifth leading rusher in the nation and has rolled up 182 yards on 46 carries

Demon coach Paul Amen has rated MacLean as "a better all-around player now than Bill Barnes was when he was with us." Barnes was an all-America fullback with the Deacs two years ago.

At the halfback spots for Wake Forest will be two senior speedsters, Jim Dalymyple and Buster Ledford. Dalrymple, the left half, blasted for two touchdowns against the powerful Maryland line.

FSU CHANGES

There will be two changes in the FSU starting lineup. Fred Pickard will probably open in the fullback spot in place of Dink Lawrence who has been bothered with an ear infection.

In the Georgia Tech game, Pickard, only weighing 165, was the Seminoles leading ball carrier as he gained 40 yards in ten attempts.

The other change in the Seminoles starting lineup is the elevation of senior Bo Davis to the starting center spot.

FSU will be outweighed again for the fourth straight game The Tribe will spot Wake Forest a nine pound advantage per man. The backfields have identical 178-pound averages, but up in the line, where the difference really counts, the Deacons weigh in 14 pounds better per player with a healthy 201 average

Al Ulmer, FSU's leading tackler will be gunning for the 100th tackle of his career from his left guard position.

Bob Renn, who ranks as the third leading rusher in the nation will be at his usual left half spot for the Seminoles. Vic Prinzi, FSU's leading scorer with 18 points will open at quarterback.

Jack Espenship, the Lake City speedster, will start at right half for the Tribe.

BOB RENN Florida State's triple threat left half is ranked as the third leading rusher in the nation. The senior speedster has a 8.8 average per carry.

Frosh To Test 'Canes Tonight

Florida State pits its freshman football team of virtually unknown quality against the highly-regarded University of Miami frosh here tonight.

The kickoff is set for 8 p.m. in Doak S. Campbell Stadium. Tickets, priced at $1.88 for adults and $.58 for students, will be sold at the gate.

It will be the season opener for the Baby Seminoles, in their first year under Coach Herb Hughes. Miami's yearlings fought to a 14-14 tie in their first game with Mexico Tech two weeks ago.

This year's Miami frosh are touted as being the best freshman team in the history of the university. It was the Miami freshmen who last year handed the Florida State frosh their first collegiate defeat in two years.

Hughes pointed out that the Baby Seminoles are an average freshman squad with average power and speed. "As it stands now, we have no outstanding backfield performer"

According to Hughes, the strong point in the Baby Tribe's forward wall is the center spot. James Chancey, a 195-pound all-state center from Enterprise, Ala., will open and will be ably backed up by Don Donatelli (205) from Pittsburgh.

The heaviest man in the Baby Seminole backfield is fullback Paul Andrews at 190. The Baby Hurricanes will counter with fullback Bill Diamond, a 210-pound Miami product. Miami Coach Whitey Campbell, former star fullback for the University of Miami rates Diamond as a powerful runner and a good defensive man.

Also starting in the Hurricane backfield will be a high school all-America halfback, Jim Bruno, and speedy right half Ron Fritzche. Larry Heninger is the starting signal caller.

Foundation Living Group Adds Two Women's Units

The Southern Scholarship and Research Foundation, Inc. opened two additional houses this fall to accommodate its first 50 Florida State University coeds.

Now in its sixth year, the Foundation, a non-profit organization, has developed a joint work-scholarship plan. This plan places a college education within reach of every brilliant worthy young man or woman without any economic assistance beyond his own efforts.

Both houses operated prior to this year were for male students.

The Foundation realized that the two big expenses for every college student are room and board. Their solution was to provide and maintain houses so that student expenses in these categories would only include wholesale bought food and utilities.

Still paying the university laundry fee plus normal personal expenditures, $30 is the average maximum expense for these students per month.

Thus over the school year the estimated cost for Foundation students runs $476.50, as opposed to the University's $980.00—a saving of approximately $503.50 per year.

Part time jobs and summer working offset these expenses.

To apply for a Foundation scholarship, the student must be recommended by his high school principal and be backed by the faculty.

He must rank in the upper 25% of his class, have been a leader in his school, and have a burning desire to attend college but be unable to do so without the financial assistance which will be afforded by a scholarship.

The calibre of students who have been awarded these scholarships can be judged by the fact that although the average for FSU students on state placement tests is only 312, the average for the Foundation House of Jefferson is 433.

Over 150 semester hours were exempted this semester by the 44 new coeds. They live at the newly acquired Bess and Selby Houses located at 803 W. Jefferson and 620 W. Pensacola respectively.

Both these houses are connected with one of the campus dorms for House Council procedures and abide under the regular university rules. They will participate in the traditional once-a-week teas and intramurals.

Individually, others hava already become members of various campus activities such as the Flambeau and University Singers. Sorority membership is not permitted.

Much initial work had to be done in the two new houses, and some furnishings are still to come. Saturday mornings are usually considered work day, and each student takes his turn cooking, cleaning, and doing dishes.

A Feature

'Students, The Real Story' Behind Scholarship Foundation

By PAT SENN
Flambeau Staff Writer

The story of the Foundation Houses wouldn't be complete with just statistics of exempted hours, grade and financial numbers. Tha real story is in the students.

When you're there, you feel something contagious in the air—something that makes the students seem a little young, makes you feel happy and a little silly yourself. Something that makes it impossible for a reporter to get a decent quote as to how people feel about the work.

The only spontaneous reply that you hear, from Dean of Students Oglesby to the members themselves, is "It's great . . really wonderful!"

OUTSTANDING MEMORIES

Of the tima I spent at the houses a few thinga stand out especially clearly to me — the picture of Warren Gerard, Flambeau photographer, eating dinnar with 24 women at the Selby House (We were their first dinner guests) . . .calling the men's house at 620 Pensacola in the middle of the afternoon and learning that their prize chefs had already started slaving away at the avening meal . . .meeting Dr. Hazen A. Curtis, tha Foundation's secretary-treasurer, domestically poised over the new washing machine at tha Bass House.

Perhaps Selby's house mother, Mrs. Mott came the closest to explaining the real success of the houses when she said, "We had to face all the problems together, and so we learned to live together."

FIRST WAS BARRACKS

I personally would like to have seen the first Foundation House. It was an old barracks out on West Campus furnished with odds-and-ends borrowed from the University. There were eight boys, who had to ride the buses to and from classes avery day.

Once a week Dr Marion Hay of the Education Department loaned them her car for grocery shopping — there were cracked eggs from the wholesale house at 15c per dozen and an old kerosene stove to cook on.

All these fellows worked part time mowing lawns washing cars, etc.; their grade average was 2.95. Now they're all either teaching or working for Uncle Sam.

This year the men see[m] quite happy with the Foun[da]tion's more feminine addit[ion]. Those from 609 Pensacola lo[an]ed everything from ice c[ream] to albow grease to help m[ake] tha "getting settled" easier [for] the Selby coeds.

The more social side of th[ings] will start tomorrow with a p[arty] for the four houses after [the] football game.

In theory lots of things [are] terrific — things that in rea[lity] wouldn't stand a ghost of [a] chance of working. Perhaps pa[rt] of tha Foundation's success [lies] in the men who ara backing [it].

FOUNDED '51

In 1951, Mr. J. Velma K[...] chairman of the Florida Citi[zens] Committee on Education and [of] tha Florida Nuclear Developm[ent] Committee, called together [the] men from the FSU School [of] Education — men who he kn[ew] had had to work their w[ay] through college as he had.

FSU Coeds Paid For Colorado Vacation

Seminoles Ardis Beland and Georgiana Fry have returned to their happy hunting ground—Florida State University—after mountaineering all summer in the colorful state of Colorado.

The two women students had a paid vacation at a YMCA Conference Camp, in Estes Park Here, they worked about 6½ hours a day, six days a week The rest of the time was theirs to spend as they wished—hiking or sightseeing

Miss Beland, a junior majoring in elementary education, worked as a waitress in the Rustic Room, a snack bar, in the administration building What she liked most about her job was the interesting people she met.

"I hiked a total of 200 miles on my days off," says Miss Beland. "My favorite hike was an 18-miler to Long's Peak, the highest mountain in Rocky Mountain National Park

"We started hiking at 3:30 a.m. and reached the top, 14,355 feet above sea level, by 10:45 a.m. In order to reach the karan, or a pile of rocks on the summit which contains a register, we had to hobble over boulders and ascend about 50 feet by a cable," continues the education major. "We just held on to the cable with our hands and walked up, keeping our feet in front of us all the way."

"When we were coming down through the key hole," said Miss Fry, who was also on this particular hike, "we were literally sliding down, catching ourselves with our hands and feet.

"One time I lost my footing and slid two feet before I could catch myself That doesn't sound very far, but I was scared. There was only about a 1000 foot drop to death."

Miss Fry hiked 100 miles during the course of the summer.

Coffee-urn girl was Miss Fry's title at the camp. The sophomore journalism major made coffee for all the conferences plus assisting in the salad and pastry departments.

"Most people don't realize the responsibility of making coffee. I didn't, but I learned fast," says Miss Fry. "The first week I was at camp the Lions' Club had a state meeting. At noon meal alone, 500 men consumed 45 gallons of coffee. I couldn't make it fast enough."

The two co-eds were paid $60 a month plus room and board, barely enough to cover their traveling expenses, sweaters, skirts, and hiking boots.

But a summer in the Rockies was well worth all the money they didn't save.

BONNIE TAPLEY, CHI OMEGA president, and Rosalind Anderson greet alumni Mrs. Harold Richards as one of the first arrivals to celebrate the sorority's 50th year on campus. The group plans a presentation ceremony of a $500 loan scholarship to Florida State University. The scholarship will be presented to Robert M. Strozier.

Pi Kaps Hold Ceremony

Pi Kappa Phi fraternity will dedicate their new patio to Charles T. Henderson, assistant State Attorney General, at two o'clock Sunday afternoon.

Henderson is chairman of the chapter housing corporation and has served as District President of National Pi Kappa Phi for several years He is a graduate of Stetson College and Law School and was a member of Chi chapter while there.

The ceremony will be held between the two chapter houses with actives, pledges, alumnae, and their dates and wives attending

The Pi Kaps also initiated six men into the active chapter on September 21. They were John Lamb, Brick Mason, Bill Green, Charles Delk, Jim Rogers, and Ron Pickett

NEW OFFICERS

Sigma Chi fraternity have the following men serving as officers for the fall semester: Maury McKinney, president, Bill Smith, vice-president; Tom Pendray, treasurer; Bob Poysell, secretary; Harry Reynolds, corresponding secretary; Jack Ryder, associate editor; Phil Schefoley, sergeant at arms; Bob Meier, house manager; John Grimsley, rush chairman; Steve Dunlap, social chairman; and Wylie Poag, pledge trainer.

Zeta Tau Alpha sorority elected new officers to replace those not returning this fall. They are Dean O'Sullivan, vice-president and pledge trainer; Roseanna Kahlel, secretary; and Harriet L'Engle, treasurer. Members attending national convention in Denver, Co. received the Margaret Harrison Best Chapter Award for the chapter.

Strozier Speaks Here Monday

Florida State University President Robert M Strozier will outline the challenges facing this university in 1958-59 when he speaks at the year's first meeting of the Florida State chapter of the American Association of University Professors on October 6

The meeting will be held in the FSU Library Auditorium, in the basement of the building and will begin at 8 p m.

Advanced reports indicate that President Strozier will include in his discussion such current issues as the expansion of the university and its significance, the new faculty constitution, and university finances.

He may also deal with the role of the AAUP in university life, indicating how the chapter and faculty members may be of aid in developing the institution.

A second featured speaker of the evening will be Dr. William J. Tait, president of the AAUP. He will welcome back present members and to extend an invitation to teachers who have not affiliated before.

It is probable that he will also include AAUP's role on a university and even state level.

At a short business meeting that will precede the speakers, officers who have been serving pro tem will be elected. Dr. Tait, the former AAUP vice president, becomes president automatically.

Manuscripts Needed For Lit Anthology

All students and faculty members on campus are invited to submit poetry, essays, or fiction manuscripts to the Literary Anthology, according to editor Mark Austin.

Each submitted manuscript will be given careful consideration by a Literary Board composed of faculty and student members. The published anthology will be distributed widely out of state, and will also be used as a supplementary text for creative writing in a number of Florida high schools.

R. J. Berkley

Physics Assistant Member Of Antartica Expedition

By PATSY GUTHRIE
Flambeau Staff Writer

R. J. Berkley, graduate assistant in the physics department, spoke about his recent stay in the Antarctica as a member of the International Geophysical Year observation team Wednesday night at an open meeting of Sigma Pi Sigma, national physics honorary.

Berkley became interested in the expedition while studying for his master's degree in geophysics at the New Mexico Institute of Mining and Technology

He volunteered for service with the U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey, which was in charge of geomagnetic observations in the Antarctic.

COMBINED STUDY

The IGY is a concentrated effort of numerous countries, including the USA, United Kingdom, and USSR, to discover more about our physical world within a specified time.

Studies are being made into meteorology, geo-magnetics, seismology, ionospheric conditons, cosmic rays, gravity, glaciers, the auroras, and oceanography.

The present IGY, which began July 1, 1957, was to end December 31, but has been extended indefinitely, though on a smaller scale in some areas.

Antarctica was chosen for the site of seven US observatory stations Berkley's group of 27 volunteers had the job of building two of the stations and remaining in one to collect data during the entire year of 1957.

PENGUIN PROBLEM

Berkley said one of the first problems encountered was the penguins. After fencing in the area to be cleared they scooped the animals, which stand about two feet high, into "butterfly" nets and deposited them on the outside Berkley estimated the penguin population density to be about 4,000 per acre.

It took four stabs through the ice pack, which extended 60 to 100 miles, to reach the site of their home station without the aid of a helicopter to spot weak places in the ice The helicopter had been smashed by the bow of the ship after taking off horizontally.

Eight minutes is the survival time in the icy Antarctic waters; the rescue of the helicopter crew was accomplished in three minntes

Berkley's station, Wilkes Station, was located on the Antarctic Circle, 1,600 miles from the South Pole, and was bordered by the Indian Ocean.

COLD NOT BAD

Berkley said they suffered little from the cold, even though the temperature ranged from 27 to 42 degrees and wind velocity was around 50 mph, reaching 106 mph during storms.

They lived in prefabricated houses and wore standard Army clothing for polar regions.

The observation team had plenty of steak, although fresh vegetables were missing from their diet. For water they melted snow.

Auction Sale Coming Up At Laundry

An auction to sell unclaimed articles of clothing accumulated by the University Laundry over the past ten years is scheduled for the near future.

The majority of clothing up for sale is at least a year old and for the most part seven and eight years old, said W J. Gerrell, manager of the University Laundry. Women's clothing comprises the bulk of articles.

The laundry is holding the auction through the Purchasing Department of the University, at the request of the Board of Control.

Only one other such auction has been held in the history of FSCW and FSU, that one being about 13 years ago,

"We suggested to the Board of Control," says Gerrell, "to sell them (clothes) for whatever we could get, to help in the operation of the plant"

As yet there have been no decisions by W R Beyer, Director of Purchasing, as to when or where the auction will be held. A decision is expected within the next week

On Campus with Max Shulman

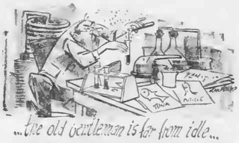
(By the Author of "Rally Round the Flag, Boys!" and, "Barefoot Boy with Cheek.")

HOW GREEN WAS MY CAMPUS

Don't tell me. I know how busy you've been! I know all the things you've had to do in the opening days of the school year—registering, paying fees, finding lodgings, entering a drag race, getting married, building a cage for your raccoon. But now, with all these essentials out of the way, let us pause and join hands and take, for the first time, a long, leisurely look at our campus.

Ready? Let's go!

We begin our tour over here on this lovely stretch of greensward called The Mall The Mall, as we all know, was named in honor of our distinguished alumnus Fred Mall, inventor of the opposing thumb. Before Mr Mall's invention, the thumb could not be pressed or clicked against the other fingers. As a result, millions of castanet makers were out of work Today however, thanks to Mr. Mall, one out of every three Americans is gainfully employed making castanets. (The other two make croquet wickets.) Mr. Mall is now 106 years old and living in seclusion on a sea cliff in Wellington, Kansas, but the old gentleman is far from idle. He still works twelve hours a day in his laboratory, and in the last year has invented the tuna, the cuticle, and lint.



...the old gentleman is far from idle...

But I digress. Let us resume our tour. At the end of The Mall we see a handsome edifice called The Library. Here books are kept. By "kept" I mean "kept." There is no way in the world for you to get a book out of the library . . . No, I'm wrong. If you have a stack permit you can take out a book, but stack permits are issued only to widows of Presidents of the United States. (That lady you see coming out of the library with a copy of Girl of the Limberlost is Mrs Millard Fillmore.)

Next to The Library we see the Administration Building. Here one finds the president of the university, the deans, and the registrar. According to ancient academic usage, the president is always called "Prexy." Similarly, the deans are called "Dixie" and the registrar is called "Roxy." Professors are called "Proxy" and housemothers are called "Hoxy-Moxy." Students are called "Algae."

Diagonally across The Mall we see the Students Union. It is a gay, mad place, frankly dedicated to the fun and relaxation of we undergraduates. Here we undergraduates may enjoy ourselves in one of two ways—with filter or without. We undergraduates who prefer filters, prefer Marlboro, of course. Oh, what a piece of work is Marlboro! The filter filters, the taste is smooth but not skimpy, mild but not meagre.

We undergraduates who prefer non-filters, prefer Philip Morris, of corris. It is a natural smoke, a clean smoke, a flavorful, zestful, pure and peaceful smoke . . . Now hear this: Philip Morris and Marlboro each come in a choice of two packs—crushproof Flip-Top Box or the familiar Soft Pack.

So now, as the setting sun casts a fiery aura over the spires and battlements of our beloved campus, let us hie ourselves to our tobacconists and lay in a night's supply of Marlboro or Philip Morris, and then let us, lowing, wind slowly o'er the lea to our dormitories and sit upon our army surplus cots, spent but content, and smoke and dream and hark the curfew toll the knell of parting day. Aloha, fair campus, aloha!

Seven Burglaries Reported As Thefts Plague Campus

All Occur At Women's Gym; $100 Taken

By BUCKY CANON
Flambeau Editor

A wave of thefts hit campus this weekend culminating with seven robberies reported in the Women's Gymnasium yesterday.

Buck Bryan, chief justice of the Honor Court, estimated total losses at over $100

"These reports come on top of several last week" Bryan said. He added that victims he had spoken with knew or had heard of more cases.

"A definite and full-fledged wave of thefts has broken out," Bryan said.

All thefts have taken place in the Women's Gym. The thieves remove the wallets from lockers, take the money and throw the billfold away

From the Dean of Women's office came word that several thefts had been reported to them last week

Bryan said he has definite reports of $57 being taken, and other reports in which he lacks full details Reports to the Dean of Women's office exceeded $70, he said.

"We've already begun investigating the burglaries," he said, "but we need the cooperation of the students." He urged persons noting suspicious activity to report it to a member of Honor Court.

"Girls should not leave large sums of money in their billfolds or purses and they should try to lock their lockers," he warned.

"The thiefs are not necessarily university students" Bryan pointed out, "since many non-university people have access to university property.

"This has been the case in some past instances" he added.

Two similar outbursts of crime occurred last year The first, in February, culminated with the breaking and entering of Coach Tom Nugent's office.

During that rash of burglaries, cash totaling at least $1,000 and numerous valuable articles and university office equipment were reported stolen.

To curb the situation, a policeman was stationed at the University Bookstore, the Tallahassee Police Department was alerted. The FSU Honor Court cooperated in bringing the crime wave to a halt.

Another wave occurred in April, with major areas affected being the Music Building and again the Women's Gym.

Cabinet Drops Plans To Rival Fall Frolics'

The Student Body President's tentative plans "to rival Fall Frolics" were dropped by Cabinet last week.

In a regular session, the group voted for a "hands-off" policy concerning transportation to and from Gainesville for the FSU-Florida football game November 22.

This scuttles plans for bus arrangements, a motorcade and one or two dances on this campus during the game weekend

"We feel that it is out of the power of student government to force students to return home following the game" said president Art Moore.

"However, we are urging all FSU students to drive safely to and from Gainesville," he added.

Block seats at the game can be obtained by any interested group by contacting Mr. Edward ...bbon at the men's gymnasium

Library Extends Sunday Hours Starting Oct. 19

Beginning October 19 the University Library will be open an additional five hours on Sunday, closing at 10 p m.

Dean of Faculties Charles Davis announced the change Monday after extension of library hours was requested by a Senate delegation

Headed by Ada Leigh Wall, the delegation met yesterday with Dean Davis to ask that library hours, which were 2 p m to 5 p m. Sundays, be extended to 10 p.m.

Following the meeting Davis informed Dr N O. Rush, head librarian that the extension had been approved

BENEFITS STUDENTS

Purpose of longer hours is to benefit students and faculty, especially those with early week assignments who will have additional time to study at the library

However, books may not be checked out during the extension period although the library will be open

Dr Rush said he is not completely satisfied with just having the library open longer "I would like the availability of books to be checked out on Sundays in addition to the extension of hours," he declared.

Extension of library hours has been sought for some time by the Senate, Dr. Rush, and students in general

After a student government campaign and petitions by students, the library began staying open on Sunday nights the spring semester of 1957

However, this was discontinued the following fall and the library has been closed Sunday evenings since that time.

Dr. Rush said delay in extending the hours was caused primarily by "the University's not providing money"

To provide for the additional time, four graduate students will be added to the library staff

If additional help is procured, it is possible that weekday closing hours would be extended to 11 p m . Dr. Rush explained.

'Coffee Hour' Starts Friday

The development of poetry technique since the time of Longfellow and Tennyson will be discussed by Dr. Francis G Townsend at the English Coffee Hour Friday afternoon

Dr Townsend's topic for the Hour is "Toward Modern Poetry." The presentation will be at 4 in the Westminster House, Presbyterian student center.

The lecture, termed "very fundamental and easy to understand" by Dr Townsend, will outline major changes in techniques which have "led toward the trend of poetry today."

Townsend will read from four poems by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, Matthew Arnold and William Butler Yeats to illustrate his points

"The masterpieces of what we call modern poetry are at least a generation behind," Townsend said He cited T S. Eliot's "The Wasteland" as an example.

"We should be able to look at this 'modern' poetry with the same objectivity and historical approach as 18th century poetry, instead of as something new crying for attention," said Townsend.

Seminole Club Closed Saturdays

Since Saturday business has dropped off in the Seminole cafeteria, it will have to be closed on Saturday, said Bob Sanford, General Manager of the food service at Florida State.

"We've been feeding about 150 for breakfast, 300 for lunch and about that many at dinner," said Sanford. "With that amount of business it isn't economically feasible to keep it open," he added.

The Student Center will remain open, however, and Sanford encouraged students to eat there.

Collins Accepts

School Of Business Officially Dedicated

Governor LeRoy Collins officially accepted the new $1,087,500 Florida State University Business School at dedication ceremonies Saturday morning.

An estimated 200 spectators attended the dedication, among them 85 state legislators, representatives from the Board of Control and various faculty members Rainy weather forced proceedings inside to the lobby of the school.

President Robert M. Strozier introduced the four speakers for the occasion: Collins Senator F Wilson Carraway of Tallahassee, Board of Control Chairman James Love and Charles Rovetta, dean of the business school.

In reference to the rain Rovetta said "This would be a happy occasion to us if there were a raging blizzard outside This building is more than an educational tool It represents dynamic new growth of FSU. . ."

CREATIVE AIMS

"It is our aim to create within these walls imaginative thinking which will make our school known throughout the world," he said.

Rovetta pointed out that the collegiate School of Business is a Southern inspiration. Robert E Lee suggested such an educational program in 1869

The Business building is expected to serve until the year 2050, Rovetta said.

Following the official ceremonies, guests were invited to tour the building, which contains about 45 classrooms, offices for faculty and graduate assistants.

Special features of the building are a conference room for business meetings, a small kitchen and a student-faculty lounge.

A large typing room on the third floor will be open from 8 a. m to 5 p. m. on weekdays and 8 a.m. to 12 p.m. on Saturdays for use of all University students. Users need not be Business students.

Woodrow Wilson Fellowships Open To Juniors, Seniors

Juniors and seniors interested in college teaching are urged to consider the Woodrow Wilson Fellowships today by Dr. Weymouth T. Jordan of the History department.

"Fellows are given $1,500 a year plus tuition and fees for graduate work toward a M A" sad Jordan. "One thousand awards are given out annually"

Applicants for the Fellowship must be nominated by a faculty member Awards are given in the fields of social science, natural science and the humanities

Jordan, Fellowship representative here, urged prospective applicants to talk with the head of their department about the Fellowship.

"Our district Florida, Georgia and South Carolina will receive 32 of the Fellowships this year. There's no reason why Florida State can't have a few winners," he said

Milton Carothers, 1953-54 student body president, has been the only FSU undergraduate to become a Woodrow Wilson Fellow in the Fellowship's 13 year history.

Nominations must be made by October 31 A representative of the Fellowship will interview the candidates sometime in January

Applicants are not restricted to their choice of school nor are they ineligible to receive aid from other scholarships or assistantships.

The stipend is granted for one year only, but provision is made for continuation of aid in cases of outstanding and needy scholars.

Two Students In Four-Car Wreck Sunday

Two Florida State University students were involved in a four car collision Sunday afternoon at the intersection of College avenue and Macomb street

There were no injuries but one car was a total loss and damages totaled $580 on the other three automobiles, according to Officer Burl S Peacock, Tallahassee Police Department

Jacob Opper, FSU senior charged with causing an accident and failing to stop at a red light, was traveling east on College when he struck an automobile driven by Earl Bradford, Negro student.

Bradford, who had a green light, was driving south on Macomb when he hit an automobile driven by George J. Leshefka, FSU sophomore. Leshefka was waiting for Bradford to come by so that he could make a left hand turn.

After striking Leshefka's car, Bradford then hit an unattended car belonging to Mrs T. R. Williams which was parked on Macomb street at College avenue.

Bradford's car was a total loss.

Mix-Up May Halt Nuclear Accelerators

A misunderstanding in allocation of funds may render Florida State University's two giant nuclear accelerators indefinitely useless

Funds for the construction of a ... to house control panels have been frozen This connecting wing ... necessary to operate the $1¼ ...lion accelerators, for which housing vaults are already under contract

Dr. Werner Baum, dean of the Graduate school and director of research, says that building of ... floor of the two-story connection would make it possible to operate the accelerators

He said he realizes the financial problem facing the state and does not question any action of the Budget Commission. He believes there has been a misunderstanding about the necessity of constructing some part of the connecting wing to make operation possible

"I realize the state is in a tight pinch" Dr Baum said, "but ... is hoped something can be worked out to build at least a control room where we could push the buttons"

An architectural study began yesterday to determine the cost of minimum construction on the wing, without laboratory space, to prevent the expensive equipment from standing idle.

If the accelerators cannot be operated FSU will have to abandon its negotiations with the Air Force to expand a quarter million dollar contract involving use of the equipment.

The vaults are scheduled to be ready when the smaller of the accelerators, a three million volt tool, is delivered, probably by the end of 1958.

Collins Speaks Wisely

Four years and some months have passed since that fateful May 17, 1954 when the Supreme Court of the United States declared the practice of segregation to be inconsistent with the Constitution.

In the first weeks and months following the decision, there was much confusion and lack of leadership throughout the South. Some public officials went so far as to say their states would attempt to comply with the ruling while many others didn't know which way to turn.

BUT THE OPINIONS of the majority of the South didn't take long to come to the surface. And leaders arose who championed these opinions and declared unswerving enmity to the forces of integration.

So most of the states of the South shouted their defiance of the Court—not realizing or not caring where this course would lead them.

At first they didn't have to care. Their schools were not in immediate danger of integration.

BUT TIME PASSED. Each fall saw new integration orders issued in parts of the South.

Two states have now worked themselves into a crisis. This crisis will only be resolved when the states back down or when the progress of education is set back 50 years.

As it now stands 10,000 children are not attending schools in Virginia and 4,000 in Arkansas.

We don't envy Virginia or Arkansas their position. Nor can we look at them with self-righteous contempt.

FOR THE only difference between integration orders in Virginia and Arkansas and in Florida is time. In time orders to integrate must surely come to the Sunshine State.

But we do feel that the way Virginia and Arkansas have chosen to solve their problem is not the way we want it solved here. Our public schools are too valuable an asset to trade for maintenance of a doomed institution for a few more years.

FLORIDA IS FORTUNATE to have a leader of the calibre of Gov. LeRoy Collins.

Last week he told the Southern Governors' conference:

"IF THE CITIZENS can choose the decisions of the Supreme Court they like to live by and disregard the ones they do not like, law and order will soon disappear."

But at the same conference Collins also recognized that integration is more than a legal problem. Social, phychological and educational problems are involved.

Collins, hailed as a moderate by most, has been criticized by some Northern publications for not working to bring integrated schools into the state.

BUT WE'LL stick by our governor. We think he realizes the transition must come and that there is no use in throwing our educational system out the window in opposing it.

But we also believe Collins is aware of the problems desegregation will bring. And that he will direct the efforts of the state government towards solving and alleviating those problems rather than delaying them by crowd pleasing legislation which will cause serious racial and educational agony in the future.

Cheering Pleased Us

Saturday night saw a football phenomena, as every Seminole rooter stood in the rain as the final buzzer rang down on the Wake Forest game.

No cheerleader had to plead with the crowd to eek out a faint cheer. The stands were in a state that could only be described as sheer shrieking.

SPIRIT REMAINED undampened by the drizzle, and hoarse throats were undampened by spirits.

This was football as we Seminoles seldom see, and we hope it is as here to stay as the omnipresent Tallahassee downpour. This was a stadium-full of undiluted enthusiasm for Nugent's new field-full of fight.

TIME RAN out on a crowd standing stunned and breathless, and not a soul turned to a gate before the zero second.

This indicates only that a little more match-making on the part of our athletic office is certain to captivate coquette-ish spirit.

Serious Column

Deplores American Hyprocrisy

By PAT SENN

One year ano two days ago Russia launched her first Sputnik and we worried about our nation's educational system.

During the last year we again spent more money on liquor and cigarettes than education, while the Bible remanied number one on the best seller's list.

OUR STATE 'must' cut down on school appropriations, and we, Florida State University, turned away 350 students due to lack of facilities, and closed out our School of Journalism

As a natioo we've self-righteously remained very critical of France's lack of enthusiasm toward the independence of her colonies And to wholeheartedly show our respect for independence and individual freedom (plus our concern for education) we blew up Clinton High School last Sunday

THIS ACTION will of course, also have the noble effect of keeping many state and national employees in jobs as they seek these outstanding promotars of our American way of life.

Russia will no doubt seek to keep this lovely American propaganda away from her people as it so clearly speaks for what America stands for nowadays Be that as it may, however, we may be certain that some of our more outstanding educational accomplishments—such as hoola-hooping—cannot help but leak through to those poor, suffering, and persecuted slaves behind the iron curtain

AS AMERICANS, we must always remember that we stand for the same glorious and holy independence that Washingtoo and Henry Patrick and all those other guys atood for It's still worth fighting for—especially when the others are smaller than ourselves and we can walk all over them.

We must also remember that they aren't as good as ourselves and be careful to guard against contamination History proves this point—look what happened to the Nazis because they could not get rid of the Jews fast enough.

So we must always remember to constantly talk—abstractly, of course—about the sound education and wonderful freedom that our country represents. And above all, if it's necessary for a class, we must not think as we read a newspaper or listen to a broadcast, for this might be disastrous to the type of freedom we have in America today

West Hall Snack Bar Has Problems

TO THE EDITOR:

It seems to me that something could be done about the food problem in the Snack Bar of West Hall. Not only is the food of an inferior quality, but the trays and silver are not properly washed

I have worked in hotels and restaurants, and know what has to be done in order to solve this problem. The first step toward achieving some sort of goal in cleanliness is to get the knives, forks, and spoons really clean and free from that oily film that comes from not using hot water

Also the quality of the food is not in my estimation, the quality that could be offered for the same price as in other food establishments

I sincerely hope that this problem can be remedied in the near future

Sincerely,
RICHARD T. BEHRE

Alumnus Praises Drink Column

TO THE EDITOR:

I just received the latest edition of The Florida Flambeau and wish to give praise to the column, "Big Time Drinkers May Cause Accidents", by Mr. Herb Schmuck.

As an alumnus of Florida State University I am deeply appreciative of Mr. Schmuck's appeal to FSU's student body concerning the drinking problem at the football games and other collegiate activities I well remember the appeal made by my good friend and classmate, Martin Dyckman, of several years ago If I remember correctly he, too, spoke in sincere concern about the matter of alcohol and safety of human lives.

Over the past five or six years I have noticed a growing tendency on the part of FSU students to "have" to bring their "bottle" into the football stadium I attended FSU's first football game of this season, and each time I stood to cheer the Seminoles onward I expected to feel a "shot" of "Old Crow" running down my back.

Last Saturday night I went to the FSU-Georgia Tech game and was quite surprised to note that the "Yellow Jacket" fans were far superior than FSU'ers in their "drinking conduct". Oh, their men drank at the game alright, but at least they drank like gentlemen. I think our FSU "drunk boys" could learn a lot from Tech's "drinking gentlemen" — if they just "have" to drink!

As an FSU Fraternity alumnus I would again praise Mr Schmuck for his comments directed toward the problem of fraternity drinking These comments should have been underlined twice It is wise advice not to feed some green freshman pledge a bouquet of "Four Roses" before he has had a chance to "sniff" at them

As Mr Schmuck said " Try a little of that good old-fashion brotherhood and fellowship we hear so moch about. It is yonr duty as active members to exercise this type of influence on the new crop of pledgea in almost every kind of social activity they participate in."

Mr. Schmuck's column was excellent — except for one of his personal comments — "People who preach sermons on the evils of drink disgust me." I should hope that he meant to say that merely "sermons on the evils of drink disgust me", and not the "people who preach." I agree with him almost one hundred per cent on the sermons . . . but . . . about the "people who preach?" We who preach have the same interest or "weakness" as Mr Schmuck — "human life". This is the main task of our calling, you know — to assure "human life" of "safety"

Very Sincerely
ROBERT M. TEMPLE

Writers' Mommies Wouldn't Love Them

DEAR MR. GERARD
AND MR. GUTHRIE:

In regard to your columns in the Florida Flambeau, dated October 3, 1958, we, two freshman co-eds, rise in protest to you outlandish accusations and insults to our intelligence and upbringing

Suppose we do conform and are insecure, weren't you? As to this "Joe with the cool car" business, we think you four-year men are trying to act like B.M.O.C.'s Secondly, suppose we are husband hunting you aren't paying for it. By the way, are you available? How do you think so many college men get caught in that "tender trap" if it weren't for that unfolding glamour act?

THIRDLY, in reading that Kinsey report, did it happen to mention who got those girls "involved"? We highly advise if that report looks encouraging to you that you go ahead and leap without looking (And we do mean off a cliff!)

Yes, our Mommies love us, but yours wouldn't if they could read your article In simple terms, what we think of your opinions couldn't be published.

SINCERELY,
PAT HOUSTON
GENIE OLIVER

P.S. Never call a freshman girl "sweetheart" or you'll never get anywhere in your wife-hunting.

Editor's Note: Columnists Gerard and Guthrie tell me to say "Thanks Sweetheart."

Asks Flambeau For Extra $ If Fees Go Up

TO THE EDITOR:

Are you trying to be funny? If so I fail to see the humor. However if you are serious will you do me a favor?

You see like many others in this university I have to work for a living My salary is a little under that which the veterans get on their G.I Bill This summer I worked and saved enough to pay my fees Will you please lend me the extra $30 I will need to register next semester?

If you find this is not possible may I suggest that you stop yelling for a raise in the fees I need a college education. We do not need a country club!

A Working Boy
BOB DORSEY

Editor's Note: The idea that the Flambeau is hoisting the fee raise on anyone is mistaken. We poor journalists are also counting our pennies. Our columns are, however, open to debate on the subject.

Want To Be Prexy? Run For Office Now

By BUCKY CANON

Want to be President of the Student Body?

Not everybody does, you know. But if you're a freshm[an] you have until 5 p.m. today to get into the race.

Oh, you won't be running for the prexy position this fall. That comes later. Try tackling a minor office first Say freshman class president or senator.

BUT THE PATH to power and glory in student government almost inevitably begins in the freshman class elections.

With one exception all the recent student body prexies began their political careers with a successful campaign for some office in the autumn freshman election.

PERHAPS YOU'RE politically ambitious, but just can't fathom yourself as student body president someday. It makes no difference. The chances of success for any of your political ambitions will be greatly heightened by running for office now.

You don't have to win. A good though losing campaign will be remembered and ought to be a help in the succeeding campaigns

ALL RIGHT, you say, I'm convinced. How do I start?

Beyond telling you to make sure to file for office (write-ins seldom win), this corner can't really issue any sound advice to you.

But there are plenty of people who can. See sophomores who were successful in last year's elections. Or the chairmen of the campus political parties. Or that "guy" in your fraternity who always manages everybody's campaign.

WHAT KIND of campaign will you run?

You'll get all sorts of advice. Have unusual posters Go to dormitory teas Show up at sorority dinners. Get your pledge class behind you. Go through West Hall. Kiss girls in front of Jennie Murphre[e] ...

You'll probably have t[o do] a little bit of all. But ... have to be done with a ... personality and lots of en[thu]siasm.

GREEK MEMBERSHIP ... necessary to win. Independ[ents] have talked themselves int[o of]fices before and will con[tinue] to do so.

But a fraternity or so[rority] eases your problems ... pledge class provides an or[gan]ization which helps wi[th the] busy work that goes wi[th a] campaign.

And they mean upperc[lass]men interested in your ... who have "political" con[nections] and are able to trade ... among the Greeks and p... of free advice to hand o[ut].

Start studying now ... hard because you prob[ably] won't have a chance to ... many books during the ... (and probably two weeks ...) the campaign

SOME STUDENTS hav[e at]tained high political ... without having run for ... thing their freshman ... Arnold Greenfield, last y[ear's] student body prexy, is a[n ex]ample. Arnold had neve[r run] for an office at FSU u[ntil he] ran for president

But his case is the onl[y one] in the memory of FSU po[litics].

For some reason stu[dents] tend to vote for candidate[s al]ready in office. And that m[eans] you should make it now

So if you think student [gov]ernment is worth enough ... you want to be on the ... looking out three years he[nce], walk over to the Long ... Building and file

Still feel like running? G[ood] luck!

What's it like to be a jailbird? Contract three-day mea[sles] or something of a similar painlessly contagious nature ... you'll see.

I did

My predicament made itself known late Friday night. ... news spread through the dorm like rumors of a fire drill H... mothers and old friends delicately detoured around me as if I'd been arrested for gunning down my grandmother.

My first taste of a criminal's existence was the arrival of a pistol-packing campus gendarme who hustled me into his siren-topped paddy wagon and whisked me off to the infirmary.

I entered lugging a semester's supply of textbooks and a toothbrush. The heavy door slammed behind me with a note of brutal finality.

I was questioned. Routine Just the facts, ma'am I waited to be frisked for a concealed weapon; the matrons (correction: nurses) overlooked this detail.

I was shown into an austere second-floor corner room—white sheets, bleak walls, a street-light shining through the venetian blinds giving the effect of prison bars "My cage," I mused dismally.

A white-capped person delivered water and a white pill to my bedside table "This will help you sleep," she said. ". . . and prevent my causing a disturbance," I added. Despondence Nay, despair!

Dangerous Traffic Spots Here

By HERB SCHMUCK

It looks like somebody has thrown a monkey wrench into the whole traffic system at the Florida State University — from the parking problem right down to pedestrian traffic.

Three hundred more cars than last year may be causing the trouble.

West Hall's parking lot which formerly was practically void of any type of conveyance after 9:00 a.m. is now almost filled to capacity by this time. This is greatly due to the completion of the new Education Building

LIKEWISE, tha Student Center parking area, where one was almost always assured of a space, has been the victim of a situation similar to that of the West Hall lot. Only this time it's the new Business School that's causing the big influx of automobiles

Fortunately all is not lost. An old standby, that up to now was frowned upon by most student drivers, has at last come into its own. That poor excuse for a parking lot on the corner of Call and Copeland streets is the only resort for the late sleeper.

In many cases it's a heck of a lot more practical to leave your car at home and walk to class. This happens to be a mandatory ruling at the University of Wisconsin where student driven cars are banned from campus during the normal class hours. Could this alleviate the traffic problem at FSU?

THE REAL SERIOUS problems, however, lie in pedestrian traffic Currently, there are two dangerous pedestrian causeways at FSU. Only the courtesy and vigilance of student drivers has kept the accident rate practically nihil.

One is at the end of "Nowhere" Street That's tha one-way street that intersects with Call in front of the Business School. I call it "Nowhere" because that's exactly where you'll get if ... drive down it between 8:00 a.m and 4:00 p... on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday.

WHEN CLASSES let out in the Busi[ness] School, droves of students make their way d... the long walk bordered by a wire fence, ev[en]tually they empty into Call Street. Then, ... way in this busy thoroughfare, they are met ... another horde of people on their way to clas[s] in the school The result: Chaos on Call Str[eet].

Traffic piles up for hundreds of feet ... either side of the unmarked street. Stragglers a[re] forced to dodge between moving cars driven ... impatient students—already late for classes A[ll] in all, it's one big mess

The other dangerous area extends from ... Women's Gym to the library crosswalk on Ma[g]nolia Drive. There is a continuous flow ... pedestrian traffic across Landis Green bou[nd] for the gym and all points west.

WHEN AUTOMOBILES fill parking spa[ces] on both sides of the narrow street, it is very d[if]ficult for a driver to observe the partially c[on]cealed walker. At any moment someone mi[ght] dash from behind one of those parked cars.

Again the caution and alertness of F[SU] drivers has prevented any serious accidents T[his] is not to say that one is impossible. Many tim[es] automobiles have come to a screeching halt ... ches away from some careless itinerant who ... wrapped up in thought over that date for t[o]night

THE PARKING PROBLEM still looms as o[ne] of the biggest enigmas currently plagueing ... FSU campus. Some people say . . . let's try a[n]other sophomore car ban. I say: Expose the c... of freshmen that are pulling the wool over some[body's] body's eyes with their illegally registered cars.

Deacs Dumped By Tribe, 27-24

IN THE PRESSBOX

By BEN BALSER
Flambeau Sports Editor

n 1954 a fifth string quarterback from Florida State got off nch and passed for three touchdowns against VMI who went o defeat 33-19.

nat same quarterback, now a senior, surpassed that per- nce Saturday night as he led FSU over the favored Demon ns of Wake Forest. It was the best we have ever seen Vic play.

Prinzi, a slender (175), quiet guy, was instrumental in every ida State score except for the pass interception by Herm n.

rinzi's accomplishments for the evening included throwing uchdown passes, completing nine of twelve aerial attempts : yards, running for three first downs, intercepting two Wake passes, one on the FSU goal line and running for his third sive two points in the point after touchdown situation.

NZI WAS SMOOTH

roughout the whole game, Prinzi seemed smooth, poised and eot His ball handling was almost flawless. Vic looked onally capable in his selection of plays.

me after time he caught the Wake Forest defense off guard olled out around the end.

FSU Coach Tom Nugent, who does not usually single out a ball player for an individual performance said, "In my ion, Vic came into his own tonight. It was his greatest ormance."

After Prinzi keyed a drive from the FSU 28 which was climaxed 21 yard TD pass to Bill Kimber, Frank Toomey, the FSU n the pressbox, who was Prinzi's high school coach, com- that it was the best series of plays he has ever seen Prinzi he added, "It takes 11 men to make any play a success." av Charleston, assistant sports editor of the Florida Times- who has seen many an FSU game, said it was the finest al performance he has ever seen in Campbell Stadium.

ERYONE HELPED WIN

But here, we would like to revert to Toomy's statement. was outstanding, but it took the abilities of all the FSU and coaches to bring victory to the Seminoles.

would be hard to think of the FSU win without mentioning like Fred Pickard, who was the leading ground gainer, s the leading tackler, Tony Romeo, who threw many a key and Jack Espenship, who caught four passes for 52 yards.

Bob Renn, fell short of a school rushing record by 11 yards, played a good game offensively and defensively.

Many more names could and should be mentioned, but space is We all realize that if any team ever deserved to win, it he Seminoles, Saturday night.

EAD ALSO GOOD

Speaking of quarterback performances, Norm Snead, the soph caller for Wake Forest, showed that the Deacons will have rterback worries for the next few years.

he rangy Virginian threw 18 passes and completed 10 of which accounted for 199 yards He threw a 40 yard TD the second quarter

Nugent asserted that Snead will unquestionably become a t college and professional player.

Most of the time, Snead threw hard bullet passes. It seemed he let up and looped a pass, it was intercepted. He re- us somewhat of Zeke Bratowski, the former all-America back from Georgia nead was not only a good passer, but was a smart play A good example of this was in the fourth period when the s had a third and ten situation on FSU's 25.

He split his ends wide and sent out a halfback as a flanker. Seminole defense, expecting a pass, loosened up and had five in the defensive backfield.

owever, instead of passing Snead handed to Neil MacLean draw play The big fullback went easily for 11 yards would be safe to say that the record crowd of 19 700 got ney's worth of good football Saturday night.

Prinzi's Passes Hit Twice For Scores

By FRANK RAMOS
Assistant Sports Editor

Florida State's scrappy Seminoles came from behind three times Saturday night to squeak past the 18th ranked Demon Deacons of Wake Forest, 27-24, before a record setting crowd of 19,700.

Using a combination of roll-outs and short passes, Seminole quarterback Vic Prinzi directed the Tribe attack on touchdown marches of 58, 88, and 72 yards.

After the Deacons rolled to an early field goal, the Seminoles quickly countered at the beginning of the second quarter with a six-pointer via a Prinzi to Bobby Renn aerial from five yards out

The drive started on the Wake Forest 42 but three Prinzi passes ate up the yardage that led to the score

But the Deacons didn't take long to come from behind With quarterback Norm Snead directing the Demon attack it took the Demons only four plays to regain the lead.

TD PASS

A 40 yard pass play from Snead to halfback Bob Robinson sent the Deacons to the front.

An exchange of interceptions gave the Seminoles the ball on their own 12. From there Prinzi took over. A combination of rushes up the middle by Lawrence and Renn gave the Tribe a first down.

Then Prinzi handed off to Pickard for five and followed with a roll-out around left end for nine and another first Renn then ripped through the right side for 12 yards. Two quick pitches by Prinzi to Renn and Sophomore right half Jack Espenship set the stage for the score

Fred Pickard slammed through the middle of Wake Forest's line for 25 yards and the touchdown that gave the Seminoles the lead once again

BROWN SCORES

A minute and a half later, Herman Brown, a sophomore end from Auburndale, snagged a Charlie Carpenter pass and raced 55 yards for the score that left the Seminoles with a 21-10 half-time lead

The Deacons came back strong in the second half and didn't waste much time in getting back one of the touchdowns they needed. With Snead uncorking passes good for 22 yards to half back Jim Dalrymple and 24 yards to end Aubry Currie the Deacs moved to the FSU 19.

On a third and four play, Snead sent fullback Neil McLean up the middle for a ten yard gain and one play later MacLean cracked over for the score from the Seminole three.

The Deacons got control of the ball again as the Tribe attack couldn't get moving and was forced to punt. Snead threw passes good for 13 and 19 yards to set up the Deacon score.

Winston Futch carried the ball over from the four to give the Deacons the lead for the third time, 22-21.

But Wake Forest's lead didn't stand long The Seminoles came marching back with Prinzi once again at the helm.

Starting on their own 28, the Tribe took 10 plays to regain the lead for the third and final time. Prinzi passed to Espenship twice, for gains of 16 yards.

Then following two running plays that went for no gain, Prinzi hit end Bill Kimber in the end zone for the score.

From there on it was all defensive work for the Seminoles The Deacons drove to the FSU 26 but Prinzi stopped that attack by intercepting a Snead pass at the one.

But the Demons came back agoin only to have another attack stopped, this time by Espenship as he intercepted a Snead jump pass on the FSU four.

The Demons completed the night's scoring when Joe Majors intentionally allowed himself to be trapped for a safety while trying to kill the clock.

VIC PRINZI, senior quarterback, who directed the Seminoles to a 27-24 upset victory over previously unbeaten Wake Forest. Prinzi passed for two touchdowns and ran for an extra two points.

Miami Crushes Freshmen 44-6

The Florida State freshmen gridders fell to the University of Miami Baby Hurricanes Friday night at Campbell stadium in their first game of the season, 44-6

The Hurricanes scored during every quarter while FSU didn't hit paydirt until the third quarter.

The Miami frosh, running from the split-T, gained 443 yards on the ground and 63 passing.

Within the first three minutes of the game, Miami's Larry Heninger ran 35 yards for the 'Cane' first touchdown.

Jim Bruno scored on a pass from Heninger in the second period for Miami's second TD.

Toward the end of the second quarter, Ron Frizsche, Miami right half drove through the Seminole line to score six more points.

Receiving the second half kickoff, Miami worked its way down field for its fourth score of the night. Fullback Bill Diamond, who gained 74 yards throughout the game, ran three yards for the score.

FSU then retaliated, starting on its own 18 yard line, to make their only score in the game. Six points were gained when quarterback Bill Hampton passed 33 yards to end Jeff Clark, for the score.

The Baby 'Canes finished off the evening with their last two TD's on long runs Halfback Charles Yanda carried the ball 51 yards for a score and the final tally of the night was made when quarterback Jim Ellis, who led Miami in rushing with 76 yards in five carries, went 55 yards around left end for six points.

This loss gives the Baby Seminoles a 0-1 record for the season. The Miami yearlings claimed it as their first win, as they tied Mexico Tech, 14-14, in their first outing game!" I moaned, as announcers Edger and Snider shrieked enthusiastically through my radio

On Saturday afternoon the sun shone once again, cheering me momentarily. Outside, two hefty sweater-clad coeds were posing glamorously and photographing each other. I was morbid. I fancied the only photos I'd ever see of myself would bear a string of numerals under my chin. Sigh.

I noticed a stack of muscle sitting in a car under my window. He was obviously one of the gallant lads who'd lashed Wake Forest the night before, since he was reading a Sunday sports section (all about himself, I surmised), and occasionally inspecting a bandage on his left thumb.

Presentely the young lady our hero had been waiting for joined him, and they drove away. I considered the desolate prospect of being an imprisoned measles case, forbidden to date, for the rest of my natural life . . .

Now I'm not knocking the infirmary; they're real nice efficient folks. It's the solitude that bugs me. It's fantastic how extensively two or three days of total isolation can prey upon one's mind. I'm out now—paroled for good behavior—but it was a horrifying experience.

I believe I've had all my childhood diseases now, but I may have overlooked something. So if you contract anything communicable, please stay away from me. I don't want to ever go back to the infirmary.

Furthermore, I've decided that a life of crime is out of the question. I'd undoubtedly get caught, and . . .

Prison Life Is Not For Me
Therefore Crime Does Not Pay.
Believe Me.

P.S.: The infirmary still has a few die-hard ants.

Dr Francis B Townsend will inaugurate the semester's English Coffee Hours at 4 p.m today in Westminster House.

The subject of this week's English Department-sponsored Coffee Hour will be "Toward Modern Poetry." This is a discussion of the development of poetry technique since the time of Longfellow and Tennyson.

The lecture, includina readings from poems by Longfellow, Matthew Arnold and William Butler Yeats, will outline major changes in technique which have led toward the trend of poetry today."

"It will be a discussion of the present feature that distinguishes modern poetry from that of previous centuries — expression through imagery," Dr Townsend said

HOUR BEGAN '53

The English Department began their first Coffee Hour in the fall semester of 1953. The Hour, originated by Dr W H. Rogers then department head, held its first meetings in the Trophy Room in the Student Center.

This arrangement proved unsatisfactory because it was difficult for the lecturers to compete with the noise made by the band practicing outside. When the Presbyterian student director, Miss Miriam Wilson, offered the Westminster House as a meeting place, the invitation was eagerly accepted.

"The atmosphere of this place was so appropriate to our purpose, that, on their invitation, we have remained there ever since," said Dr. Rogers. Two facts about the Coffee Hour have remained essentially the same: the time and the refreshment. The meetings are always at four o'clock Friday afternoon, and the refreshment is always coffee

RANDEL 1ST CHAIRMAN

In its first year, Dr William Randel served as chairman of the programs. The purpose of the Hour was to introduce the English staff to the students. There were varied staff presentations, an occasional reading, and addresses by various members of the faculty

In 1954-55, under the direction of Mrs. Olive Cross and Dr Russell Reaver, the Hour began its "Meet the Authors" policy. Prominent authors of Florida spoke, including Frank Slaughter and Philip Wylie.

It was on these two occasions that the Coffee Hour moved from Westminster House to Westcott in order to accommodate the large crowds that attended.

Under Dr Rogers in the 1956-57 year, the Hour featured personal experience travelogues, projected pictures, book reviews and the like.

Each week, a committee of six staff members is responsible for preparing and serving coffee. They also act as clean-up crew The expense of the Hour is borne by contributions each month from staff members.

Educated Buzzard Calls Off Classes

Some educated buzzard found his way into a political science classroom and committed suicide.

Dr. Elston Roady of the Political Science Department reported that a dead buzzard was found Wednesday morning in room 222 History Building

"Some kids just don't realize how pungent the odor of a dead carrion bird (one who eats putrified flesh) is."

Air wicks, fans, etc. were utilized by History Building custodians until classes were able to resume.

Controversy Continues On Naming Of Campus Streets

Between Senate, Philosophy Prof.

By VIRGINIA DELAVAN
Assistant News Editor

Controversy over street-naming continues to rage between Student Senate and Dr. Robert H. Miller of the philosophy and religion department.

Dr. Miller, head of the campus "naming committee" has complained to President Robert M Strozier about the slate of names proposed by Senate last Spring. The names were scheduled to be approved or rejected by the Board of Control this month.

Miller, who has already approved four of the eight names, says he feels that "Some pattern should be established with all names conforming to this pattern." His eaamples of such patterns are alumni, geographical or floral names

The list finally approved by the Senators last year, after receiving and studying student suggestions, is: Florida Drive Magnolia Lane, Collegiate Lane Seminole Lane, Ivy Lane, University Circle, Varsity Driva and Chieftain Drive

Senator Pat Mickler, head of the street-naming committee, reported Wednesday that she had met with University Vica-President A. B Martin to discuss the impasse the Senate seems to have met.

Final decision was to send the names back to Miller and his committee with the explanation that "We (the senators) have considered this thoroughly and do think the names are appropriate," said Miss Mickler.

The names, if approved by Miller this time, will go to Dr Strozier and from him to the Board of Control.

PARKING PLANS

The Senate also heard a report from the committee to study the campus parking situation Bruce Brown, chairman.

Brown conferred this week with Bill Cullom, assistant business manager, on the parking problem brought about by construction of the new Education and Business buildings.

Cullom said he is disappointed that students have not fully utilized the new one-and-a-half block parking lot at the Men's Gymnasium This lot was paved to take care of the overflow of cars from the Education Building, he said.

Two lots to accomodate from 75 to 200 cars each are pending completion of the so-called "perimeter road" to run from the West Hall underpass to behind the Conradi Building.

These lots, for which plans have already been made, will be situated to the rear of the Education and Business Schools.

Brown said that Cullom expects these measures to be completed by the end of 1958

COMMITTEES APPROVED

The Elections and Appointments Committee, chairmaned by Diana Holroyd, approved President Art Moore's appointments to three committees. Three tentative appointees were dropped because of low grades, and one more, Rebel Bellamy, was added to the Honor Committee

Accelerator Fund Mix-Up Being Cleared

By MARK AUSTIN
Flambeau Staff Writer

A misunderstanding in allocation of funds which might have rendered Florida State University's two giant nuclear accelerators indefinitely useless is being cleared up, a University official announced yesterday

Last Saturday the State Budget Commission, in an attempt to cut allotments, discontinued the constructioo of a unit which would house the control panels for the FSU nuclear accelerators.

The housing for the nuclear machines is under contract and that construction is proceeding, Dr. Werner Baum, Director of Research said, but the two-story-high wing which conoects the accelerater vaults and contains the control rooms has been stricken from the hudget

'IN A PINCH'

"I realize the state is in a tight pinch, but it is hoped something can be worked out to build at least a control room where we can push the buttons," Dr. Baum said last Tuesday.

The University has already contracted for the nuclear machines at a cost of 1.4 million dollars. If all construction on the connecting wing is discontinued, these machines will stand idle.

FSU will also have to abandon its negotiations with the Air Force to expand a quarter million dollar contract involving use of the equipment.

"I don't believe this will be permitted to happen," Dr. Baum said Tuesday. "Oovioualy, there is some misunderstanding and I think something will be done to utilize that equipment.

"This is a highly technical matter," he said "People (the Budget Commission) who understand this complicated matter in a broad sense could have misunderstood the situation."

University officials said yesterday that the matter would very probably be cleared up soon, and some provisions made to construct a control room for the accelerators.

Creative Writing Text Goal For Anthology

The ultimate goal of the literary anthology, "58," is its usage as a textbook for creative writing, Editor Mark Austin told the board of publications at a called meeting Wednesday afternoon.

Austin emphasized that the anthology group is not interested in incorporating the literary magazine into the Board of Publications at this time, but hopes that if it is successful it can eventually become part of the university publications

The anthology has been discussed with Thomas D. Bailey of the state board of education. Bailey informed Austin that the literary magazine will have an opportunity to be considered as a supplementary text in high school English and journalism classes

HIGH SCHOOL ORDERS

"Some Florida high schools have already indicated an interest in the anthology by buying subscriptions," Austin told the board. Every high school in the state, both public and private, received a letter from the anthology staff.

"The anthology is being sponsored by the English honorary, Sigma Tau Delta," Dr. Claude Flory, technical advisor of the magazine, told the board. "It has the unanimous backing of the faculty which feels that the anthology will encourage qualified students inside and outside the organization (English department) to have their work printed."

The honorary will be responsible for any deficits the anthology encounters, according to Austin.

WON'T RIVAL 'SIGS

Austin does not feel that "58" will be a rival of "Smokes Signals" which is a humorous magazine. The editor informed the group that "Survival," by Sean Cleary, which was printed in "Smoke Signals" last spring, will be one of the stories in "58"

The board was asked for any suggestions for obtaining more subscriptions Tom Hale, chairman of the board, said that the board would discuss the request at their regular meeting next Thursday.

"Only 500 FSU students have ordered a "58," Austin pointed out. "But with orders that have come in from high schools, there are now around 1000 orders

"We have $550 in reservations and over $100 in the bank. All our expenses up to now have been paid but I feel that we still need about $50 to be safe," the editor concluded.

Anthology Manuscripts

Manuscripts for the 1958 Florida State Literary Anthology are now being accepted at the Director's Office in the Longmire Building.

Parking Rules Termed Lenient By Dr. Carr

By HERB SCHMUCK
Flambeau Staff Writer

"We don't realize how lenient we are being treated with regard to parking regulations," said Dr. James F. Carr, chairman of the FSU Student-Faculty Traffic Committee.

"There are some universities that charge as much as $60 a year for parking privileges," he added.

Dr. Carr spoke at the committee meeting Wednesday afternoon. Present were faculty committee members Dr Carr, Dr. Vincent Thursby, Dr. Griffith Pugh, William H Watson, William O. Cullom, J. B. Sharman, and students Jim Apthorp and Nancy Denham.

Among the items of business was a ruling concerning freshmen who may be illegally operating automobiles on campus Those freshmen who were granted temporary permission to operate an automobile because they lived more than one mile from the FSU campus and who since have moved nearer to the university are liable for disciplinary action, it was pointed out.

CONTACT DEAN

Dr. Carr advised that all freshmen who may be violating this ruling contact the Office of the Dean of Men immediately, before they are reprimanded by administrative officials.

A request by Army ROTC Head Colonel Charles Calhoun for fourteen reserved parking places near the congested ROTC area was heard by the committee

"The parking problem is bad enough for students and faculty members, and now the military wants special privileges," Dr Pugh observed

William H Watson, FSU Safety Coordinator, added that they (ROTC Command) are no more than a hundred and fifty yards from the largest parking area on the entire campus

An investigation of the problem will be carried out by the committee before any action is taken in regard to this request.

In another item of business, the committee passed a motion to install five-minute parking spaces directly adjacent to the University Post Office. These spaces are designed for the use

No Breaks In Campus Thefts

Nothing new has broken in the rash of thefts here, Buck Bryan, chief justice of Honor Court, said yesterday

"I've conferred with Dean Warren and Dean Loucks and no new cases have been reported this week" Bryan said. Neither have any names been turned in, he added

Bryan said it has been reported to him that many lockers were being left open at the women's gym and wallets were being left around

"I know we have an honor system," he said, "but let's not give the thiefs an open invitation."

Seven cases of stealing from wallets at the Women's Gym were reported to Honor Court last Monday Over $100 was missing.

Bryan urged students to continue their vigilance. The thiefs may be laying low for a few days, he said.

TEAM SENDOFF URGED BY PREXY

Talk is going around campus that the Seminoles play some team from north of the State Line over in Jacksonville tomorrow.

It's also been heard that the team will depart via air tomorrow just before noon.

"Let's be at the airport and give 'em ye olde send-off," urges Student Body President Art Moore

Moore also suggested that students who are in Jacksonville for the game could welcome the team when they arrive at the Capri Motel around 1 p.m.

The Seminoles will leave Jacksonville at 10.45 a.m. Sunday, arriving back at Dale Mabry Field around noon.

We Join In Mourning Loss

Perhaps the most difficult editorial to write is one lamenting the death of a great and good man. The man can be described, his accomplishments listed, and a sense of loss recorded. But a few hundred words are incapable of separating the feelings about this man from those of other men. Words are too limited to accomplish this task.

Here, however, the Flambeau would like to join the free world in mourning the passing of Pope Pius XII. It is a cause for sorrow to the earth's peace loving citizens as well as to those of the Roman Catholic faith.

FOR ALMOST 20 years, in a world torn by many wars, political hatreds and economic strifes, Pius XII has stood as a guiding light for the cause of peace. Peace and brotherhood.

The tasks which Pius carried out would have broken a weaker man. But the spiritual leader of the world's 400,000,000 Catholics never faltered in his duties, never relaxed his vigilance and never compromised his principles.

THE FREE WORLD owes a debt to this slender, religious man. Without his moral leadership during the trying years of Facist and Communist aggression against the minds and bodies of human beings throughout Europe, our Western civilization would be in worse shape than it is now.

We Americans will remember Pius for his interest in our country. Before becoming Pope he made an extensive visit here. After his ascension, he appointed five American cardinals and canonized Mother Frances Xaxier Cabrini, the first United States citizen to be raised to sainthood.

HISTORY WILL remember Pius XII for his early recognition of the dangers of nuclear warfare, for his steadfast opposition to the Communists and his refusal to yield to them the control of the Church behind the Iron Curtain.

He can be credited with strengthening the resistance of church officials in Hungary, Yugoslavia, Poland and even the Soviet Union.

BUT MOST OF all he will be remembered as the "Pope of Peace." He probably would wish it this way.

In a few weeks the College of Cardinals will meet to select a new Pope. No prominent candidate has stepped forward yet, but whoever succeeds Pius XII will be filling the shoes of a truly worthy Pope.

No Provincialism On Court

Like lightning the resignation of Justice Harold Burton and the naming of an Ohio Federal Judge, Potter Stewart, has struck us.

Now the muttering has started. It will probably continue until Stewart's appointment is confirmed by the Senate sometime next year.

FROM THE SOUTH—chafing under recent Supreme Court integration decisions—come cries of anguish that a Southerner was not appointed to the position.

Two Florida Congressmen — Senator George Smathers and GOP representative William C. Cramer — have hinted opposition to the new appointee on the basis of the fact that he is a non-Southerner. In a telegram to the President, Cramer asked Eisenhower to name "a Southerner . . . who will take an interest in the South on constitutional law."

NOW THE South already has two justices on the Court. Both Justice Black of Alabama and Justice Clark of Texas were born, educated, and held public office in Southern states.

The South doesn't want a Southerner on the Court; they want a segregationist.

We do not hold with the idea of provincialism on the Court. If the Founding Fathers had desired the Court to be set up in a sectional manner, they would have incorporated such a regulation into the Constitution.

JUSTICE STEWART seems well qualified for his new office. He comes from a family of lawyers and judges, has served for six years on the Circuit Court of Appeals and has the endorsement of the American Bar Association.

He shouldn't have any trouble being confirmed by the Senate.

Fourteen Year Old Co-ed At USC

By KAY WRIGHT

From the University of South Carolina comes news of a fourteen-year-old coed, Pixie Foster, an entering freshman at the University.

Five foot two, this petite brunette miss is an aspiring actress at the age of fourteen. Pixie, also an accomplished ballerina, lives in Columbia, S. C., with her parents. She has entered Carolina this fall after completion of the ninth grade at Crayton School in Columbia.

HER DECISION to skip three years of high school has earned her publicity on both a state and national level. Newsweek carried her story in its September 15 issue.

Pixie's major at present is journalism although in the future she hopes to earn a degree in Art. When interviewed by a staff writer of Carolina's paper, The Gamecock, Pixie reported that she was "rapidly adjusting to college life." She did say that she planned to wait before entering campus activities or joining a sorority.

When asked if she wished to graduate early (three years) Pixie answered: "No, I will graduate in four years. I do not think my decision to skip high school will greatly affect my future. This will only make my future come earlier."

Pixie's plans after college include studying dramatics in New York, with an eventual Broadway career.

Emory University's Wheel invited students to vote on whether they think Russian should be in the school's curriculum.

Forty-eight students at the Georgia university said they would definitely be interested in taking the course; forty - two others said Emory should offer Russian. Two students said no.

Wheel Editor Lewis Smith said the Wheel did not "feel the small number of ballots was a derogatory factor. We were primarily interested in demonstrating that such a course is not only desirable but also that there are enough people interested in taking it to make it worthwhile to the university to offer it."

If FSU coeds feel they have room to complain about dating regulations, I ask you to note the regulations for Mississippi State coeds given in The Reflector.

These are the time limits: Sunday through Thursdays 10:25; Fridays 10:55; and Saturdays 12:30. Special late permission is given for fraternity parties and for the campus dances held in the cafeteria.

To fellow FSU coeds: Count your blessings and your free Saturdays! !

Student Union Will Merit Fee Raise

By MARK AUSTIN

Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity sent [illegible] Governor yesterday.

They asked him to support the [illegible] to "raise student fees from $75 to $100 per semester."

The telegram said, "We believe that these additional funds are needed for the Student Union project and an expanded student (activity) budget."

When you go to the Governor, it's an important thing.

AND I THINK it is time to stop and take a look at the background and reasons for a move that may affect us all.

For one thing, if this move passes the state legislature it is not only going to effect the pocket-books of each of us, but it is going to touch the 11,000 students at the University of Florida.

So why raise the fees?

Well, let's look at the background.

IF YOU'VE BEEN reading the papers lately, you know that some people around the state are mad at us because we aren't paying enough of our own way—we're costing the state too much. The State Auditor said a week ago, that FSU was costing the state twice as much per student as it was ten years ago.

Now, go down to the library and find out how much students are paying at the other colleges in Florida.

The first thing that will hit you is the University of Tampa—registration fees $207.

THEN STETSON—$225. Then Miami—$275. And so on.

But, you say, none of these are state schools, and state schools are supposed to be lower.

OKAY. But while you are in the library look at some of the state schools. Even the ones in the South.

What do they average, you say? Well figure it out yourself. Louisiana State is $65, Mississippi State is $81, North Carolina $110, Alabama $120, and South Carolina is $155.

Well, maybe the people around the state do have a reason to be mad at us.

BUT YOU DON'T want to pay extra money just to have a Student Union you say. No indoor-outdoor swimming pools. You want an education, not a "country club." And besides even if you would like to have a nice place to dance or hold conferences . . . well, the Student Union isn't going to be built in your time.

Well, that depends on what year you are in, but the point you're missing is this: your whole registration fee is not spent on a new Student Union, or for Student Activities. Out of your fee comes money to support these things, but also money to pay bond issues, building construction, health fees, and other important things.

No one can say exactly how this situation is going to turn out. But one thing seems certain. The whole campus is lining up in two camps. One group is primarily concerned with their individual pocket-books. The other group is trying to figure out what is best for the University over the long range of time.

What Does Individualism Mean?

By DIANE GODIN

Walk into any class in any building and take a look. The temporary inhabitants of the average classroom look pretty much the same, buckle-studded bottoms on four or five straight rows of wooden chairs. Unless they have forgotten it, they will all have the same book open in front of the same expression.

This is not unusual, but it is as fare as the "sameness" should go.

TOO OFTEN, behind that same expression lies the same ideas, beliefs and thoughts, all derived and accepted from the same course, book, or professor.

Of course, it is much simpler for the faculty and staff to keep the throng as alike as possible. Avoids confusion. Much easier for handling mobs.

BUT IS ANY UNIVERSITY the place for mob-thinking? Is there any place for individual thinking except in the soda-shop? There is little place or time in a general ed. course of 200 students to raise a question. And expressing a personal opinion would be out of the question, as any student doing so would be selfishly cutting facts out of the notes of many dozens of his classmates.

There are few opportunities for individual thought in the university's requirement - crowded curriculum. And when opportunity does come knocking, it's knocking on wood . . . that portion above the average button-down collar.

AN EXAMPLE of this would be the English 101 student, who upon being told he is to write a theme on any subject, can't find one. In three more years, at 21 same student may possibly be able to decide whether he wants Bud or Millers, but can he decide on who to vote for?

The university can perhaps eleviate the problem with another required course in "How to think for yourself." Or they could even make it an elective so the students can decide whether they want to think for themselves or let the administration and mama keep the job.

SOME STUDENTS are feared to be living under a misconception as to what individualism means. No, it does not mean painting opinions on racial segregation on public property. This is somewhat radical if not destructive.

All it means is being able to think for yourself. It would be good if more graduates left with their degrees feeling like the product of an institution of higher education rather than the sum of so many IBM machines.

Vocational Courses Hinder Our Prestige

By HERB SCHMUCK

Exactly what is a vocational course? Is Hotel Housekeeping 365? . . Kitchen Planning 406? . . . or maybe Principles of Baking Bread and Rolls 201-202?

Last Monday night I was fortunate enough to be on hand to hear Florida State's president, Dr. Robert M. Strozier, deliver an informal talk to the FSU chapter of the American Association of University Professors.

DR. STROZIER uttered some very openhanded comments criticizing FSU for having "too many purely vocational programs." Is he justified for holding these opinions? I think so. Some of my friends don't. They are mostly Restaurant and Hotel majors.

Let's look at the subject objectively for a moment. First of all, any true and upstanding Baking Science major would want to defend himself thusly:

"Why, I take some of the hardest courses in the university. Everybody knows that "247" (Organic chemistry) is one of the most difficult courses the chemistry department has to offer."

PERSONALLY, I fail to grasp the significance of knowing quantitative chemistry, organic chemistry, and general bacteriology in order to bake a pound cake.

Dr. Strozier said that vocational courses should be taught in vocational schools or junior colleges. Now we are getting someplace. The entire problem is solved by the above statement. These courses may be significant to the people who are engaged in learning them but should they be taught in a university?

WHAT DOES THE word university connote to you? To Dr. Strozier, FSU should be one of the centers of Liberal Arts Education in the South. He wants a better humanities program — a firm accent on foreign languages and the fine arts.

To me, the word university brings to mind—chemistry, physics, engineering, and the professions: law, journalism, and medicine, to mention a few.

SPECIAL SCHOOLS should be formed, apart from the universities, to meet the needs and requirements for some of those "purely vocational" courses of study offered in so many American institutions of higher learning.

Ultimately, this measure might serve to elevate the prestige of American universities to a plateau enjoyed by many European universities.

Fee Raise Hurts Vets; Some Frolic On Father

LETTERS to the EDITOR

TO THE EDITOR:

After having read at least two recent suggestions for an increase in registration fees, and, owing to the particularly unrealistic and onesided manner in which this increase was defended by the two sources, we, the undersigned, felt constrained to offer argument.

CERTAINLY it detracts nothing from these two gentlemen to say that obviously they are men of independent means and that an extra $25 a semester on the paternal check means little or nothing to them. We venture, however, that the impact of such an increase on the many married and unmarried serious graduates and undergraduates would be considerably greater and has not been properly gauged.

The average half time assistantship administered by this university is about $185 a month before taxes, retirement, etc. Budgeted with care the remainder of the married student's check will support life.

If he is not on the university's payroll as a teaching or research assistant (while also carrying a full load of courses) then perhaps one or the other of the GI bills is supporting him.

WITH A WIFE a veteran receives $135 tax free for each full month of enrollment. This small amount was not intended to support completely the veteran and it certainly doesn't. The student assistant jobs are, for the most part, not sufficiently remunerative because of the limit of 100 hours that a student may be employed and the generally low rate of pay.

Where does this leave the serious student with many responsibilities and obligations to meet? Maybe he is employed somewhere downtown. The stringent grade, performance and time requirements of graduate work and that undertaken by the serious undergraduate deny them this opportunity.

ONCE INTO the high level courses, books take a sudden and meteoric rise in cost. It seems, also, that every course must have a breakage card for admittance. Even now at the current rate, the payment of these fees has become a real problem.

These are not the students who cavort in heated student union swimming pools or yearn for free juke boxes or outlandishly suggest such ridiculous thing as has been advanced in one of your columns—but these are the people who are doing work at the university level and upon whom rests the real reputation of Florida State University.

Sincerely,

William H. Lindsey, Grant W. Reinert, Rhodes B. Holliman, Gilbert C. Hughes, Albert A. Latina, Robert E. Megraw, Wesley Whiteside, John G. Stuckling, Jr., Guida Contreras, Robert Tcholakian.

Columnist Sets Music Policy For Year

By DIXON REDDITT

It has seemed in the past to be a common practice for anyone even vaguely interested in writing a music column of any kind, to start out by stating his alleged aims and beliefs concerning this type of writing.

We pointedly ignore the possibility that this may not be a valid tradition and straightaway present a doctrine concerning musical criticism and which must necessarily be the most erudite yet. That is, we quote from M. D. Calvocoressi, as paraphrased in Willi Apel The Harvard Dictionary of Music.

"There are three main considerations which enter into the mental activity of the critic: (1) "predispositions," (2) "direct data", (3) "Indirect data."

THE FIRST of these is the critic himself, his personality, temperament, experience, biases, etc. The second, is the composition as written and performed. The third includes numerous accessory facts, such as knowledge previously acquired about the composer from other compositions or through outside information; about his position within the general development of music or within a particular school; about the relationship of the composition to others of the same composer, etc.

To separate these considerations and, in particular, to avoid undue prevalence of the personal "predisposition" over the factual "data" is the foremost task of the critic.

EVEN MORE important, perhaps than theories, and methods of music criticism are certain qualities, not frequently combined in one individual. For instance: practical and theoretical knowledge of music in its various fields, literary talent; a wide spiritual horizon; a great feeling of responsibility, a character in which sensitiveness, benevolence, sincerity, and fearlessness are coupled with tact and some degree of diplomacy; finally that scent for the new, valuable and important, which is the outstanding trait of the specific critical talent."

One can easily see that this thoughtful estimate of the "critical talent" is applicable to criticism in any field with only minor changes of terminology.

These lofty and somewhat "ivory-towerish" ideals must be relatable in some way to practical critism on the Florida State campus. We also believe that a slight tinge of the didactic is not amiss. And so we shall write in this frame of ference for a few months until we establish our next set of irrevocable standards.

Learns Of Indonesia

Gains New Insight At Bull Session

By ED CARHART

It started off as just another bull session with some of the boys from adjoining rooms gathering around the desk helping my roommate and I solve the problems of the world.

The conversation, which had turned to politics, was interrupted by the entrance of an exchange student who had been called in by a friend in the group. He was introduced to us as Hugo De Jeger, a graduate in sociology. At first Hugo sat quietly listening to the conversation, then his friend David Lee asked him to tell us about his experiences in Indonesia.

HUGO BEGAN speaking in a quiet, earnest voice with a slight accent that lent flavor to his words. Hugo was Dutch but was born in Java while his father was there teaching in a government school. When World War II broke out, the Japanese occupied the country. Hugo's family was separated and sent to different concentration camps. After being shuttled from one camp to another, he finally ended up in a camp called Tjimahi IV, not far from the city of Bandoeng where he was born.

Someone asked what he thought of the rebellion that had raged in Sumatra this summer and Hugo's answer surprised me.

"I, like a great many other people, was sorry to see the rebellion fail," he said. When I asked the reason for this he went on to explain the situation in Indonesia today.

THE REPUBLIC OF INDONESIA is made up of many islands embracing many different peoples. Just prior to the end of the war, the Japanese set up a native government and when the Dutch returned and tried to resume control they encountered great resistance. Through the offices of the United Nations the United States of Indonesia was formed with Sukarno as president. As Sukarno consolidated his position he annexed many of the islands surrounding Java and formed the Republic of Indonesia.

The people of many of these islands bitterly resented being ruled by the government on Java and rebellion broke out in many areas. A group of islands in the Molucca Sea tried to form a separate republic or remain under Dutch control rather than be ruled by the Java Government. When they failed, many fled to Holland, especially those who had served in the Dutch Army.

MOST AMERICANS are not aware of the great opposition to Sukarno's regime and Hugo explained that few people outside of Indonesia realized the many areas of opposition to the Sukarno government.

To make matters worse, Sukarno made a visit to Russia and Red China and came back professing a great admiration for their achievements and formulated his own plan which he called "guided democracy."

At this point many of his most able government colleagues resigned, for they refused to be associated with his policies. The internal strife of the country steadily worsened and many of the islands were scenes of armed rebellion.

WHEN THE NETHERLANDS government refused to turn a section of New Guinea they controlled, over to the Indonesians, reprisals were made against the Dutch people living in the Republic. Conditions were so bad that a mass exodus of the Dutch followed.

We had read of the economic chaos that struck Indonesia as a result of these developments and began to understand the reasons for Hugo's opposition to the present government. Hugo pointed out that as a result of Sukarno's sympathy to the Communist Chinese a severe crackdown was taking place against the Nationalist Chinese living in Indonesia.

IF THE REBELS had succeeded in their fight the new government would have been just as anti-Dutch as the present one, but the Western world would have had a reliable ally in a strategic area. This, in Hugo's mind, was solid reason for hoping for their success.

When the session broke up and everybody returned to their rooms, I sat thinking about the conversation that had just taken place. Although there had been no textbooks and a dorm room had served the class, I had gained a new insight into a strange country, halfway around the world. Without my realizing it, my education had been enriched.

Place a large, 6-3, 220-pounder over the ball; beside him put a pair of rugged 200-pound guards that can really move; next to them a set of tackles which go well over six feet and 200 pounds. Flank this whole line by a pair of big, rangy and fast ends.

Now move to the backfield—at quarterback, a lean fellow, about 6-1 who can pass, run and has a lot of football savvy. Behind him two halfbacks who have the speed to run outside and power to run inside.

Top off the backfield with a 200-pound fullback who is always good for those few needed yards in a desperate situation. Coach the team by a man with 30 years coaching experience.

DREAM TEAM

Sound like a dream team? Well, it's not, it's reality. It's the 1958 edition of the Georgia Bulldogs and the Seminoles will find it's reality when they meet those Georgia boys tomorrow night.

Needless to say, Georgia's record thus far is not indicative of its potential. If footballs had been built with handles on them, it is probable that the Bulldogs would have three victories right now and not three losses.

Fumbles and a few careless mistakes were the reasons that the Bulldogs lost to Texas, Vanderbilt and South Carolina this year. We're not trying to make excuses for Georgia, we just don't like to see them underrated on the basis of their record.

Win or lose Saturday night, the Seminoles will know they have met a football team, probably one of the toughest, if not the toughest they will meet this year.

The FSU coaches who scouted Georgia, Hugh Adams and Corso fully respect the rough and ready crew of Wally Butts.

ELEPHANT PARADE

After Adams had observed Georgia's spring football game he came back to Tallahassee with this report, "It was the same old Georgia. They just rolled out the elephants and locked horns."

On a TV show the other night, Corso related how he has seen Georgia drive down the field in offensive spurts that would score against any team in the nation.

In their opening 13-6 loss at the hands of Texas, Corso saw the Bulldogs start on their own five and drive 95 yards for a score against the tough Texas line.

Texas is no pushover, as it is the only undefeated team in the Southwestern conference. An interesting sidelight is that this 95 yard drive was directed by Georgia's second team quarterback who is only a sophomore.

Last week, Georgia Tech coach, Bobby Dodd was asked if he thought the Seminoles could beat Georgia. He replied that FSU has a fine team, but the Bulldogs have the goods and potential to surprise the Tribe if they correct their mistakes.

He even admitted that they had the power to crush his Yellow Jackets.

In preseason predictions, Georgia was not rated too high in the SEC but it was tabbed as the darkhorse or surprise team of the conference.

NUGENT'S OPINION

Nugent's opinion of Georgia ran something like this, "We have great respect for Georgia. We know how tough Georgia is. We know Georgia can move the ball against anyone."

Knowing Wally Butts' teams, you can be sure the Bulldogs will be "up" for this game. The question is, will the Seminoles? They will have to play the same quality of ball, or even better, than they played in downing Wake Forest last week. They will have to move in high gear the whole game.

There can be no letdown in spirit because if there is, FSU will find one Bulldog whose bite is as bad as his bark.

CHARLEY BRITT, Georgia's ace quarterback, is expected to throw plenty against the Seminoles tomorrow night in the Gator Bowl.

FSU Slight Favorite To Whip Bulldogs

By BOB SLUSSER
Flambeau Sports Writer

Florida State's sophomoric Seminoles will be out to break the SEC jinx when they take on the Georgia Bulldogs tomorrow night in Jacksonville's Gator Bowl.

Most of the football experts have rated FSU as a slight favorite over the Bulldogs. The point spread is from one to three points.

Although the Bulldogs have yet to win a game this season, Florida State Coach Tom Nugent is looking for a real battle. "Any team playing Georgia had better prepare for an onslaught on offense. Georgia has looked great at times and when they get mad, they really go."

The game will mark the ninth time FSU has gone against an Southeastern Conference team. The Seminoles have come out on the short end of the score every time.

State has been beaten three previous times by Georgia, lost three times to Auburn and three times to Georgia Tech.

In the last meeting in 1956, Georgia slipped by the Tribe on a field goal, 3-0.

STOP BRITT

The Tribe's defense will be geared to stop the short, quick passes of the Bulldogs' quarterback Charley Britt. Against South Carolina last week, Britt passed for 135 yards and ran for 46 more to push his season total to 328 yards on 64 plays.

He became the first Georgia player in five years to gain more than 1,000 yards in a single season on total offense.

Combining with Britt to form a dangerous aerial attack are two of the best ends Florida State has met to date, Jimmy Vickers, 6-3, and Bill Herron, 6-1, have been Britt's favorite targets this season.

Vickers received the most valuable player award in the Georgia-Auburn game last season. Herron is rated by Georgia Coach Wally Butts as one of the finest ends he has ever seen.

The Bulldog line averages 207 pounds as compared to the Tribe's 186-pound forward wall. Bob Lancaster (221) and Nat Dye (216) fill the tackle spots for Georgia.

At the guard positions, the Bulldogs have two veterans. The left guard Bill Roland is 5-11 and weighs 205 pounds. Dud Anderson, the right guard, is 5-10 and weighs the same.

BIG CENTER

Dave Lloyd, at 6-3 and 220-pounds, is considered the best center since Bill Godwin, center on Georgia's 1942 Rose Bowl team.

Flanking Britt in the backfield will be two 185-pound halfbacks George Guisler and Don Soberdash. Georgia's main running threat is fullback Theron Sapp.

Sapp (211) led last year's squad in rushing and was the SEC.

The Georgia kicking game is excellent according to FSU scouting reports. Bobby Walden, Bulldog soph from Cairo, Ga., is one of the leading punters in the nation. He has a 47.7 average on 12 kicks.

SEMINOLES HURT

The Seminoles have been hampered in practice because of injuries. Tackles Dan Strickland and Clare Bagnall are hurt and will definitely not play against the Bulldogs.

End Pete Fleming and fullback Dink Lawrence will make the trip, but Nugent is not sure they will see action.

Tribe left half Bobby Renn will be out to set a new school rushing record tomorrow night. Renn needs only 11 yards to break the present record of 1,267 yards. He is the fourth leading rusher in the nation with a 6.4 average.

Handling the quarterback duties for FSU will be Vic Prinzi, star of last week's upset over Wake Forest. Fred Pickard, who has a five yard average per carry, will open at the fullback spot.

Jack Espenship, FSU's leading pass receiver with nine catches for 92 yards, is slated to start at the right half position.

Sewage Flood Closes Library

Students were locked out of the library Wednesday night when a flash flood of sewage washed through the basement of the building.

The library closed at 6:30 p.m in order to begin repair work on defective plumbing which caused the flood

A hole "almost as big as the one at the Penny-Woolworth construction downtown" was dug outside the library, said Miss Florence Bethea, assistant director of libraries.

FSU engineers dug the hole to reach the plumbing foul-up. They were anxious to protect the transformers and main air-conditioning units housed in the basement.

The repair crew worked through the night until yesterday morning The library opened for business, as usual, at 8.

Students Split On Fee Raise

By DIANE GODIN
Flambeau Staff Writer

Results from a recent Flambeau poll show the campus split on raising the student activity fee Most agreed that eventual raising of the fee would be necessary.

The matter is quite controversial now, and no one seems to feel fully informed on the situation.

Freshman Lary Clendinen expressed the general opinion of most students. He stated that "There are good points on both sides, but any final decision should be up to the students, who should have the right to vote on something of this importance"

LOW FEES ATTRACT

Clendinen added that FSU's low fees attract many new students, but agreed that a new student union building would be an attractive feature on our campus. He felt all the facts should be presented to the students via the Flambeau. "Facts . . . not editorials. The students are capable of expressing their own opinions."

Karol Thompson, a student employed at the infirmary, is in favor of the raised fee "It would hurt my personal budget, but it is ridiculous to assume that we can continue on this budget. When was it set? Expenses have certainly gone up since"

Although Miss Thompson felt a new student union building would be beneficial to FSU, she expressed concern for the activity budget as a whole.

CENTER CAN WAIT

A transfer student, Bill Bouknecht, also felt the budget as a whole could be raised only if this would benefit all students. As far as using any raise in the fee for a student union building, he said that "the present student center will suffice until more important matters have been taken care of."

Several students felt a "more important matter" would be building more classrooms Funds for new classroom buildings do not come from the student activity fee, however.

A sophomore, Claire Brightwell, pointed out that a raised fee would certainly be a burden on out-of-state students. Miss Brightwell comes from Georgia and must pay extra tuition fee at registration. She said "It wouldn't hurt to go up to $80, but $100 was a little high."

And a graduate student assistant, who asked that his name be withheld, added that "someone should think about raising student employee wages before they start raising the fees."

New Campus Dance Band Available For Engagements

By MIKE ANGELOTTI
Flambeau Staff Writer

A new dance band, The Gordon Henkel Octet, has been organized by Gordon Henkel and is available for campus functions.

The modern jazz influenced group has a style similar to that of the Dave Pell Octet, but with modified arrangements of Billy May, Claude Thornhill, Count Basie, and Woody Herman as the core of its musical repirtoire, giving it a "big band" sound.

Despite the heavy progressive accent, the music is definitely danceable. "We play music that the instrumentalists enjoy presenting, and at the same time, that the public enjoys dancing to." is the exact description given by Henkel.

The group is well rehearsed, and plays anything from Dixieland to the more popular Latin American numbers.

Each musician is a capable soloist and frequently display their individual talents during the course of an evening's program.

A brief history of the members is as follows:

JACK ON BASS

Jack Caldwell, the bass player, is a native of Orlando, and his professional experience includes four years in the Navy Band and three years' playing in the Orlando area.

The pianist, George Newell has played professionally five years in the New York area and the Army.

Holding down the drums is Don Hesterberg, a Miami product, who has played with Bobbie Dukoff and Miami area bands for the past five years.

John Marcellus, trombone, had the honor of being selected to play with American Wind Ensemble in Pittsburgh last summer. He is originally from Jacksonville.

Doubling on alto clarinet and tenor sax is Larry Raines. Playing three years for the Army in Panama, touring the midwest and a member of Vern Byera Band give Larry a total of five years professional craftsmanship. Huntington, West Virginia is his home.

Manuel Verga, baritone sax, from Tampa, has two years in Panama for the Army included to his credit of nine years as a professional.

Leading the band and playing tenor sax Gordon Henkel, from Charleston, West Virginia Gordon toured Europe for three years while in the Army playing jazz concerts.

Lacking a few hours for his Doctorate in Music and presently teaching in the Music School is Roger McDuffie the trumpet player. He has played with the Air Force Band and various name bands in the New York area and on road trips throughout the country for a total of 12 years.

Presently, the band is engrossed in playing the Army bases located within weekend traveling distance of the campus. Recently, the sounds heard in the patio of the Student Union last Wednesday night were those of the Octet

TO PLAY RUCKER

According to Henkel, future plans for the organization include playing Fort Rucker, Alabama this weekend, and the Theta Chi dance October 31. Currently rehearsing is a vocal quartet, comprising four of the bandmembers, displaying a modern style similar to the Four Freshmen. Their first public appearance will be within the next month.

On the fire is a recording date set for Jacksonville in the near future, and a summer long road trip Henkel also expressed the desire to acquire a female vocalist who is able to sing in a modern vogue.

Traffic . . .

of drivers who wish to pick up their mail only.

Tentative times of ten and fifteen minutes for the parking spaces were considered, but the members indicated that anything longer than five minutes would result in abuse of the privilege by students

MORE PARKING LOTS

A new "perimeter road," now under construction and extending from the new Woodward Street underpass to the Conradi Building will provide further parking areas, it was pointed out at the meeting

Parking will be allowed along the street itself, and will provide use of two parking lots, one behind the Business School and the other in front of the Education Building

A letter from Coyle E Moore, Dean of the School of Social Welfare, was cited by the committee. Dr Carr stated that Moore wanted to see the FSU Band's practice field dispensed with in order to provide a new parking lot in front of the Geology Building The committee took no action along these lines

The final piece of business was placed on the floor of the meeting by Cullom, FSU Administrative Assistant. He moved that a student police force, similar to ones used successfully in the past, be initiated again this year. It would supplement the university police force.

The motion was passed with the understanding that it will consist of two competent and qualified students They will receive top-level wages within the realm of student salaries.

"This is one committee where the students carry the ball," Dr. Carr declared

Reservation Open

The Reservation, Florida State University camp on Lake Bradford, will be open Saturday and Sunday for canoeing, sailboating and swimming, closing the fall season on the waterfront

The Reservation will continue to be open during the school year for picnics and overnight parties. The waterfront will reopen next spring

Space reservations for the use of picnic areas and cabins may be made in the Office of Special Events, Room 15, Longmire Building.

At St. Peter's

Staffer Saw Pope In Rome --Could Have Touched Him

By FRED BURRALL
Flambeau Staff Writer

Almost 30,000 people were packed into St. Peter's Basilica waiting to see the famed "Pope of Peace."

I had gone to Rome on an Easter pilgrimage but I had no idea that the sight of this great man would leave such a lasting impression on my mind. Even now, two years later, it seems as if the memorable event happened only yesterday.

At exactly 10 o'clock the morning of Easter Monday, a great silence fell over the crowd in St Peter's. Then a cheer started in the front of the church, carried back to where I was standing, on past me, all the way back to the back of the church and the balconies.

POPE APPEARS

The noise was deafening and the reason soon became apparent. Way down in front, at least a couple of hundred yards, I could see the Pope being carried on his sedan chair above the heads of the people. He was dressed completely in white, and the huge red chair was supported by eight scarlet uniformed attendants.

The people were handing him small white skull caps which he would put on his head and then hand back. Every time he donned one of the caps, the cheers would increase and his face would light up as he stretched his arms as if to embrace all his people.

I was standing at the rail directly along the processional route of the Pope. A nun from a Dutch orphanage recognized a vantage point in my height and handed me the cutest little girl I have ever seen to hold up.

DONS THE CAP

As the Pope neared us the child handed a cap to one of the attendants, who in turn handed it to the Pope. He stopped directly in front of me; so close that I could have touched his hand. I was greatly impressed by the fact that he looked so old, and yet so healthy and friendly. I could almost read the years of learning and sorrow in his face.

When the chair arrived in front of the Papal throne, it was lowered to the floor and he dismounted and walked to the steps leading up to it with an attendant at each arm. At the third step from the top, he paused, and again silence fell over the crowd.

'VIVA IL PAPA'

His attendants relaxed their support and he jogged up the steps more like a 15-year-old school boy than an 80-year-old pontiff. At this the crowd went wild and cries of "Long live the Pope," "Viva il Papa" boomed through the church.

He then sat down, gave a short speech in Italian, and read the names of the visitors to Rome in the native tongue of each group. There was no trace of accent in the English and I doubt if there was in any of the other four languages he used.

Then he walked around to some of the groups again, and paused to say a few words to one of the attendants directly in front of me. Sitting he appeared rather small, but when standing in a group he looked at least 5 feet 10 inches.

After he had talked to various groups for about 20 minutes, he got back in his chair and was carried again through the crowd. Again the cheers rose and I found myself crying "Viva il Papa" with the rest.

After the Pope left I was carried along out of St Peter's with a silent crowd, moved beyond words by this fragile man and the great impression he left.

Strozier Requests Increased Funds

By DEANNA MORRIS
Flambeau Staff Writer

President Robert M. Strozier has requested $1.74[...] for graduate and student fellowships and assistant[...] in the proposed budget for the next two years.

The budget allocates $245,000 for graduate fe[...]ships, $1,150,076 for graduate assistantships, and $34[...] for student assistants.

Both Dean J. Paul Reynolds of the School of Arts and Sciences, and Dean Werner Baum of the Graduate School express the hope that there will be a substantial increase over the amount of the last year.

CASH ATTRACTS

The act of attracting assistants is on a purely competitive basis with other universities. According to Dean Reynolds, "We cannot expect to attract and hold the calibre of assistants we want and need if we don't increase their stipends."

The assistant graduate student may be a lab instructor, or he may take the place of a teacher in many of the elementary or general education courses. In this way the student helps to solve the problem of too many professors with heavy teaching jobs

The graduate assistant is chosen on the basis of his application for the job, and an interview with the head of the department he wishes to enter. He is paid on an average of $600 to $900 a year.

The science labs, math, humanities, and other general education courses are where the assistant is most needed. At present there are approximately 160 graduate assistants in the School of Arts and Sciences.

TWO TYPES

There are two types of fellowships at FSU at the present time Dr. Baum describes them as: unrestricted fellowships which are state supported; and those which are issued only to students in a particular field.

Both types differ from the assistantships in that they are nontaxable, and the assistan[...] are subject to income tax

The student submits an a[...]cation which is approved or [...]approved by the different de[...]ment heads who make up [...]lective committee. These [...]ships are more like scholar[...] with a small sum more tha[...] tuition included in the allo[...]

Dropping below the gra[...] level, the student assistant [...] in demand. The work of the [...]dent assistants ranges from [...]retarial work in the fres[...] year to almost the same as [...] of the graduate assistants

SAIL ON, SAIL ON!

I suppose October 12 is just another day to you. You get up in the ordinary way and do all the ordinary things you ordinarily do. You have your breakfast, you walk your ocelot, you go to classes, you write home for money, you burn the dean in effigy, you watch Disneyland, and you go to bed. And do you give one little thought to the fact that October 12 is Columbus Day? No, you do not.

Nobody thinks about Columbus these days. Let us, therefore, pause for a moment and retell his ever-glorious, endlessly stirring saga.

CARE of the HORSE
"Never clap his eyes on a horse again..."

Christopher Columbus was born in Genoa on August 25, 1451 His father, Ralph T. Columbus, was in the three-minute auto wash game. His mother, Eleanor (Swifty) Columbus, was a sprinter. Christopher was an only child, except for his four brothers and eight sisters. With his father busy all day at the auto wash and his mother constantly away at track meets, young Columbus was left pretty much to his own devices. However, the lad did not sulk or brood. He was an avid reader and spent all his waking hours immersed in a book. Unfortunately, there was only one book in Genoa at the time—Care of the Horse by Aristotle—and after several years of reading Care of the Horse, Columbus grew restless. So when rumor reached him that there was another book in Barcelona, off he ran as fast as his fat little legs would carry him.

The rumor, alas, proved false. The only book in Barcelona was Cuidar un Caballo by Aristotle, which proved to be nothing more than a Spanish translation of Care of the Horse.

Bitterly disappointed, Columbus began to dream of going to India where, according to legend, there were thousands of books. But the only way to go to India was on horseback, and after so many years of reading Care of the Horse, Columbus never wanted to clap eyes on a horse again. Then a new thought struck him: perhaps it was possible to get to India by sea!

Fired with his revolutionary new idea, Columbus raced to the court of Ferdinand and Isabella on his little fat legs (Columbus was plagued with little fat legs all his life) and pleaded his case with such fervor that the rulers were persuaded.

On October 12, 1492, Columbus set foot on the New World. The following year he returned to Spain with a cargo of wonders never before seen in Europe—spices and metals and plants and flowers and—most wondrous of all—tobacco! Oh, what a sensation tobacco caused in Europe! The filter had long since been invented (by Aristotle, curiously enough) but nobody knew what to do with it. Now Columbus, the Great Discoverer, made still another great discovery: he took a filter, put tobacco in front of it, and invented the world's first filter cigarette!

Through the centuries filters have been steadily improved and so has tobacco, until today we have achieved the ultimate in the filter cigarette—Marlboro, of course! Oh, what a piece of work is Marlboro! Great tobacco, great filter, great smoke! And so, good friends, when next you enjoy a fine Marlboro Cigarette, give a thought to the plucky Genoese, Christopher Columbus, whose vision and perseverance made the whole lovely thing possible.

And thank Columbus too for Philip Morris Cigarettes, for those who want the best in non-filter smoking. Philip Morris joins Marlboro in bringing you these columns throughout the school year.

Strozier In Favor Of New Student Union

Present Building Termed Inadequate

By HERB SCHMUCK
Flambeau Staff Writer

Dr. Robert M. Strozier president of Florida State University, favors a major addition to the existing Student Cente-.

Dr. Strozier aired the administration's stand on the possibility of the building of a new Student Union yesterday afternoon. "We realize that the present Student Center is entirely inadequate," Strozier stated.

The President was asked for his opinion of actions taken by a student organization, Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity.

(This group sent a telegram to Governor LeRoy Collins and a letter to President Strozier requesting that added funds acquired by raising student fees be used to supplement the student activity fund and to construct a new Student Union.)

'SURPRISED'

"I've been surprised that a campus group would support a fee raise," Strozier stated, and added that he believes that this group, as well as the majority of the student body, is laboring under a false assumption as to how and by whom a fee raise is established.

The FSU administration can only recommend a fee raise, he said. He pointed out the fact that the Budget Committee, the Board of Control, and the State Legislature are among those bodies which have the right to lower or increase student fees.

"I believe that students would support and accept a fee raise if there was an immediate need for one." Dr Strozier commented.

The president pointed out that there is an obvious necessity for the building of a new Student Union to provide a place for social activites. "We have to hold a dance on the floor of the Men's Gym" at the present time, the President complained.

GYM FLOOR

He suggested that a Union would serve an important function merely by preventing damage to the gym floor.

FSU needs rooms for visting athletic teams, offices for student organizations, banquet halls, and a variety of social outlets that only a new Student Union could provide, Dr. Strozier said.

He cited the inadequate facilities provided by the Suwannee Room and the Trophy Room. "You've either got to serve 600 people or 50."

Strozier re-emphasized the fact that he had relatively little to do with the increase in student fees. He added that if a fee raise were to be effected, he would personally recommend that a substantial amount be used toward the building of a new Union.

In conclusion. Dr Strozier again pointed out the severe need for an increase in student fees. He added that a fee raise would not necessarily be used toward the construction of a student union, or even for the student activity fund

If the Board of Control or the Budget Committee or, for that matter any other legal agency, were to announce a student fee raise, it could not be approved until the Legislature convenes in April.

Police Continue To Investigate Wave Of Thefts

Campus police are still investigating the wave of thefts which occurred in the Women's Gym on the weekend of October 4, said Officer J. B. Sharman of the Campus Police Force.

However, investigating officers would "rather not disclosed" exactly what's being done," Sharman added.

The "wave" was comprised of seven thefts which netted the thief or thieves over $100. All thefts occurred in the Women's Gym and were the result of carelessness on the part of the individuals who did not lock lockers containing valuables.

LOCK LOCKERS!

"It is a smart idea for people to lock their lockers or not use lockers that won't lock," Sharman emphasized.

"It is inviting a theft for one to leave a locker unlocked," he added

Several other thefts have been reported to campus police since those in the Women's Gym, but these may or may not be related, it was pointed out.

An $80 wrist watch was stolen from the men's dressing room and $45 from the women's dressing room, both last week and both in the Women's Gym.

IN WEST HALL

In addition, $70 was stolen from a room in West Hall, Sharman said.

About 15 or 20 thefts are reported each semester to campus police. Students can do much to reduce the number of thefts by being careful about keeping valuables in a safe place, Sharman stated.

Acts of larceny are more prevalent at some times than at others, he explained. Most thefts occur during the first and middle weeks of the month, when students normally receive money from home and other sources

Also, thefts occur more frequently at the beginning and end of the week than during the middle of the week, the officer concluded

Government Retreat Set For November

About 160 people are expected to attend the student government retreat, to be held at the Reservation November 8-9, especially for newly-elected officials.

The retreat is compulsory for all branches of student government, including the Honor Court, Senate, executive and judiciary.

The Flambeau, Smoke Signals and Tally-Ho are also being urged to send representatives, according to Student Body President Art Moore

Purposes of the retreat, Moore said are orientation for the respective branches, evaluation of purposes for the various branches and overall student government, and interchange between the different groups to prevent overlapping and misunderstanding.

"An effort will be made to derive a philosophy of student government and a general understanding of what our proper role in the university community is," Moore explained.

Planning the program, topics and discussion leaders are Student Body Vice-President Mattox Hair, Men's Vice-President Jim Apthorp, Women's Vice-President Ada Leigh Wall and Moore.

Senators Carl Butler and Sally Highnam are in charge of physical arrangements for the retreat which will end at about 11 a m Sunday, Nov. 9.

'Who's Who' To Select 36

Florida State University representatives for Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges will be selected in the October 21 election.

From candidates suggested by campus organizations and a nominating committee, 36 students will be chosen by vote of seniors and graduate students.

All organizations were invited to nominate any number of their own members with overall grade average of 2.5 or higher.

Other nominees were selected by the nominating committee, composed of 12 students and headed by Barbara Watson, secretary of student events

Selection for Who's Who is based on leadership in campus life, service in organizations and the grade average of 2.5 or higher, Miss Watson said. Those chosen must be seniors or graduate students.

Donations Establish Crenshaw Memorial

By DIANE GODIN
Flambeau Associate Editor

The death last May of Bob Crenshaw, one of Florida State University's most outstanding students, has led to the establishment of a memorial scholarship in his name.

Dr. James Carr lists the contributions as totaling $12,019.54. Donations are still being accepted for this fund, and donors now range from personal donations to group contributions.

The largest contribution came from Fulford Methodist Church in North Miami Beach, Crenshaw's home

The fund started when individuals and social living groups began sending money instead of flowers, and expressing a desire for some sort of memorial

Plans are being formulated by Crenshaw's fraternity, Alpha Tau Omega, to perpetuate the fund through their annual concert. In the past, proceeds of the concert have gone to Campus Chest.

Lonnie Padgett, ATO president, and Bill Burkhart, who is in charge of the concert arrangements, expressed the fraternity's desire to replenish the fund in this manner annually.

JET CRASH

Crenshaw was killed May 20 in a jet crash southwest of Chiefland, Florida He was serving as a first lieutenant in the Air Force.

Officials said the crash was caused by oxygen failure at high altitude

A 1956 graduate of FSU, Crenshaw was active on campus in many phases of college life. On the football squad he earned four varsity letters and served as Co-Captain during his senior year.

He has been described as a ball player with "terrific drive—never gave up no matter how tough the game."

In campus politics, he was elected junior and senior class president and was named permanent president of his graduating class. He also served as vice president of his fraternity

Chosen his senior year for the Hall of Fame in the Tally-Ho, Crenshaw was also listed in Who's Who, and served as an officer in two honoraries, Gold Key and Omicron Delta Kappa.

The ATO's are creating a trophy which they will award each year to a member of the football squad. The inscription will read, "To the player with the biggest heart."

The fraternity felt this exemplified Crenshaw's attitude.

The memorial fund is being handled by a committee organized specifically for this purpose. Serving on the committee with Dr. Carr as its head are Dr. Edwin Hartz, William Cullom, Lee Corso, and Bill Burkhardt.

Any contributions will be received through the Scholarship and Loan office in Westcott.

Drain Break Causes Flood

A break in the main plumbing drain has been diagnosed as the cause of last week's library flood

The drain pipe on the west side of the library front broke in two Wednesday night under the weight of 10-14 feet of dirt, said Charles LaJoie, assistant to the university resident engineer.

The dirt had been settling since the library was constructed two years ago and the "enormous pressure" finally broke the pipe, LaJoie said.

The resulting stoppage of sewage caused a backup which flooded the basement of the library. Officials closed the building from Wednesday night until Thursday morning.

A five-man emergency crew from the maintenance department dug a hole in front of the library to reach the break after probing to establish the location of the obstruction.

Sigma Kappa Variety Show Set Tonight

Nine sororities and a dozen fraternities will compete tonight in Sigma Kappa's Variety Show, beginning in Westcott Auditorium at 7.30

Tickets may still be purchased at the Westcott ticket booth or from any member of the sponsoring sorority for $.35 each. There is no activity ticket for the event.

All fraternal groups on campus were invited to enter the show, said Patty Mickey, chairman for the event. Some entries are individual acts and others are composed of several group members

Sorority entrants are: Alpha Chi Omega, Alpha Gamma Delta, Chi Omega, Alpha Delta Pi, Alpha Xi Delta, Phi Mu, Zeta Tau Alpha, Kappa Delta and Delta Zeta

Fraternity contestants are: Pi Kappa Alpha, Phi Delta Theta, Tau Epsilon Phi, Phi Kappa Tau, Pi Kappa Phi, Delta Tau Delta, Kappa Sigma, Lambda Chi Alpha, Sigma Nu, Sigma Chi, Kappa Alpha and Theta Chi.

All proceeds from the show will go to Campus Chest. The show, usually an annual event, was not held last year due to a change of procedure in collecting for Campus Chest.

Winners of the first-place trophies in the 1956 contes were Phi Mu and Phi Kappa Tau.

Judges for the show are Dr. Claude Flory, Dr. Margaret Campbell, Dr. Jackson Ice, Miss Elizabeth Shannon and Miss Sara Springly.

"We have some good acts this year, the majority of them singing and skit performances," said Miss Mickey.

THE HOMECOMING QUEEN FOR 1958 at Florida State University will receive this beautiful new trophy, carved from South American boxwood by George F. Holschuh of the FSU art faculty. The well known sculptor here turns over the trophy to pretty co-ed Lynn LaGrange, the 1957 Queen. She will present it to a new Queen during Homecoming Oct. 31-Nov. 1.

Primary Date Set

Homecoming Contest Draws 25 Entrants

Twenty-five candidates for Florida State University's Homecoming Queen had been received by the office of the Dean of Women by noon yesterday.

Pictures of the candidates will be posted on the bulletin board between the Science and History buildings. Final voting is set for October 28

RULES SAME

Rules of eligibility for candidates are the same as last year's. The entrant must be a sophomore, junior or senior with at least a semester at FSU. She must have a 2.0 or better grade average.

The Queen committee met last night to decide if all candidates met the qualifications.

Members of the group planning the contest are Miss Janet Wells (chairman), Assistant Dean of Women Elizabeth Lynn, Dr. Nicholas Heerema and Sandra Rosenberg.

Political Office Campaigning Starts Today

Campus - plastering otherwise known as campaigning, begins at 5 p.m. today, when bulletin boards will be decorated with the usual placards, posters and banners.

However, there are new rules governing the display of election literature both on and off campus, according to Sandra Rosenberg, secretary of elections

ONLY ON BOARDS

Posters on campus are to be placed only on the bulletin boards set up for this purpose, and not more than one piece of literature for each candidate is to be posted on either side of these boards

That means trees, telephone poles, sidewalks, water fountains, and the president's door must remain unadorned.

The size of any given piece of this literature cannot exceed 12 by 18 inches This means that the avid campaigners who are building the framework atop Landis Hall must either abandon construction or be prepared to pay a campaign-violation fine.

Off-campus campaign rules are slightly less rigid, but must be followed.

OFF CAMPUS

Some of the businesses adjacent to the campus have consented to allow campaign literature on their premises, but permission must be obtained for each poster or banner.

The only rules governing the size of off-campus literature are those set by the individual store owners Scotch-tape and thumbtack-armed campaigners should remember, however, to ask before posting.

For additional information, candidates should read the Student Body Election Code. Other questions can be answered by Miss Rosenberg, who may be located either at 209 Longmire or the Kappa Alpha Theta House.

Dinner Sale Starts Today

Tickets for the annual sophomore-senior dinner go on sale in Westcott ticket office today at $1 each. Deadline for buying tickets is 10 a m. October 20

The buffet dinner will be held at 6 p.m in the Suwannee room, October 21 It will be followed by the Senior investiture in Westcott Auditorium.

Academic regalia will be worn by seniors for the investiture. Caps and gowns may be picked up at the University Bookstore after Thursday.

Dr. Benjamin F Rogers, of the history department, will speak at the investiture service and will "cap" the Senior Class President

Officers of the Sophomore and Senior Classes are in charge of both the supper and investiture.

Miss FSU Contest

Preliminaries for the Miss FSU Contest will be held on Tuesday, October 22, at 7 p.m. in Opperman music hall.

Applications, which should include name, campus address, class, hometown major, and interests, are due in the Tally Ho office fourth floor Longmire, by Friday.

Any woman student may enter the contest with or without a sponsor

Formals are to be worn.

College Knowledge Test

The Knowledge for College examination will be given at 5 p.m. Thursday in Westcott Auditorium.

All freshman and transfer women students are required to take the test. Those who fail will be campused until they successfully pass it

The test will cover rules listed in the Knowledge for College booklet given students who are required to take the exam.

Opera Cast Mainly Faculty

The School of Music's coming production of Verdi's melodramatic opera "Rigoletto" will feature a cast composed primarily of faculty members.

Reason for the faculty production, according to Director of Opera Richard Collins, is that "the twofold duty of every teacher is to elucidate his ideas and to inspire the student to produce something of value himself."

"The teacher of mathematics may explain his subject by use of words and mathematical symbols, but perhaps the music teacher can best elucidate his art by demonstration in an actual performance," Collins said.

"We do hope the students will gain some inspiration from the performance," he added.

Kuder Exam Set Thursday

The first of the seven free Kuder Preference Record tests has been scheduled for October 16, at 7:30 p.m., 105 Graduate Building.

The Kuder test is an inventory indicating interests, not abilities, and is recommended for all FSU students who are still undecided about their majors or vocations.

Annual Theater Conference Represented By 150 Groups

The annual Florida Theater Fall Conference will be held Oct. 25-26 at Florida State University with 150 dramatics organizations represented.

The FSU Speech Department will be host for the meetings, to be held in Augusta Conradi Theater, History Building

Featured speakers will include Williard Squire, executive director of the American National Theater and Academy, who will discuss "The 40 Theater Plan" and lead a question and answer session on problems of the non-professional theater

SPEAKERS

Leaders of state theater groups and a representative of the governor, Henry Richards of the Florida Industrial Commission, are also scheduled to speak.

Registration from 9 a m. to 1 p m will open the meeting Saturday, Oct. 25.

Following afternoon meetings and discussion groups, delegates will be guests of the Tallahassee Little Theater for an evening performance of "Visit to a Small Planet."

A banquet, business meetings and more discussion groups are planned for the final day

TO SEE "RING"

Presentation by the FSU Speech Department of a play, "Ring Aaround The Moon," will conclude the conference

Richard G. Fallon of the FSU Speech Department heads the theater group which is dedicated to the promotion of living academic, commercial and professional theater in Florida

In connection with the conference, September and October were proclaimed theater months by Gov. LeRoy Collins.

A film, designed to interest people in live theater, is now being shown throughout the state.

Suggestion Boxes Project Completed

Erection of suggestion boxes, a carry-over project from last year, has finally been accomplished by Senate.

Two boxes, one in the Westcott ticket area and one in the university post office, were put up over the weekend by maintenance officials, said Senator Carl Butler

Students are urged by Senate to submit written suggestions for legislation and to make comments on action undertaken by the Senators "We hope the boxes will help keep us in contact with what students want," Butler said.

The 1957-'58 Senate voted last May to put the boxes up This was in compliance with a three-year-old constitutional provision for such action. The boxes were made during the summer, but not put up.

Senators Jackie Soud and Butler will check the boxes regularly for suggestions and will report "worthwhile ones" to the Senate body.

Prexy Clarifies AAUP Talk

Dr. Robert M. Strozier, FSU president, was congratulated by former gubernatorial candidate Ferris Bryant for a talk Strozier delivered to the American Association of University Professors, October 4

However there are two issues Dr. Strozier discussed that he wants clarified for FSU students and faculty as well as the general public.

Dr. Strozier stated that FSU would have a College of Engineering Science He announced yesterday that "we are not planning a College but we are building a department of engineering science."

Secondly Dr. Strozier said that the University of Florida as well as the University of North Carolina and FSU is exercising a systematic program for the selection of students

CULTURE TEST

The General Culture Test required of all first semester Juniors or transfer students with Junior standing or better will be given tomorrow beginning at 6 45 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium.

Revive Lost Art

From last week's meeting of the Student Faculty Traffic Committee comes an example of the extent our parking problem affects our minds.

ARMY ROTC COLONEL Charles Calhoun asked the committee to grant the Army 14 reserved spaces near the crowded building.

Now we'll agree that the area directly adjacent to the building is congested. But, as a couple of the committee members observed, parkingwise ROTC officials aren't bad off. They are within 150 yards of the campus' largest parking lot.

Are the ROTC bigwigs incapable of doing for a few minutes a day the very thing they spend two hours a week training our freshmen and sophomores in? Walking.

IF SO, something's in sad shape with the military.

Nevertheless this attitude is prevalent in more than just military circles. Too many of our students and faculty want to drive their cars right up to the classroom door. And at the very last minute.

This would be fine if the campus had the parking space. But it doesn't and it doesn't look like any new spaces are going to be found near the classrooms.

Perhaps if the lost art of walking were revived—even for a block or two — by FSU car owners, the parking problem would not loom so large.

Will Street Names Stick?

It's street naming time again. Perennially FSU has a rash of controversy over what the names of the little streets running through campus shall be called.

This year, instead of the argument being within the halls of Student Senate, it is between the Senate and Dr. Robert Miller of the Philosophy Department.

HOW THE STREETS will end up being named, we can't predict. Probably the whole problem will be thrown into President Strozier's lap.

Meanwhile the students seem to navigate around campus in perfect oblivion of the fact that the streets AREN'T NAMED.

How do they manage to do this? Perhaps it's because they intend to continue calling certain streets "the street in front of the History Building" or "the street in front of Jennie Murphree" no matter what the Senate, Dr. Miller, or anybody else finally name 'em.

Only One Candidate

Last week the campus' 10-story dormitory, West Hall, held elections for the offices of governor and lieutenant governor.

Only one candidate filed for each office.

This seems a shame to some of the old-timers on campus who can remember when West Hall elections were rip snorting, exciting affairs.

We would like to see a revival of interest in dormitory government around campus. Those who bother to participate will find it a road to fun and satisfaction. And it doesn't take up too much time.

Discerning Men--Unite Now!

By LEEANNE REETZ

Today there is at work in our society a cancerous force whose identity until this time has not been revealed. It has only been in the last two years that the brazen efforts of this organization, aimed at revolution and violent change, have come into the open. It would seem nothing can stop this biological evolution which menaces future generations. The identity of the group is realized only in the forms and shapes in which it deals—among these, the trapeze, balloon, pear, harem and empire.

LET IT BE KNOWN that when reform suggestions resemble the following as recognized by the Woman's Editor of the Atlanta Journal Edith Coogler, the Organization of the FFF (Female Fashion Followers) is at work

(1) bloomer-shaped legs to conform to the bloused skirt of the Harem silhouette.

(2) shift to the Pear silhouette to enable landing on feet or their equivalent, regardless of how one is tossed in the air.

(3) purchase the Scythe Shape to provide a built-in hassock for watching TV

THESE FFF ACTIVITIES had their beginnings with the full endorsement of the Chemise, more accurately referred to as "the sack." This act constituted a true test of strength for it resulted in the breaking away from authority.

Until recently the power of authority had not been questioned. There was no doubt in women's minds as to the determination, courage, discrimination and near superiority of men. Women have been lead to believe from childhood that respect is due the male opinion and serious consideration of his words is not only wise but advantageous.

Proceeding on this assumption it was gratifying to note the stalwart and determined stand men took on the Chemise. Last Spring a survey was taken to determine the reaction of the men of FSU to the new shift in shape. One glowed with pride as male after male vetoed the Chemise with such comments as "it looks flat," or "they look odd."

ONE OF THE MOST gentlemanly reactions to the Chemise was a refusal to comment. One liberal stated "rather gross but with considerable rationalization it might be acceptable." Perhaps a more piercing reply was "they disguise the figure which for some girls is an advantage." A non-conformist said he would rather see women wear knee-boots with slacks.

The question was settled—the Chemise was doomed and the natural line of the female body would prevail by male request. Yet here it is eight months after the male opinion was voiced and not only has the FFF succeeded in its original endeavor but from there has gone on to shape women like balloons, pears and trapezes. And when any group suggests growing pointed toes, wouldn't you agree it is truly time to take stock?

TO DETERMINE THE CAUSE of this total disregard for the male opinion we must refer to the element of female psychology known in more sophisticated circles as the "theory of opposites." This theory states that the female in order to maintain male attention must determine exactly what he wants and then must give him the opposite—hence the "Sack."

It must be evident that "any" reaction to the FFF positive or negative, was fated! Every time men groaned over a shapeless chemise clad coed, they were victims of this psychology and merely stimulated in her a desire to purchase another attention-getting conversation piece.

Discerning men, your next question must surely be, "Is it too late?" If a man's voice in society is to be regained it can only be done by great determination and a united effort toward the adversary. Organization must take place by means of the Secret Order of the R-F-T-R-T-T-F-F (Reform For the Return to the Female Figure). This organization requires incorporation of typically excellent male psychology in terms of "the reversal of opposites." This theory operates by the complete indifference to and disregard for the activities of the FFF. As men pursue the goal before them it is pleasing to realize that they have nothing to lose but the distasteful sight of the shapeless female.

Likes Cops

Gulf Coast Police On The Ball

By ED CARHART

I like cops. Yes indeed and I am not the type of person to speak from hearsay. This week I expect to receive an invitation to whatever lodge all the ossifers belong to. The boys and me started hanging around together last Saturday night and although I'm not pinned, I sure am ticketed.

This SOB STORY begins while I was in St. Petersburg, visiting my home which is away from home away from home (I'll bet that stops you'all). A gas station robbery on the Gulf Beaches resulted in numerous road blocks and myriads of policemen converging on the scene, in order to catch those bad cats. In my travels during the course of the evening I was stopped by five different road blocks.

These road blocks were highlighted by groups of police standing around with drawn guns, more cops checking the bags under your eyes with a huge searchlight and just a general party atmosphere.

WELL I WASN'T complaining about this for I realized the boys were doing a fine job protecting law abiding citizens like, myself. My troubles didn't realy get started until the long trip back to my home away from home.

I had five passengers riding with me and lots of luggage. We started early because two girls who are freshmen, had to be back by 10:30 p.m. Honest, house-mothers, we had the time problem made.

OR AT LEAST that is what I thought until I hit the town of Hudson. The man from the highway patrol called me over for a conference via the red light and explained that he felt I should have taillights and maybe go just a wee bit slower. What I am trying to say is he gave me a warning and told me to notify them when I got the taillights fixed.

I'm still not discouraged. But I was, soon later. Four more times the boys pulled me over and each time the act went like so:

Them: Hello there, may I see your license?

I'S: HERE IT IS, is it about my taillights? If so I have already been stopped (what an understatement!) and I have a warning card.

Them: Oh good old J. Morrisery. Well, sing a verse of Dixie and then you can continue.

TALLAHASSEE looked farther and farther away. The final blow came in Tally itself. I was pulled over by a foot patrolman! He caught me at a stop light and noticed the same things the rest of the gang had. He listened to my story and laughed, letting me continue on my way.

Girls, I hate to see the firing squad get you, especially since I know that you are innocent. Officers I am proud of your polite and shall we say alert corp. And readers, I am going to St. Pete for Thanksgiving, anybody interested?

First Space Man Faces Lonely Life

By PAT SENN

Now that the United States' Pioneer has made its premature trip home, I wonder if the first human pioneer to the moon won't do the same thing.

Can you possibly imagine the horror of it? Not only would that first space traveler have to face days of being by himself—but perhaps weeks or even months. He'd be the proverbial wall-flower, indefinitely — always alone.

No longer could he hide in crowds or eat with half a dozen of his friends. There'd be no radio or television for filling up those long, completely empty hours after his necessary work would be done. Why! he'd even have to think for himself.

Practically viewing these circumstances, which are repulsive to any normal twentieth century U. S. citizen, it is my feeling that we should immediately single out an individual to fill this position and start him on intensive preparatory training.

Make him eat by himself occasionally, go for a quiet walk at night and read a book just for enjoyment.

Have him live in a single room, and when he's alone don't let him fill the silence with a blaring radio or television show.

Let him be still enough for long enough to feel the quiet beauty of the world around him —thoughtful enough and inquiring enough to find his place in it.

When he makes a friend let him be silent enough and patient enough to know that person and like him for what he really is, not what he outwardly seems.

Teach him to be sensitive and loving enough to find his friend's need and fill it.

Most important—make him weigh and determine his own decisions without the aid of his friends, and force him to have the backbone to believe and stick with the actions he takes.

And then teach him how to use his imagination — to dream again—on this earth, and all the way to the moon.

Public Ad Society Is Organized Here

Oary Kissinger was elected president of the American Society for Public Administration at an organizational meeting of the group last week.

Also elected to serve as secretary-treasurer during 1958-1959 was Theresa Wright. Sponsors of the group are Dr Juanita Gibson and Mr John Buechner.

It was announced that open meetings will be held with topics centered around governmental issues. "The meetings should be of value to anyone who is interested in good government, especially campus political organizations," Miss Wright said.

The group is not necessarily trying to promote membership, but wants the meetings to be "informative for people who are interested in current issues."

Regular meeting dates will be announced later in the Flambeau. "Come whether you're interested in joining or not," Miss Wright urged.

West Hall Election

Elections were held last week at a meeting of the West hall Officers to fill the offices of Governor and lieutenant Governor left vacant by Spring graduation.

Skip Moe was elected Governor and Don Sink Lieutenant Governor. They will hold office until the regular February election.

Braves Fans Should Have Stayed In Bed

By BUCKY CANON

Last week was a hard one for sports fans. Most of it might as well have stayed in bed.

"Pay off my debts on the Georgia game? Heck, I'm still lo[oking] for money to pay my World Series bets," was a typical lam[ent] heard after the long and grueling week ended.

FACES WERE DRAWN and explanations short after FS[U's] two touchdown loss to Georgia at the Gator Bowl Saturday ni[ght]. With the game had gone the season's hope of breaking our lo[ng] standing SEC jinx.

The real sports story of the week, however, was in baseb[all]. From the short end of a three games to one score, the New Y[ork] Yankees staged a tremendous comeback to astound the na[tion] and win the series.

Only once before has a team rallied from the cliff-hang[ing] three to one position to take the championship. And only o[nce] has a team lost the opening two games and proceeded to win [the] series. (This was the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1955—their only w[orld] championship.)

CREDIT GOES where credit is due and this year it's due t[he] Yankees.

A question debated in the living rooms of America is: H[ow] popular are the Yankees? Books such as The Year The Yank[ees] Lost The Pennant and plays such as Damn Yankees attest to [the] fact that some exist who would like to see them run out of orga[n]ized baseball. (Or at least relegated to the cellar for a cent[ury] or so.)

But they have their supporters. They can be found in [the] thousands who throng Yankee Stadium for each game. Or in [the] millions of Americans who admire such sluggers as Ruth, DiMagg[io] or Mantle who have made up Yankee lineups.

A TIREDNESS OF SEEING the same team win the penna[nt] year in and year out has driven many into the ranks of the a[nti]-Yankee haters. Yankee haters become cynical after the Fou[rth] of July passes and New York is six to ten games ahead. All [in]terest in baseball is then lost until the World Series when [the] haters come out of hibernation to root for the National Leag[ue] opponent of the Yankees.

Even this usually proves fruitless. The Yankees have w[on] eight of their last ten Series matches.

But there is always hope. And the Yankee-haters might ev[en] stake a little money on the National League.

THESE PEOPLE suffered a cruel blow this year. In the f[irst] games Haney and his Milwaukee Braves carried their hopes [to] a new peak. Yankee haters even managed to smile when talk[ing] about baseball and drop some of the cynicism from their voices.

And then—wham! By last Thursday afternoon they wo[uld] snarl at you at the least mention of the words baseball, New Yo[rk] Yankees, Yogi Berra, etc.

AND SO IT GOES. Another year, another Yankee champio[n]ship. Your columnist reverts back to his habitual baseball cynicis[m], sticks his neck far out, and liberally predicts another Yank[ee] victory next year.

Perhaps you've detected a note of prejudice in this colum[n]. If so, it's because your columnist numbers himself among the m[il]lions of unmoving, unmitigated and unreformed Yankee haters.

Pikes Have Obligation To Minority Group

LETTERS to the EDITOR

TO THE EDITOR:

In this letter I am representing 15 students who spend their nights working to earn enough money to finance their education, in contrast to those who can afford to spend their nights frequenting the student center and fraternity beer parties.

I FOUND the Pi K. A.'s overpowering desire to fulfill their moral obligations to campus society very inspiring; however, if their motives are as genuinely altruistic in nature as they imply (which I am naive enough to doubt), my suggestion is that they organize among their supporters a fund-raising campaign in which each student can contribute according to his ability, rather than proposing that an arbitrary fee payment of $25 per semester should be forced upon a student to whom it would mean a very real hardship—in order to pay for a student union of which they have neither the time nor the money to take advantage.

It is easy to be generous with someone else's hard-earned money!

THE 15 STUDENTS herein represented earn (after taxes) an average of $85 a month—$25 less than a single student is granted under the G.I. Bill. It does not require any great degree of proficiency in accounting to figure that these students end up the year in debt to the tune of $300-$400. This proposed fee raise of $50 would represent a 15 per cent increase in their annual debt.

I suggest that the Pi K. A.'s meditate on their "moral obligation" to the minority group of working students who cannot write a check for $25 without realizing that it will play havoc with next month's budget.

Snack Bar To Get Better

TO THE EDITOR:

Last week you received a letter from R. T. Behre, about sanitary conditions at the west hall snack bar. All I would like to state here is that a definite problem exists, which could be solved with very little difficulty.

Having worked in a restaurant myself, I know the overall importance of cleanliness in a place where food is handled. I also realize that we on campus do not pay as much as we would if we ate off campus, but we get neither the service nor the quality of food. We have to stand in line, get our order, and then take the chance of catching someone elses' cold by stirring our coffee with a dirty spoon or eating our meal with a greasy fork.

It's not worth it, and it's not right. However, outside of these few adjustments to be made I believe that the snack bar in West Hall is a great thing and as the year progresses there will be great improvement.

Sincerely
MARION CLARK

Plains Indians Or Seminoles?

By MARK AUSTIN

Have you ever noticed our Marching Chiefs represent the Seminoles spirit by playing music associated with the western Plains Indians?

Or that, during some football halfs, the majorettes get out on the field and perform a Plains Indian Rain Dance?

And that our Home-coming Queen is crowned with a Plains Indian War Bonnet? And worse yet—the cheerleaders wear them on every occasion?

Somebody ought to tell somebody that most of the Seminole tribes live, and have almost always lived in the Florida swamps. About the closest they ever got to the Plains was saying no to a Government order to move.

History Department, you're letting us down.

MY HISTORY PROFESSOR was reading off the movie list from Peking newspaper to our class last week. All the movies in town were on more or less the same line: Girl working in People's Munition Factory. Boy meets girl at Party Meeting. Boy woos and wins Girl. After honeymoon Girl so happy she doubles her monthly quota.

One boy in class raised his hand. "That's why I'm so glad I live in America," he said. "You go to a movie, or turn on a radio, and at least you got variety."

"Yeah?" said the professor. "Have you ever turned on a Tallahassee radio station on Sunday morning?"

DR. SIDNEY KOBRE (of the Journalism Dept.) has his latest book, Foundations of American Journalism, out on campus this week.

This is Kobre's seventh, and it should be a hit in Journalism circles. It covers the first half of journalistic history in America, and for a text, it's amazingly easy to read.

FSU HAS A TOP notch art man on campus. It's George Holschuh, of the Art Department.

He works with materials such as iron, wire, and fiberglass, and his stuff has been on exhibition all over the states and even in Europe.

You'll see his latest masterpiece during the home-coming festivities. He did the new Queens Trophy that will be presented to FSU's 1958 Home Coming Queen.

Bulldogs Bite Seminoles, 28-13

IN THE PRESSBOX

By BEN BALSER
Flambeau Sports Editor

ACKSONVILLE—In 1814 Captain Samuel Butts, for whom County Georgia is named, was killed as he led the Georgia against the Creek Indians in the Battle of Chalibbee.

Saturday night Captain Butts' son Wally, crossed the state and led his Bulldogs against a bunch of Seminoles in the Battle Gator Bowl. Needless to say, Wally did not find the Indians troublesome as his daddy did.

He just marched his beefy Bulldogs into the battleground watched them chew up the Seminoles using sheer power.

It was the same old story for the men from Florida State. were outweighed, outmanned, and outscored. But, it would be hard to say they were outplayed.

The Tribe scrapped until the very end, it was just a question Georgia having a little bit more of everything. Don Veller, FSU's ant athletic director and former Seminole football coach once me that he would rather have a light, mobile line than a heavy, sh line.

This may be a good choice, but better than a light, mobile is a heavy line with plenty of speed. That's what the Bulldogs had.

Four times the Tribe was stopped within striking distance of touchdown. The Georgia line seemed to turn into a stone wall the only way to score was over them.

Everyone knows that Al Ulmer is one of the toughest little a football team will ever have. But it is almost impossible to expect a guy Ulmer's size (175) to hold out someone Georgia's defensive "hatchet man" Dave Lloyd who only weighs and stands 6-3.

NZI'S BROTHER

Nat Dye, the Bulldogs' right tackle, acted like he was Prinzi's most of the night. It's hard to recall the number of times was trying to spot a receiver with Dye hanging on his back.

Coach Butts said something to the effect that he didn't see Prinzi completed as many passes as he did since he was ing from a prone position most of the evening.

"Don't underestimate that FSU line," said Georgia fullback on Sapp after the game, "when they hit you you know you been hit."

Yes the Seminole line was tough, but the Georgia forward was just a bit rougher, and there were just too many fresh dogs.

UCIAL PLAY

Fred Brown, Georgia's leading ground gainer with 91 yards the most flashy back on the field tonight. Late in the fourth he broke loose and sprinted 62 yards to set up the Bull- final score.

FSU Coach Tom Nugent tagged this as the most crucial play e ball game.

Brown, a nephew of the former Alabama great Johnny Mack own, is a sprint man on the track team and can do the 100 in than ten. Despite this speed, Brown was caught from behind by the Seminoles' Jack Espenship.

We think Espenship has a lot of potential which will be put se during his next two years at FSU.

Nugent showed the 16,000 Gator Bowl fans some fancy formations. One play, which I, in my limited experience have never n a college game, came on the kickoff after Georgia had d its first TD.

Renn and Prinzi were the deep men in the kickoff formation. took the ball on the one and cut directly across the field and he ball to Prinzi on a reverse. Prinzi hid the ball on his hip he got to the opposite side line and then wheeled and threw across the field to Renn.

Renn, already on the run, kept moving and wasn't stopped he crossed the Georgia 45.

CARL MEYER, Florida State halfback, returns a second quarter Georgia kickoff for 21 yards. Georgia's Pat Dye closes in for the tackle.

Romeo, Kavanaugh Catch FSU Touchdown Passes

By PHIL ROYCE
Flambeau Sports Writer

Florida State's hopes for their first victory over an SEC power, were squashed Saturday night by the new, error-free edition of the Georgia Bulldogs.

Playing in Jacksonville's Gator Bowl before a crowd of only 16,-023, Georgia clawed out a 28-13 decision over a never-say-die Seminole team.

Georgia was able to do something no other team has done this year against FSU. The 14-0 lead the Bulldogs carried with them to the dressing room after the first half of play marked the first time the Tribe had found themselves on the short end of the score after the initial half of play.

After spotting the Bulldogs their two touchdown lead, FSU twice fought back within one touchdown (14-7 and 21-13) in the second half. But each time Georgia struck back to maintain their first half lead.

Vic Prinzi directed the Tribe attack and completed 11 of 20 passes for 150 yards. Fred Pickard led the FSU rushers with 79 yards in 19 carries.

GOOD START

Bobby Renn brought the pro-FSU crowd to its feet on the first play of the game when he scampered around right end and then needled his way through a maze of Georgia players for a 33-yard gain.

There was little more for Seminole fans to cheer about, however in the first half. FSU managed to penetrate to the Bulldogs' 10-yard line in the second period but Georgia's big line was up to the test, spilling Prinzi for a 12-yard loss on a fourth down pass attempt.

Georgia used 13 plays to score their first TD in the dying moments of the first period. Quarterback Tommy Lewis went the final six yards for the score. A pass for the extra point was incomplete.

The Bulldogs added to their 6-0 lead scoring the first time they got their hands on the ball in the second period. Sparking the 78-yard march was No. 1 quarterback Charley Britt's 23-yard pass to end Bill Herron. Britt ran it over from the one for the TD. He then passed for two points and the Bulldogs led 14-0 at the half.

A major portion of Georgia's first half success was due to the play of 220-pound tackle Nat Dye. During one series of FSU plays Dye broke through the Tribe line three consecutive times to upend Prinzi. Once Prinzi was forced to eat the ball and the other times his hasty throws fell incomplete.

DRIVE STOPPED

The Seminoles came back from the intermission a fired up club. After stopping the Bulldogs cold following the kickoff, FSU drove 84 yards to a first down on the Georgia 5-yard line. Four running plays, two into the middle of the Bulldog line by Pickard, netted FSU 4 yards and 2 feet. The remaining one foot belonged to Dye and his beefy mates.

A few minutes later, that one foot proved to be no obstacle. On the second play after Georgia punted out, Prinzi threw a pass deep into the end zone.

It was intended for end Tony Romeo who was there along with three Bulldog defenders. Somehow Romeo managed to elude the grasping hands to grab the toss for a 43 yard TD play.

Romeo was an offensive standout most of the game as he grabbed five passes for a total of 103 yards.

John Sheppard's conversion out the Bulldogs lead to 14-7 with 5:50 left in the third quarter.

After the kickoff Georgia needed only seven plays to go 63 yards for their third score with Fred Brown scoring on a 7 yard scamper. Carl Manning booted it home and the score read 21-7 with 11:27 remaining in the contest.

FSU then swept back for its final TD. Renn's five-yard pass to Bob Kavanaugh climaxed a 85-yard drive. Prinzi elected to pass for the PAT. His toss fell incomplete and Georgia led 21-13.

Georgia's final TD came six plays after the kickoff. After Brown set up the score with a 62-yard run to the FSU 18, Britt ran the final four yards for the tally.

Manning's boot was again good and the final 28-13 count flickered on the scoreboard.

"I don't see how a good argument can be made against the building of a Student Union. If we have to have a raise, I want to be sure some of it is earmarked for the Student Union.

According to Hendricks, students have no say on the raise, pro or con

SENATE SURPRISED

Student Senate was, for the most part, caught unaware of the raise In its Wednesday meeting, the special committe to study the fee raise admitted ignorance of the Board's action.

Charles Van, chairman of the committee, announced that his group might circulate a questionnaire to find out whether students wanted the raise.

He also said they had conferred with Nancy Denham, Secretary of the Interior, on plans for the proposed Student Union. He said that he would probably ask the representative of Pi Kappa Alpha if he wanted to withdraw his resolution.

The resolution in question is one asking for an increase in fees to $90 or $100, with provision for allotments for the Union. The Pikes introduced the resolution at the second Senate meeting of the year.

Florida Grid Ticket Sale Starts Monday

Tickets for the first football game between Florida State and the University of Florida on Nov. 22 in Gainesville will go on sale Monday at 1 p.m. at the Men's Gym, announced Ed Cubbon, Athletic Business Manager.

There are 5,000 tickets available for students which will sell for $1 and coupon number 11.

The seats will be distributed on a first come, first serve basis.

Besides having their activity books, students must also present their ID cards when purchasing tickets. Block seats are also available. Guest tickets, however, will be $4 "There will be no reduction on guest tickets for this game," said Cubbon.

The business office at the Men's Gym will handle the entire distribution of seats.

"We're doing this because there is such a demand for tickets to this game If students don't claim all the seats, then they will go on sale to the general public

The ticket sale will continue up until noon Saturday, Oct. 25.

Board Of Control Action Is Final

By VIRGINIA DELAVAN
Flambeau Assistant News Editor

A $15 increase in registration fees at both Florida State University and the University of Florida for the 1959 school year has become a reality.

The increase was announced by state newspapers this week, but actually was passed by the Board of Control in a regular meeting July 25, according to W. G Hendricks, business manager of the Board.

Contrary to reports, the increase does not pend action of the Florida Legislature, but will definitely take effect in September, 1959, Hendricks said.

"The Board of Control has complete power to make such an increase without approval of the cabinet or legislature," be said.

The only facet of the increase which must be approved is a $10 addition to the building allotment at U of F and a $5 for building at FSU. The building fund is a part of the lump sum derived from registration fees

$5 FOR UNION

At the recommendation of President Robert M Strozier, the FSU $5 has been earmarked for construction cost of a student union building

Hendricks said that Florida A & M's registration fees were not raised, as they have recently been doubled from $37.50 to the present $75.

Governor LeRoy Collins told the Flambeau yesterday. "Under the law, the Board of Control is not subject to effect by either the Board of Education or the Governor. I am sure the Board did not take its action without careful study."

James J. Love, chairman of the Control Board, confirmed the passage of the fee raise at the July 25 meeting in Jacksonville

Love told the Flambeau that he was under the impression that the raise had to be approved, but that he concurs with Hendricks' contrary statement.

"It is Mr. Hendricks' duty to know the technical end of the Board's business. I feel sure that what be said is correct"

There was some doubt this week at FSU as to whether the raise was final.

PIKES ASK RAISE

Governor Collins also said that he had not sent a letter received by him from Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity to the Board The letter requested the fee raise at FSU and asked for application of some funds to the student union.

"The fraternity should have sent a copy of the letter to the Board itself, since I have no control over the matter," he said.

Love pointed out, "We (the Board members) are not interfering with the internal administration of the state universities, but only making broad policy directives.

"The Council of Presidents recommended the increase and concurred with our action," he said.

The heads of FSU, U of F, Florida A & M and the University of South Florida serve on the Council of Presidents. J. Broward Culpepper, Director of the Board, is exofficio member.

Culpepper was out of town and not available for comment on the raise

State newspapers reported that the Board's decision was made at closed meetings of the group in Jacksonville last week. Hendricks said the Board simply re-hashed the action along with the entire problem of budgeting for state universities

New Allotment On Fees Ups Matriculation

Here's how the allotment of the new $90 registration fee compares with the present distribution at FSU

1958: Matriculation (general university operation), $29; Student Buildings $13, Health Fee (operation of infirmary), $12; Student Activities (Artist Series, ball games, publications, etc.), $21.

1959: Matriculation, $40; Building, $18, Health, $11 50; Student Activities, $20 50

Figures for the two years at the University of Florida are: Matriculation: old, $41 50, now $41 50; Building $10 50 to $20.50; Health, $10 to $12; Student Activities, $13 to $16

W G Hendricks, business manager of the State Board of Control, said that the FSU matriculation allowance was raised to more evenly match that of U. of F

"The legislature said in its 1957 session that the distribution was not fair—$29 at FSU and $41 50 at Florida" he said. This meant that each FSU student was paying $13 50 less to help run his school than each Gainesville student.

As to the building figures, Hendricks explained that the state cannot borrow money to pay for buildings.

"We must pay for the buildings in cold cash within the legislative biennium," he said "We are authorized to build dorms under bonds and pay for the bonds from revenue the dorms earn"

The $5 increase in the building fund at FSU will be set aside to help pay for the proposed student union

The 50 cent decrease in both the Health Fee and Student Activities fee was accounted for through the increase in enrollment over last year.

Blackened Mess

Westcott Fountain Fired By Vandals

An act of vandalism left Westcott Fountain a blackened mass and the flagpole minus its rope. The incident occurred sometime early yesterday morning, Campus Police officers said.

University officials were of the opinion that the vandals were not Florida State University students.

Leon County Sheriff's Deputy Jack Dawkins said that the fire was caused from a kerosene mixture. The fountain's base was blackened by the smoke and the flames cracked a fresh paint job recently completed by Theta Chi fraternity pledges.

A stand-out of the incident was a pair of red panties which were left flying at half-mast on the flag pole The rope was cut about 15 feet up the pole and the panties pinned to the rope with two clothes pins.

GREASE USED

As an added effort, the vandals smeared grease in two places on the pole to prevent the "flag" from being removed too easily

The Tallahassee Police Department was called in by University officials to take finger prints from the pole and the clothes pins.

The pool and fountain had been cleaned and repainted for FSU's Homecoming festivities. "Now it must be replastered before it can be repainted," said Dean of Students R. R. Oglesby

The dean summed up many other officials' attitudes when he said, "I think it is a deplorable situation and I don't think that any of our students would do such a thing as this."

FSU STUDENTS?

The Inter-Fraternity Council and the Business Office of the university are working together to determine if the incident can be attributed to any FSU students.

IFC President Don Ramsden, said, "This is a childish way to air a grievance against the university. The IFC will prosecute the vandals, if they are found to be fraternity men. Also our goal is to clear the fraternity men in general from any such inclination."

Montgomery Appointed To New Office

Dr Reid Montgomery has been appointed Director of Student Activities.

Creation of the new office was recommended by Dean R R. Oglesby and approved by President Robert M. Strozier and the Board of Control. It went into effect October 1

As the Director of Student Activities, Dr Montgomery will administer supervision over the Director of Longmire and her staff the Director of the Office of Special Events, the Ticket Supervisor in the Westcott Ticket Booth the Director of Social Activities in the Student Center, the Hostess and her staff at the University Reservation, the Secretary in the Office of Student Activities and the Director of Social Activities.

In addition, he will continue to supervise student publications.

No Thefts Reported Says Honor Court

No campus thefts have been reported to Honor Court since October 6, Chief Justice Buck Bryant told Senate Wednesday

Bryan, appearing at the request of the Senators, said he has heard of other thefts since this time, but that they have not been reported to the Court or to Dean of Women Katherine Warren's

Campus police received information of three thefts last week an $80 wrist watch from the men's dressing room and $45 from the women's dressing room, both in the Women's Gym, and $70 from a room in West Hall.

However, Bryan said, the Court can do nothing about investigating these latest burglaries since the victims did not file a report with him or the dean of women.

Bryan said that the actual "detective work" on these thefts and those reported to him (seven others in the Women's Gym, totaling $100) is being left to the campus police

Female members of the Honor Court have been informally inspecting the Women's Gym and find that women are "extending an open invitation to thieves," Bryan said.

"They find that a locked locker is the exception, rather than the rule," he said. Wallets, purses and other valuables are carelessly left out in the open.

"The only cure for this situation is to impress upon users of the Gym the importance of locking lockers. For the last six or seven years there has been a rash of thefts at the beginning of the year in this same place.

"Students must realize that a lot of persons other than students use or have access to the gym," Bryan said.

NAMING STALLED

In the same meeting the Senators learned that nothing further has been done on street-naming The Senate committee waits for word from Dr Robert Miller on whether he will, this time, approve the slate of eight names.

The names were sent back to Dr. Miller last week upon unanimous vote of the Senators. The professor and his "naming" committee had approved half the names, but questioned the others.

The Senate Elections and Appointments Committee okayed Presidential appointments for four committees: finance, adults, state and budget.

The new members are as follows:

Finance: Kay Hufford (chairman), Tom Metz, Pat Manning, Ken Prescott, Larry Yaw, Mary Lee Bone, Dick O'Brien, Joyce Combs, Ronnie Clark, Ted Keene

Audits (to work with Don Ramsden, secretary of finance): Rochelle Reynolds and Verna Lee Robertson.

State: Tudi Mason (undersecretary of state), Nan Chamberlain, Diane Hamilton, Julie Ingram, Jean Magill, Cheryl Rose.

Budget: Raymond Jack Lewis, Sylvia Miller, Patsy Stearns, Kitty Wade, Ralph Chambers, Dave Middleton, Pete Christman, Barbara Peters, Joyce Knuckols, Sid Stubbs.

Need Convertibles

Students who own late-model convertibles are in demand, according to Keith Pitchford, director of FSU intramural athletics and Pow-Wow faculty chairman.

Five convertibles are needed for Pow-Wow, Pitchford said, and ten for the Homecoming Parade.

Pow-Wow Skit Open To All

Contrary to former years, all campus groups are eligible to enter Pow-Wow skit competition this year.

The final acceptance date for Pow-Wow skits has been set for noon next Friday, according to Richard Fallon of the Speech Department.

Run-offs will be held Oct. 27 and 28 at 7:30 p.m. in the Amphitheatre of the Music Building. Groups are to be assembled at 7 p.m on the evening they are to appear.

The skits may be on any subject, including this year's slogan, "All Eyes On the New FSU." The entire skit, including the setting up, must not take more than ten minutes.

Speech Department To Begin New Green Room Programs

The Speech Department will begin its Green Room programs on Monday at 3 p m in Augusta Conradi theater

The Green Room programs, sponsored by the Department of Speech, will be presented twice a month and will be devoted to the understanding and appreciation of dramatic art.

Dr Arthur Dorlag and Richard Fallon will present a symposium on the comedies of the contemporary French dramatist Jean Anouilh on Monday afternoon.

According to Mr. Fallon, Anouilh is a significant figure in contemporary drama because his "peculiar comedy brings stylistic theatrical comedy back to the theatre. Giraudoux, Wilder Moliere and perhaps even Shakespearean comedy may be used as comparison"

HIS SUCCESSES

Among the comedies of Jean Anouilh that have achieved success in this country are The Thieves Carnival, Time Remembered, Waltz of Toreadors and Ring Around the Moon.

Mr Fallon has his M A in dramatic art from Columbia University and a diploma from Old Vic Theatre School, London, England He is currently President of Florida Theatre Conference and Florida Director of International Theatre Month and Southeastern Theatre Conference

Mr Fallon taught at Harwick College, the University of Maryland and was Managing Director of the Little Theatre of Jacksonville before coming to Florida State University.

Wrong Tradition At Westcott

Tradition surrounding Westcott Fountain is taking on a different light. Firelight.

AROUND THE WITCHING hour Wednesday, the fountain was filled—not with the light of newly pinned love, but with something even more inflammable which was shortly thereafter ignited: kerosene.

These doings, we realize, are the sort generally looked upon as harmless pranks, but mischief of this sort can scarcely stay harmless.

CERTAINLY DESTRUCTION and damage can't be termed harmless. The newly cleaned and painted fountain will have to have a real face-lifting now—and this sort of activity is not covered in our fees.

Even more apparent danger is in injury which could easily result in the course of such "pranks." We can only hope that this occurrence won't result in tradition becoming tragedy.

Too Many Queens?

Just about every forthcoming festivity set for the next mnnth or so will be reigned over by a newly crowned queen. These weekly coronations of new royalty are fast becoming of little or nc concern to our campus. They are actually becoming old. And since The Flambeau is only a bi-weekly newspaper, two or three contests are "news" in each issue.

UPON READING over the rules for one of the more recent contests, one phrase noted is that the contestant "must be representative of the typical co-ed."

WHAT COULD BE MORE typical on this campus than being a contestant in a beauty contest? Hundreds entered the preliminaries for three contests currently being conducted.

AFTER HOURS OF PIN-CURLING, padding, pinching, and painting the most "typical" is chosen. Or is it the most practiced?

Anyway, girls, we have just one question. What are you majoring in that allows so much crowning and so little cramming? And to whoever started this, when did becoming a beauty queen become more important than becoming educated?

Explanations Due

The hue and cry over raising the registration fees can come to an end now.

This week it was announced that the Board of Control upped Florida State's and the University of Florida's student activity fees to $90 a semester.

BUT THE ACTIONS of the Board are shrouded in confusion and question. We are still wondering, for instance:

Why no publicity was given to the increase in fees until this week if the Board passed on the matter last July 25?

Why many officials were not aware the Board of Control's action is final?

WHERE THE MOVEMENT to raise fees originated?

Why so little publicity was given to the possibility of the increase before the Board passed on it?

We cannot accuse our state officials of putting the matter across in secrecy, but we feel the matter could have been better handled.

PERHAPS THE ANSWERS to our queries lie in poor press coverage of the Board's activities; in poor communications between the Board and the Universities' officials; or in the swiftness on which the Board passes on matters.

What's done is done. We won't argue the merits of the increase here. But we would like an explanation of what went on.

Faubus Third Party Try Doomed

BY HERB SCHMUCK

Governor Orville "Diehard" Faubus of Arkansas may scatter the strength of Democratic Party to the "four winds" when the presidential election rolls around in 1960.

Faubus has warned the Democratic National Committee that they are driving Southerners into a third party.

CIVIL RIGHTS HAS thrown the Southern Democrats into discord once more. The same issue that caused a bunch of Southern delegates to throw in the towel and form the 1948 edition of the Dixiecrat Party, threatens to disrupt the party again.

This time civil rights is just a fancy term for the segregation issue. According to Orville, the Democratic national organization is bossed by a pack of pro-intergrationists who are trying to dictate their opinions to Southern Democrats.

Camille F. Gravel, the Louisiana National Committeeman for the Democratic Party, has just about been ex-communicated by the rest of the party for his so-called extreme liberalism on the race issue.

PAUL BUTLER, Democratic National Chairman, says that Gravel will stay unless a two-thirds vote by the entire national committee succeeds in ousting him.

And so . . . Enter: Third Party with Governor Faubus in purple robe followed by attenoants Faubus envisions himself as the hero of the South . . . you know: Segregation or bust!

ALAS . . . ALL IS not hopeless for the Democratic Party. As a matter of fact, things haven't looked brighter for years. The fall elections are only three weeks away.

All the members of the House of Representatives and 36 Senators have to be chosen come November 4. Political analysts overwhelmingly agree that the Republicans have no chance to regain control of Congres.

THE 86TH CONGRESS will be a Democratic one with a substantial margin in both houses.

Faubus and his potential "Third Party" boys may think they can pull off what has been unsuccessfully attempted many times in the past by the proverbial third party that springs up during times of crisis.

That is, Faubus will attempt to gain a vast majority in the South leaving both the Republican candidate and the Democratic candidate without a majority. The election is then thrown in to the House of Representatives for a final decision.

ASSUMING THAT THE HOUSE by 1960 is still predominantly Democratic, he will have succeeded in doing nothing more than assuring a victory for some Democrat (probably a Northern one).

The Southern Democrats may not be in full agreement with the Northern Democrats on civil rights. However, this difference of opinion does not have to cause serious damage which might inevitably result in dissipating the possibility of having a Democrat in the White House in 1960.

What tha Southern Democrats should do with men like Faubus and the rest of the Southern extremists who are infecting the party is carve them out. They can do this by establishing a firm unity within the party, leaving Faubus and the boys to rot from their own innate decadence.

THE TWO GREAT LEADERS of the 85th Congress, Senator Johnson of Texas and House Speaker Sam Rayburn (both Democrats) have aided the current Republican administration in operating constructively and efficiently.

These men and their contingents will be capable of enabling a Democratic administration to operate all the more successfully. The real problem for the Democrats in 1960 lies with men like Faubus.

It might not be so bad at that —FAUBUS FOR PRESIDENT.

His platform: No education. His slogan: no mediation. His goal: No integration.

Finds Good Uses For Posters, Flambeaux

By DIANE GODIN

The view from just about any point on campus today is somewhat obstructed by something that from a distance resembles the contents of every waste basket on campus mounted on iron-legged supports. It's election time.

The incinerator chutes in Landis are brimming to the fifth floor with poop sheets and political propaganda which are embellished with such witty-type slogans as "Ferdinand Gluts has got the Guts." And, no doubt, interspersed with this material, are occasional day-old Flambeaux. What a waste.

OFTEN WHAT IS MISTAKEN for garbage and trash can be of some sort of use if one is of frugal nature. Most of us can still recall the war-time paper drives, along with unelasticised undies that tied on the side in rather precarious fashion. Perhaps these precarious pants had more effect on our generation than collecting old papers.

Still, someone does display imaginative use of old papers. Garbage cans are lined, lumpy mattresses are padded, and spilt coffee is sopped up with old Flambeaux about campus. Rolled together firmly they are excellent for swatting roaches.

IN THE WOODS, old papers can start a mighty good fire, even if it isn't scout-like.

Rolled around a stick, soaked with lighter fluid and ignited, a Flambean really lives up to its meaning. Torches are handy for all sorts of searches, processionals, and lynchings.

And one little-known use. The art department recommends the paper as the best for cleaning purposes such as brush-wiping.

ALSO, IF YOU HAVE pets, shredded Flambeaux are far superior to sand.

Yes, the Flambeau is a contribution to our society, whether anyone on campus realizes it. Its uses are unlimited. And even among litter-bugs a little rain must fall, and its always good protection from that Tallahassee drizzle, conducive to both fungus and mildew.

Campaign Letters

The Flambeau will print campaign letters of all FRESHMAN CLASS PRESIDENTIAL candidates in the Tuesday, October 21 issne.

All candidates wishing to have their letters published must bring it to the Flambeau office by noon Monday in typewritten form. Letters may not exceed 150 words.

Due to lack of space and the number of candidates running we are sorry no other letters can be printed. After the first primary, we will print the letters of all candidates in tha freshman runoff elections.

Student Union Or Labratories?

TO THE EDITOR:

A group has sent a letter to the Governor and a variety of people have come out in print about the pressing need for a new Student Union. All this comes at a time when we are fumbling and bumbling away our nuclear research program.

The time has come when we must stop thinking in terms of prettier places to play and start thinking of what steps must be taken to insure that this country will continue to survive in a world where survival depends on laboratories and the results they are able to obtain.

TO THE EDITOR:

In your column "Braves Fans Should Have Stayed In Bed" I wish to point out an incorrect statement.

You have written that only once (the fabulous Brooklyn Dodgers of 1955) has a team to lose the first two games of a World Series and then proceeded to win the World Championship of Baseball.

IF YOU WILL CHECK the record book you will find that in the 1921 World Series New York (now San Francisco) of the National League lost the first two games of that Series to their crosstown rival in the American League, the famed New York Yankees, but then roared back to take the Series in eight games five to three. Of course, this was when tha Series was won by the best five out of nine.

In 1956 the then World Champion Dodgers took the opening two games from those same Yankees 6-2 and 13-8 only to lose the Series and the Championship in seven games.

I refer you to the Encyclopedia of Baseball.

Yours Truly,

Reactionary Confessess To Thinking Wrong

By BOB FERLUGA

A few weeks ago several of the more altruistic individuals on campus began a crusade for two greatly needed additions to FSU; a student union that was to be the showplace of the south and an increase in the number of student activities. Viewed objectively, such a program should have suggested certain nearly self-evident merits.

However, there was a contingent, of which the author was a member, that held divergent views. These divergent views centered around the romantic but somewhat out-moded concept of the University as a place of higher learning, a brokerage center for the exchange of significant ideas at which place the social aspects of life would play a subordinate role.

THE MAJOR RATIONALIZATION for this view was the fact it had been accepted in western civilization for over 2,000 years. Obviously such a position was basically reactionary in nature. I for one confess my error and would like to add to the already overwhelming list of arguments in favor of the fee increase and subsequent building of the student union.

Fools would look to crowded facilities and over-sized classes and squander public funds to alleviate these problems . . . but now we know that what the University needs is a new student union and more activities.

DEMAGOGUES WOULD CALL attention to the need for higher faculty salaries and more scholarships so as to raise the quality of both instruction and student body.

But we say the instructor has a wife who can work just as the wives of other proletarians: ditch-diggers and garbage collectors and the student who needs a scholarship usually comes from a family of such low status that he could not be the type of 'better person' we want to fill our new student union. Give us a new student union.

THE COMMUNISTS are using comparable sums of money to build new science halls that some day they may defeat us. The panic-stricken say we should follow suit to preserve ourselves. But keener minds and calmer heads say "more student unions." We are confident that the shortage of TV sets and juke boxes in the Soviet Union will eventually decimate the population.

Reactionaries assert that thought and the exchange of ideas, not buildings, make up the true University . . . that students and instructors are the focal point of education . . . we should spend our money in such a way as to attract the most brilliant minds. But the sharp 'collegiate' knows that buildings make the school. We will spend our money on bricks and build a better student union.

THE MISERLY AND THE IMPOVERISHED (miserable manifestations of the proletariat!) imply the increased fees may drive them from the University! GOOD! Encourage them to leave.

These individuals are often the students, the thinkers whom We find so obnoxious. These are the 'grinds' who monopolize the discussions, depress our grades and threaten to contaminate us with the various of thought.

If so small an item as a fee increase can drive these academic subversives from our midst then such an action is well warranted. One good Presley album is worth a million students—and how much better if played in our new student union.

THE MAJORITY IS ON our side. There can be little doubt that construction of this brave new utopia will commence soon so allow me to suggest an inscription to place above the portal:

"Let me have around me men who are fat . . . such (men) as reason not . . . yon Cassius has a lean and hungry look . . . he Thinks too much . . . such men are dangerous . . ."—Shakespeare.

Onionhead: Oscars Or Drinking Team?

By JOHN HULL

ONIONHEAD, starring Andy Griffith, Felicia Farr, and Walter Matthau, will run through Saturday at the Florida Theater.

"Onionhead plays Onionhead" in a Coast Guard uniform in an early World War II setting. Walter Matthau makes cinnamon rolls and Felicia Farr makes sailors.

The goody, "Ohionhead" Griffith, juggles his sea life, pots and pans in tha ship's galley, and marries sweet little Betty Coed after a few whirls with Matthau's lonely wifa (Farr). A supporting cast keeps up the background music with the inebriated clink of whiskey glasses.

A SLAP-STICK comedy of fist fights, cake fights, and adultry prevail. For added entertainment the audience views an niiatove explode on Onionhead's head.

The wedding cake of Matthau's and Farr's is amply put into action in face sized servings when the Army arrives at the old CG hangout—The Oval Bar—where the wedding is being conducted. (And most other events for that matter.)

By BEN BALSER
Flambeau Sports Editor

For the fifth week in a row, the Florida State football squad will face a team which boasts a highly-regarded quarterback. First of all, it was Billy Baker, the Furman ace, who finished fifth in the nation in passing last year.

Well, as it turned out, the Seminoles did not have to worry about Baker as an injured ankle kept him on the bench for the whole game.

Then came Georgia Tech and Fred Braselton. Although Braselton did not break any passing records he called a good game. His selection of plays was a big factor in Tech's 17-3 victory.

The Deacon Demons of Wake Forest came next. They were beating the drums about a guy named Norman Snead. Snead was touted as a soph sensation.

Against Maryland two weeks before Snead had passed for touchdowns and 150 yards. The Seminoles could not hold him down either. He completed 10 of 18 passes including a 40 yard touchdown heave.

Snead's total for the night was 199 yards through the air. Then came the Georgia Bulldogs claiming they had the best quarterback in the SEC in Charley Britt.

Britt showed up well against the Tribe. He scored once and directed two other touchdown drives. Britt's passing activities were restrained because of the bad lighting in the Gator Bowl. He passed three times, completed one for 23 yards.

Tomorrow Virginia Tech comes to town with a signal caller that may well be the best in the nation, Billy Holsclaw. He has the goods and proof to back up the Gobblers' boasts.

LEADS NATION

At the present time Holsclaw is the nation's leader in total offense. The 22-year-old senior has run and passed for 620 yards in 97 plays. Last weekend he led the Gobblers in a 22-13 upset over Virginia as he passed for two scores and 181 yards.

Holsclaw, who stands 5-11 and weighs a solid 170, was a back of questionable ability at the beginning of this season although he had won two letters.

We feel there are no questions in the minds of VPI coach Frank Mosely and Gobbler fans pertaining to Holsclaw's ability. Mosely said in a pre-season interview that the key to Tech's offense rested with Holsclaw.

In past seasons he has shown he could run and pass, but was tagged as erratic because of his tendency to give excessive ground in an attempt to break away. He seems to have corrected his fault this season.

Holsclaw has two good receivers in ends Carrol Dale, 6-0 and Allen Whittier, 6-3. Dale will be starting his 24th consecutive game when he starts against the Seminoles tomorrow.

All in all, the Tribe will face a dangerous passing attack tomorrow afternoon, and probably the best quarterback they will see all year.

NO METHUSELAH

Although Wally Butts has been the coach at Georgia for a long time we want to make it known here that he is not 144 years old as reported in this corner in the last issue.

Through a combination of miscalculation, misinformation and misinterpretation, we said that Wally's dad was a Captain Samuel Butts who was killed in 1814. Actually, as most people have figured out by now and we should have figured out before the paper came out, the noble Captain Butts was not Wally's dad—he wasn't even a grandaddy.

The closest kinship Wally can claim to Samuel Butts is a direct descendent. Anyway our point was that Wally was one of the clan that didn't have trouble with the Indians.

Intramural Hoop Squads In Third Round

With at least one game of experience to their credit, the Greek basketball teams move into their third round of action tonight in the Men's Gym.

The Dorm-Independent league resumes action again Monday night.

In league one of the Greek Division, LCA meets SPE at 7:30 while SAE takes on the KA's at 8:45.

SC faces PKA at 7:30 and ATO clashes with DTD to round out action in league two.

League three play will see TEP face KS and SN meet PDT. The Greeks also played games last night, but because of the time element we are unable to report the scores.

2-0 RECORDS

Monday night the Penthouse puts its 2-0 record on the line when it clashes with the unbeaten Psychology Club. The Playboy, also undefeated in two games, battles the once beaten 400 Club.

Magnolia faces Senior Hall and the Vets take on the Wesley Foundation. Rounding out the hoop action will be games between the Newman Club and the Majors and CLO against BSU.

TENNIS

Tennis in the Dorm-Independent division moved into the semi-finals Wednesday as Magnolia downed the 400 Club, 6-3, 6-1 and the Newman Club took Senior Hall, 6-3, 6-4 in singles.

JIM BURKS, captain and right tackle for the Virginia Tech Gobblers will see action against the Seminoles tomorrow afternoon. Burks is one of the few seniors on the VPI team.

Freshmen Seek First Victory Against Furman At Greenville

Florida State University's freshman football team will be looking for its initial victory of the season tonight when they meet Furman's frosh in Greenville, S. C.

Coach Herb Hughes' Baby Seminoles wound up on the short end of a 44-6 score against a powerful University of Miami freshman team in their only appearance to date.

Leading the Seminole attack is quarterback Billy Hampton of Miami. Sharing the signal-calling for the frosh will be Bill Godfrey of Parrish. Hughes rates both men about equal, but will open with Hampton.

Slated to start at the halfback positions are Charles Cannon, a 167-pound speedster from New Orleans, La., and Jim Miller of Miami. Due for plenty of action is halfback Glenn Sheley of Alexandria, Pa.

Rounding out the backfield is 190-pound fullback Paul Andrews of Greenville, Fla. Andrews led the Baby Seminoles on the ground in the opener with Miami.

Mainstay of the Tribe's forward wall is center James Chancey, a 6-2, 190-pound All-Stater from Enterprise, Ala. Chancey is rated by Hughes as perhaps the best freshman center ever to play for the Seminoles.

Starting at end will be Fred Grimes of Hialeah and Richard Perez of Tampa.

Tennessee, which has one win to its credit this season will play Alabama. The Tribe meets the Vols next week in Knoxville.

Gridders Face VPI In First Day Game

By FRANK RAMOS
Assistant Sports Editor

Followers of Florida State football will finally get to see the Seminoles in daytime action when the Tribe meets Virginia Tech in Doak S. Campbell Stadium at 2 p.m. tomorrow.

Seminole head coach Tom Nugent has been forced to use a patched up lineup to combat the favored Gobblers.

Jerry Graham a 224-pound junior has been moved from second string right tackle to first string right guard to replace the injured Terry Moran. Graham is the heaviest man on the Seminole squad.

The second team backfield has been the scene of a number of changes this week. Gene McCormick a 151-pound sophomore from Miami, the smallest man on the squad, has moved from fifth string quarterback to direct the second string attack.

CONRAD AT LEFT HALF

Bobby Conrad who has been the second squad quarterback has been forced to move to second string left half behind Bobby Renn. This move came about with the injuries to Bobby Carnes, Lenny Levy and Bud Whitehead.

With Conrad moving to left half, Carl Meyer has had to switch to right half to share the duties with Jack Espenship.

The only change in the second team line is the moving up of Bob Fountain in right end. Herman Brown has been put on the injury list.

The Seminoles will be faced with the task of stopping VPI's quarterback, Billy Holsclaw. Holsclaw leads the nation in total offense and has two fine ends to throw to.

Carrol Dale and Allen Whittier have been Holsclaw's main targets this year as he moved to the lead in total offense.

LOST TO DEACONS

Tech brings a 3-1 record into the game and is figured as a slight favorite even though the Gobblers lost to Wake Forest, 13-6 while the Tribe upset the Deacons, 27-24.

Big interior linemen and "pony" backs characterize this year's Tech team.

The Gobblers starting line averages 214 while the backs average around 172.

Wake Forest coach Paul Amen figured that FSU's line was lighter but faster than Tech's while the Gobblers possessed a faster backfield.

To counter the offensive threat of Coach Frank Mosely's squad, Nugent has his own offensive machine led by Renn and Fred Pickard.

Pickard is rated eighth in the nation in total rushing and Renn is rated 16th.

Nugent is expected to rely on the punting of Renn to keep the Gobblers at bay. Renn's punts have only been returned for an average of 1.2 yards.

ROUGH TEST

Virginia Tech is expected to put the Seminoles to a rough test. The Gobbler halfbacks Jay Whitesell and Pat Henry are among the Southern Conference's fastest, smoothest runners.

Whitesell has returned three punts for TD's so far this season. At the fullback post VPI has Sam Shaffer. Shaffer only weighs 172 but has a lot of inside power. Mosely rates him a tough defensive man.

The Gobbler line is studded with two big tackles. Left tackle is Don Oakes who stands 6-2 and weighs 240. On the other side of center is captain Jim Burks a 227-pound veteran who stands 6-3.

Mike Zeno (232) will open at left guard and Duncan Holsclaw (200) is slated for action at right guard.

Nick Mihalas (200), a two-year letterman is slated to open at the center position for the Gobblers.

FOURTH MEETING

This will be the fourth meeting between FSU and VPI. The Gobblers hold a 2-1 edge. The Seminoles beat VPI for the first time last year as they dumped the Gobblers 21-7 in the homecoming game.

In 1955 VPI won 24-20 and in 1956 the Gobblers rolled out a 20-7 victory.

Carlisle Floyd's 'Susannah'

By DIXON REDDITT
Flambeau Music Critic

Any run-down of events at the World's Fair in Brussels shows us immediately that the propaganda assets of an event or exhibit are prime considerations.

That is each country represented sought to give the world as large a sampling of itself in ideas, and artifacts.

One of our Florida State faculty members has written a work which is so successfully American that it received the distinction of being performed at the Fair this past summer.

"Susannah" a musical drama in two acts music and text by Carlisle Floyd was presented in the American Pavilion Theatre by the New York City Center Opera Company. This is the same company which gave "Susannah" its highly successful New York premiere.

Howard Taubman, chief critic of the New York Times, stated that "the European premiere of 'Susannah' scored a resounding success. There was no question that the opera stirred the gathering. Throughout the performance there were spontaneous outbursts of approval.

"At the end of the second scene of the second act, which packs a potent dramatic punch, the applause was loud. At the close of the opera it was prolonged," he concluded.

HISTORY HERE

This very same "Susannah" which so impressed Europe and New York had much of its early history here at FSU.

Of course in a production of scope of "Susannah", many people contribtued their talent and energy.

The story of "Susannah" is essentially the one described in the Apocryphal book of the same name, with the important difference that the locale is changed to that of a present day Tennessee mountain valley community (New Hope Valley).

SUSANNAH SWIMS

The story involved the discovery of Susannah bathing in the "altogether" by the Elders of the primitive religious sect while they are looking for a "Baptizing Crick". They are shocked, but manage to observe from a distance for some time.

The Elders promptly announce the news that Susannah is "of the devil" to Olin Blitch, the visiting evangelist, and the people of the valley.

The second scene of the second act, which drew Taubman's praise in the article quoted above, is the mob-revival scene where Blitch publically asks Susannah to confess her guilt and "find rest fer yer storm-tossed, sin-sick soul".

When she dramatically refuses Blitch follows her home and seduces her. He thus discovers her complete innocence.

He is so shocked by the whole affair that it becomes apparent from then on that "he is stripped of his bravado and evangelical trappings. He becomes a man terrified by his own image of a vengeful God."

Blitch's next step is to call everyone together and to try to clear Susannah of the accusations against her, without implicating himself. The valley people have no room in their hearts for belief in any innocence on the part of Susannah, and Blitche's attempt fails miserably.

SAM'S REVENGE

In the meantime Sam, her brother, has discovered Blitch's action concerning Susannah. Sam grabs his shotgun and disposes of Blitch while the latter is busy baptizing in the creek. An angry mob collects shortly around Susannah's cabin but she threatens them with one of Sam's guns and they back away.

In the final moments of the opera, Susannah has cut off all ties with the community and remains unexonerated and an "inexorably lonely and embittered woman."

Carlisle Floyd, a native South Carolinian, is the son of the Rev. and Mrs C. S. Floyd. He graduated from Syracuse University at the age of twenty. He began teaching at FSU when he was "four days past 21."

After teaching for a year he returned to Syracuse for his Masters Degree. It was to this period that he wrote his first one-act opera "Slow Dusk". This drama has been given at least six performances on the FSU campus.

Floyd studied with the distinguished Czech pianist, Rudolph Firkusny. It was for Firkusny that a recent Piano Sonata of Floyd's was written.

Nationwide TV College Course Now Offered Throughout State

By DON SCOTT
Flambeau Staff Writer

A nationwide experimental televised college course, "Atomic Age Physics," is currently being offered throughout the state of Florida, said Dr. James P. Marshall, professor of education.

He and Dr. Harvey Hall, professor and head of the Physics Department at Florida State University, are working to coordinate FSU with the other institutions uniting to present this program.

"Atomic Age Physics" is being sponsored jointly by NBC, the American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education, and the Ford Foundation as part of its College Grant program.

"It is being presented by these organizations in an attempt to upgrade high school science departments, provide material for gifted high school students (who receive no college credit), and for the general cultural enrichment of the lay person who would like to know more about atomic age physics," explained Dr Marshall.

The program appears in Florida through the facilities of seven television stations in and around the state. They include stations in Jacksonville, Gainesville, Tallahassee, Tampa, West Palm Beach, Miami, and Mobile, Alabama.

DEADLINE MONDAY

The deadline for registering is next Monday. As of two days ago there were about 65 students on record in Florida as taking the course for credit, said Dr. Marshall.

NBC is offering this course purely as an experimental move as part of its interest in educational television. Cooperating with the National Science Foundation, and the government Federal Aid to Education, which provides money for this purpose, NBC is offering it for use as an indicator of how successful such a future series may be.

Its degree of success will be determined by NBC, but if it is successful, there is no questions that such televised course programs will be extended, Dr. Marshall stated.

"Atomic Age Physics" is divided into two semesters of 20 weeks each, beginning October 6 and ending June 5. The first semester is general college physics at the undergraduate level which serves as a background for the second semester — atomic and nuclear physics.

Although the girls don't know where the anchor came from they hope to paint it gold and implant it in cement in their front yard if no one claims it. An anchor is the symbol of their sorority and what their pin is fashioned after.

Control Room Fate Still Being Studied

Fate of the control room for Florida State University's two coming nuclear accelerators is still waiting for an architectural study to be completed.

W G Hendricks, State Board of Control Business Manager, said yesterday the board architect is expected to report what is needed to build the control room, which is necessary for operation of the equipment.

Next problem facing the board of control and the university is apparently the universal one—what to use for money.

VAULTS UNDERWAY

Construction is already underway on vaults to house the giant accelerators, with funds appropriated by the 1957 Florida Legislature.

However, housing for the control panels recently fell victim to state economizing, probably through a misunderstanding of its importance.

Funds allocated for its construction were frozen when the state ran low on money.

Meanwhile, the smaller of the two machines, a three million electron volt accelerator, is scheduled to arrive by the end of the year and was expected to be in operation early in 1959.

THE COMMODORES—One of Florida State University's oldest dance groups are busy meeting engagements which take them over South Georgia, North and West Florida and now they are headed for a place deep into the heart of Gatorland.

Commodores Furnish Music At Annual Gator Homecoming

By B. J. MILLS
Flambeau Staff Writer

The time-honored tradition of rivalry or competition or call-it-what-you-may between the University of Florida and Florida State University took on a slightly different proportions recently when an FSU dance group, the Commodores, were invited to play the Gator Homecoming this weekend.

Last month the Gainesville Homecoming committee came to Tally to audition the Commodores and their vocalist, Sandi Beskind.

Apparently the Gainesvillians were impressed. A few days later the contract was signed and the Commodores started to work in preparation for their Gator appearance.

BEGAN IN '53

The Commodores were organized in 1953 by a group of FSU students headed by Tony Swain and Frank Valdes. The group is now headed by Mike Lewis, the arranger, and Charles Turner, who does the booking.

They have pushed the group to a reputation as one of the leading campus dance bands by rehearsing to perfection and improving their scope of music from rock-and-roll to "the beat," progressive jazz.

The Gainesville Homecoming delegation was most impressed with The Commodores' versatility, and told the members that that was what really cinched their audition and landed the contract.

The band is composed of eleven members and a vocalist, all of whom have had extensive professional experience.

Two of the members, Charles Turner and Bob Loughridge, toured with Ralph Flanagan this summer. Vocalist Sandi Beskind was booked during the summer at the Sherry Frontenaque on Miami Beach.

THE LINE-UP

The Commodores are: on saxaphone, Dave Franklin of Jacksonville; Bob Loughridge, Coldwater Ohio, Bob Vellico, Miami; and Mike Lewis, Asheboro, North Carolina.

Trumpets: Charles Turner, Bunnell; and Harry Shepard, Tallahassee. Trombone: Dale Weaver, Orlando; and Wayne Wells, Stuart. Drums: Bob Baden, Tallahassee. Bass, Bill Pippin, Jacksonville, and vocalist Beskind.

The Commodores are available for all campus events as the complete band or as "The Commodettes," a combo consisting of five pieces.

And they'll be seen this weekend at The Hub on the University of Florida campus. This is competition between state universities?

Three Students Chosen

Three students were chosen Tuesday evening in a campus talent show to represent Florida State University in the statewide "Search for the Best Florida College Talent."

The students, Jack Ryder, Sandi Beskind, and Raymond Leibau, will compete against winners of similar contests held at the University of Miami and the University of Florida which were sponsored by the Florida Motel Association.

The grand winner will receive a loving cup, a week's vacation at a Florida resort, and booking in Florida hotels all of next summer.

Ryder, a pantomimist, has worked the sound effects and lighting in Westcott auditorium for the last few shows and appeared in the Freshman Talent Show last year.

Miss Beskind also performed in the show last year, and currently sings with The Commodores, a campus dance band.

Leibau, pianist gave his junior recital in Opperman Hall last year, and is the accompanist for the University Singers.

Judges for the talent show were: Miss Katherine Warren, Dean of Women; Dr. Wylie Housewright, School of Music; Miss Nancy Smith, modern dance instructor; and students Donna Leto and Phil Knight.

Fee Raise . . .

Board tentatively shaved some $8,000,000 off the proposed operating budgets of the state universities and other institutions under the Board.

The cut still leaves an approximate 20 per cent increase in the budget over the present biennium. The new budgets are based on the $15 per semester increase.

The budget commission and legislature must vote on the overall University budgets which are finally sent through by the Board of Control.

Hendricks feels that this is probably the reason for the confusion over approval of the fee raises.

According to a ruling passed by the legislature in May, 1957, it is illegal for building fees to be increased by the Board of Control. An act of the legislature will be necessary to up the allotments for construction to those proposed by the Board.

If these are not approved the extra funds will revert into the general operations pools of the two universities.

Candide, Moon Play Opening This Week

Comedy Starts Thursday Night At Conradi

By DEANNA MORRIS
Flambeau Staff Writer

The curtain rises on Jean Anouilh's Ring Round the Moon Thursday at 8:15 p. m. in the Conradi Theater.

The production, first of the Speech Department's annual series, will run for three nights. Student tickets can be bought at Westcott ticket booth for 50 cents plus the activity book coupon

Tickets will be sold to non-students for $1. Tickets may also be picked up at the box office in Conradi Theater.

Stanley DeHart, Cay Cranford, Susan Caffrey and Jean Hayden lead a cast of thirteen The entire cast includes DeHart, as Hugo and Frederic; Ralph Black, Joshua; Miss Cranford, Diana; Miss Caffrey, Madame Demortes; Miss Hayden, Isabel

THE CAST

Others are George Goldstein, Patrice, Barbara Rush, Capulet; Steve Kleid, Messerschmann; Bill King, Romainzille; and Barbara Speisman, Mother.

Also included are: Jane Seymour, Lady India; Jerry Leverett, General; and Beverly Davenport, Footman.

Jean Anouilh is also the author of Antigone and Time Remembered, which starring Helen Hayes, recently had a successful run on Broadway. The play was translated by Christopher Fry, who is himself a playwright of renown.

Jean Anouilh has received a reputation as one of the most significant playwrights of France through his ironic tragedies on classical themes and his completely non-realistic comedies

WORLD OF HIS OWN

In Ring Round the Moon, he creates a world of his own which has many incomplete yet pointed, similarties to life. His characters play at being somewhat reminiscent of people

A musical charade, the comedy plays with the game of love. Cupid is the central theme of the play, which spoofs the inconsistency of love. The lead portrays this in the fact that he plays twin brothers who are constantly mistaken for each other.

Music to enhance the comedy and characterize the play will be used as arranged and played on the piano by Robert Olotzbach. Scenery will be arranged by Charles I Reimer to create an air of charming abandon.

IRRA PETINA STARS IN CANDIDE

Artist Series Production Set For Tomorrow

By ROSA NELL WILSON
Flambeau Staff Writer

Candide, first Artist Series production of the 1958-59 season, will be presented at 8:15 p. m. Wednesday in Westcott Auditorium.

Based on a satire by the French writer Voltaire, the musical comedy featuring music by Leonard Bernstein was presented on Broadway in 1956

The play tells the story of the simple Candide, who travels from Westphalia to Buenos Aires and back, experiencing every type of misfortune, with a companion who nevertheless insists this is "the best of all possible worlds"

B'WAY STARS

Two stars of the Broadway show Robert Rounseville and Irra Petina, will repeat their roles in the current production, joined by Martyn Green as the optimistic tutor Pangloss.

Rounseville, who plays the hero, Candide, is an American tenor who won acclaim for his performance in the British film, "Tales of Hoffman."

Besides concert, opera and television appearances, he has appeared in "Showboat" and "Brigadoon" on Broadway and in the motion picture, "Carousel"

Green well-known for his appearances in Gilbert and Sullivan operettas, performed with Rounseville in Broadway productions of "Mikado" and "Pirates of Penzance" He has been seen on television in such shows as "Alice in Wonderland," "Pinocchio" and "The Importance of Being Earnest"

PLAYED CARMEN

Miss Petina, who played Carmen with the Metropolitan Opera Company, will portray the "delightful old crone" in Candide.

Also starring in the show, directed by David Alexander, are Mary Costa and Lee Bergere.

Voltaire's satire was transformed into a successful musical comedy with music by Bernstein, lyrics by Richard Wilbur, John Latouche and Dorothy Parker, and book by Lillian Hellman

An outstanding conductor, composer, pianist and lecturer, Bernstein is now assuming the principal conductorship of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra

BERNSTEIN

He has written several successful Broadway musicals, including "On The Town," "Wonderful Town," and the current hit, "West Side Story."

Bernstein is also well-known to television audiences through appearances on "Omnibus" and a series of programs for children.

Miss Hellman made her first endeavor in musical theater by writing the book for Candide. She has written a number of successful plays including "Watch on the Rhine," "Days to Come," "The Little Foxes," and "Montserrat"

The lyricist, Wilbur, is also a poet an dramatist, a native of New York and a teacher at Wellesley College He won the Prix De Rome in 1945 and translated Moliere's Misanthrope, which was produced in Boston and New York in 1956

Musical direction is by Samuel Krachmalnick who conducted the Broadway presentation. Concert adaptation is by Mike Stewart.

Prexy Tells Cabinet

Speakers' Bureau Gets New System

By MARTHA VEVERKA
Flambeau Staff Writer

Student Speakers' Bureau will begin operation in November under a new system. Art Moore, student body president, told Cabinet members last week at the group's regular session.

Instead of concentrating the plan into a one-week program as has been the policy in the past, Moore said, speakers will make talks throughout the entire year beginning next month.

"This will insure a more professional group of speakers," Moore added "and if needed the same persons will be sent out two or possibly three times during the year"

The Bureau plans to concentrate its efforts on high school groups rather than community organizations.

UNION COMMITTEE

A meeting of the student union committee met last week to discuss some of the plans, announced Nancy Denham, secretary of interior The committee plans to go before Senate to explain some of the misconceptions concerning the proposed building.

The Student Union also will be discussed at the Student Government Retreat to be held Nov 8 and 9 at the Reservation.

The Retreat will begin at 9 a.m Nov. 8 and will adjourn at 11 a.m. Nov. 9. The cost will be a minimum of $3, Moore announced.

Moore appointed Bill Smith, secretary of organizations, chairman of a newly organized student safety committee.

This committee will make suggestions concerning student safety to an Executive Safety Board headed by Chairman Rod Shaw, university business manager.

NO 'HONOR' WEEK

Don Reedy, secretary of honor, announced that there will be no honor emphasis week, but the program will be spread throughout the year.

He also announced that the honor committee has written letters to ten universities, half of which participate in an honor system and half of which do not A comparison of the different systems will be made.

Laura Cheek, secretary of state, announced that a tea has been scheduled for last year's student government officers to meet the new ones The tea will be held from 4 30 to 5:30 p.m. in Longmire.

Parties Plan Fund Drive

Florida State University's two political parties are planning to duplicate the methods whereby the national parties obtain revenue.

The Collegiate Party chairman, Bruce Brown, and the Student Party chairman, Ronnie Clark, announced yesterday that the two parties will join hands in a project to raise funds for the coming year.

The slogan for the fund drive will be the same as that used by the Democratic and Republican parties in their annual fund raising campaign: "Don't pass the buck Give a buck to the party of your choice"

The chairmen of both parties feel that they can produce better campaigns and more worthwhile projects to better student government by increasing the treasuries of their respective organizations.

The means of raising funds are limited to conventions and individual memberships at the present time "This will be an opportunity for the student body to insure a better student government by promoting the efficiency of a two-party system," declared Brown of the Collegiates.

QUEEN VOTING

The Homecoming Court of five members will be elected today from 41 candidates

Voting for the court will be only in Westcott Building, where pictures will be on display of the candidates. A ballot must contain five names or it will be disqualified, stated Sandra Rosenberg, secretary of elections.

The Queen will be chosen from the five finalists on Oct. 28 Her identity will be revealed at the Homecoming Pow-Wow, Oct 31, when she will be crowned with the traditional white-feather headdress.

Lynn LaGrange, last year's Queen will crown and present a trophy to the new Queen.

Fallon of the FSU Speech Department, president of the Florida Theatre Conference; and Maurice Geoffrey, past president and director of the Jacksonville Little Theatre. Confidence Needs Restoration

How much confidence do students have in the university infirmary?

As in every school, the infirmary suffers from the jibes of students. University hospitals, food services and registration lines are popular student gripes anywhere.

BUT IT SEEMS WORSE at Florida State. Even Dr. Edward F. Slosek, newly appointed chief physician of the infirmary, is of this opinion.

"Over 60 per cent of the students do not have the necessary confidence in our hospital for us to work well," Slosek said.

Slosek has taken up restoration of this confidence as his primary goal. He feels that if he can build a feeling of respect for infirmary services and facilities, his job will be largely accomplished.

THE CHIEF PHYSICIAN feels that student confidence is a large factor in the success or failure of infirmary treatments. "Some illnesses are partially psychological, and if the patient feels he's being cheated or mistreated, it makes his case harder to cure," he said.

Just what factors have contributed to the particular mistrust of the FSU infirmary?

THE ANSWER PROBABLY lies in the infirmary's history.

Students have been influenced by the high rate of turnover in hospital personnel during the past few years. There have been three head physicians in as many years and the staff of the infirmary is almost totally different from the one operating in 1955.

SUCH A TURNOVER leaves a question in observing minds.

Another factor is the inability of the infirmary to cope with the outbreaks of minor diseases which occur annually. Often these illnesses are of the type which cannot be cured by any miracle treatment.

At these times students crowd into the building, demanding attention—often for colds or nausea for which no treatment other than time has ever been developed.

"We can make patients feel better, but we can't cure colds or upset stomachs," Slosek said.

WHEN MANY STUDENTS with the same illness overload the hospital and the infirmary is not able to provide bed space or immediate cures, students begin to grumble.

Now we know the infirmary has much modern equipment and their physicians are qualified. Their problem is one common to all—money.

LOW SALARIES ATTRACT young doctors who soon leave for more lucrative practice. Thus the high turnover.

And the high turnover generates a lack of concern for the infirmary's long range welfare on the part of its administrators.

The doctors employed are often overloaded and lack the time to give patients more than passing attention. A ratio of four physicians to 7,000 students is not good.

CERTAINLY THE REDUCTION of 50c per student from the infirmary's budget will make the situation worse, not better. Yet the Board of Control just made this reduction.

We believe things are looking up for the infirmary despite this reduction of monies.

DR. SLOSEK has shown an interest in the infirmary—and an inclination to remain head physician for quite a while.

All he asks is more student confidence in the infirmary. You know confidence is a two way thing. If you have no confidence in the infirmary, how can you expect the infirmary staff to have confidence in the students.

We hope the infirmary personnel situation becomes more settled, that it receives more administration attention to its problems, and gains new sudent confidence.

Good To See Library Open

It was good to see the library open Sunday night. We notice many students took advantage of the opening to study and do research there.

We feel sure this will be the case of future Sundays during the year. The opening of the library marks another step in FSU's progress toward the ranks of a great university.

Later this year it may be possible to open the library until 11 p.m. head librarian Dr. N. O. Rush said. Sounds like a good idea to us!

Our thanks go to Dr. Rush and Dean of the Faculties Charles Davis in opening the library Sunday nights. And to the Student Senate.

Admirable student-administrative cooperation was shown here.

What Others Say

Dear Governor Faubus

Dear Gov. Orval Faubus:

I have written this letter in the behalf of my class mates in order to thank you for closing our school, Little Rock High.

We are all enjoying the extra vacation you have given us, and we are very glad you are governor of our state. Our parents say you have done the wrong thing, but they don't understand and just want us back in school because we pester them.

My mother doesn't like me to watch television all day, but it's lots of fun: and besides, it's educational: it is much more fun than reading books, anyway. I don't spend all of my time in the house, because my friends and I go to the movies, and we spend a lot of time in the empty lot down the street. There is a lot of glass to break and some old refrigerators and trunks and boxes and make swell hiding places. My mother warns me not to play there, because it's dangerous, but she doesn't understand.

I especially want to thank you, governor, for the stand you are taking and the gang all hope you will stick to your guns and keep the schools closed.

Sincerely yours,
JOHNNY (who still can't read)

Current Exhibition Must For Everyone

(Editor's Note: Miss Howe is the Flambeau Art Columnist for the year. Her columns will appear from time to time as new exhibitions are set up.)

By RHODA HOWE

There is a current exhibition in Tallahassee which is a must for everyone. The photography of Evon Streetman, a former student at Florida State University, will be on exhibition at the "little gallery" in the Lewis State Bank until November 7th.

"THE VILLAGE CHESS Player," "Make-up Artist," and "Ballet Legs" are excellent examples to illustrate Miss Streetman's Advertising Design training which can be detected in her decisive selection of the essential elements to tell a story within a limited area.

Evon's appreciation of texture and spatial relationship best seen in "Clapboard and Barbed Wire," "Sidewalk Art Show," and "Sonya Reclining" can be traced back to her years of experimental painting.

IN THE ARTS there is a moment when the artist decides that his work is complete and he stops. This moment of decision is most important, for to go on is to over-work and destroy. In photography there is the moment when lighting, background, model attitude and camera setting are in complete unity — and the cameraman makes the decision.

This is photography at its best and is well illustrated in the exhibition by the aforementioned "Village Chess Player," "The Charleston Dancer," the sensuous "Dancer" and the photo of the stained-glass artist titled "Dorothy."

The Angry Young Man

Drunken Hoodlums Aren't College Men

By FRED BURRALL

For the information of you sports addicts whose vision was obstructed by dripping umbrellas: FSU beat VPI 28-0. And for those of you who haven't tried it: soggy hot-dogs make excellent retaliatory weapons against those clods that drop beer bottle caps down the back of your raincoat.

I ACTUALLY WENT out in that rain and mud with a whole bunch of esprit de corps in my little heart to cheer FSU on to victory. It seems though, that there are a few groups of imbeciles on our illustrious campus who aren't happy unless they're making other people miserable.

When I first visited Campbell stadium the signs forbidding alcoholic beverages appeared ridiculous, but now I see that they are necessary. The exhibition of childishness at the game Saturday is the best I've witnessed since my kindergarten teacher ran out of things for us to break.

THROWING BEER CANS, screaming insults at women, and being unnecessarily boisterous is no way for even a high school boy to act. The young hoodlums that get completely plastered on 3.2 beer not only have no right to drink, but they don't even deserve the title of college men.

THE SIGNS AND REGULATIONS governing alcoholic beverages in the stadium are apparently not as effective as they should be in cutting down the menace of drunken college boys. The next step will probably be frisking everyone at the gate, or substituting for the half-time entertainment, sobriety tests.

This is not a new problem to Florida State, but it is one that needs some immediate action. Signs are not too effective with people that don't have sense enough to at least make believe they're heeding them.

Frosh Prexy Campaign Letters

Clendinen

DEAR FRESHMAN:

As you know, I am running for the office of Freshman Class President.

The work with which the president will be confronted is neither easy nor lacking in significance to the Freshman Class of FSU.

I AM CERTAIN that you understand that a job of this importance is difficult to obtain and even harder to manage efficiently.

I feel that I have the qualifications and high standards necessary to uphold the dignity of the position.

YOU, I AM SURE, feel a high sense of responsibility to your class. For this reason, I urge your support of my candidacy for Freshmen Class President.

There are no words, lines or tricky rhymes to go with the name Clendinen but Work

Thank you for your support.

Sincerely,
LARY A. CLENDINEN

Patrick

DEAR FRESHMEN

I wish to announce my candidacy for Freshman Class President, an office for which I consider myself well qualified.

Since July, when I began planning my presidential campaign, I have met and talked with all the major political leaders on this campus, I have visited other colleges and their student political leaders, and most important, I have talked with many hundreds of freshmen here at F.S.U. From the information I have gained from these sources, I have formed my campaign and platform. Although I do not have space here to include my platform, qualifications, and political inclinations, I wish to say that I do avidly and sincerely seek this position. I have never wanted anything as much as I want to serve YOU as your freshman class president.

I hope that I will have the opportunity to meet and talk with every freshman here at Florida State University, and I promise you that if I am elected, I will never give you reason to regret your faith in me. Thank you very much for your interest and when you go to the polls next Tuesday, Please remember, PARTICULAR PEOPLE PICK PATRICK FOR PRESIDENT.

Sincerely,
BOB PATRICK

Porter

DEAR MR. AND MISS FRESHMAN:

I believe that the office of President of your Freshman class is a position that cannot be over-looked. It is a position that will represent you as a body of students. It is a position that can never be looked down to and always can be looked up to.

You need a person with dependability, confidence and most of all one who will stand up for your rights as a student.

In this letter I am not begging for your vote: but just asking that you look at every competitor and choose the one whom you want.

If it's your desire, it's my wish!

Sincerely,
KIM PORTER

Put Nuclear Controls In Student Union

By ED CARHART

The current controversy over the student union bui[lding] indeed grieves me. I would like to make a modest proposal in [the] interest of resolving this debate.

As most of you know, FSU has ordered two giant ou[...] reactors. The first is to be delivered at the end of this [...] Due to a mix-up at state level, funds for the construction of a [...] to house the control panels have been frozen. No funds [...] control panel, and with no control panel the giant reactors [...] useless.

NOW HERE IS WHERE my proposal comes into play [...] not place the control panels in the student union? Think o[f] [...] boon to the students. Can you imagine the taste sensation [...] toast done in a nuclear reactor? The idea of the West [...] silverware being cleaned in such a device simply delights me.

Just get the picture now—A student walks up to a machine [in] the union and drops in his dime. Instead of hearing about [...] Dooley's troubles he could operate a 10 MEV tandem Van de G[raaff] positive ion accelerator.

WE HAVE ALL HEARD of talk about making the stu[dent] union the showplace of the South. This sounds too provincia[l] [...] me. Why stop with the South? Why not make it the showp[lace] of the world? In this age of science we must think big [...] what, I ask you, what could be bigger than over 14 tons of nuc[lear] reactors?

Let me add a word of caution at this point, however [...] very important to the cause which group we get to represent [...] After examining the various campus organizations, I feel [...] Spelunkers as a whole would be the best qualified to send [the] initial telegram to the governor.

"What, Me Worry!" Outlook Prevalent?

By KAY WRIGHT

The average college student's idea of keeping up with [the] world means listening to daily newscasts and reading a new[s]paper on Sunday afternoon.

FROM EAST ORANGE, New Jersey, and the editorial page of the Upsala College Gazette come words of wisdom concerning the "what, me worry?" outlook which seems to be the most prevalent in college students concerning current events.

Is the average student more than dimly aware of the complications of affairs at home and abroad? Or is he impervious to the news shaping his future?

AT PRESENT, he probably knows a little about Formosa, Little Rock, and the moon rocket. These situations have aroused him from his apathetic state long enough to allow snap judgments to be made. Upon these judgments he will probably base later opinions.

Too many of us accept the bare outlines of newscasts and of front-page stories without looking further into the problems at hand.

HOW MANY OF US listen to or view panel discussions on radio and television or read news analyses that clarify everyday news issues? The answer is very few.

It is evident that we are in times of crisis, when each side of a question should be understood. An enlightened populace would certainly find it easie[r to] resolve internal and externa[l dis]orders with more understanc[ing]. Because he merely attends [col]lege, the college man should [not] always be classified as the [one] who "knows."

NOT ALL COLLEGE stu[dents] choose wisely the newspaper [from] which to draw their conclus[ions] about the day's affairs. [...] of us are misled and misinfo[rmed] by reading the "sensational [tab]loids"—the newspaper that [...] lect to develop and analyze [the] news.

These sensational tabloids [...] though quite stirring when [mur]der, rape, or divorce are [con]cerned, are responsible for [fos]tering public apathy. Pe[ople] who read these papers are [...] always well informed and [...] develop a sort of "faith [...] "everything will turn out ri[ght]."

From this the "what [me] worry?" attitude has devel[oped]. As citizens of today, we [...] definite responsibilities in [the] shaping of the future.

Only by being informed [...] an up-to-date knowledge [...] full understanding of all a[...] will we be able to cope wit[h] [...] problems that confront us [...] and will undoubtedly face us [in] the future.

FSUers Speak About Place Of Christianity

By PAT SENN

Just what place—if any—does Christianity have in our ratio[nal] and scientific academic world?

Is it at best just a necessary crutch for the weak or unlear[ned] to lean upon?

OR IS THERE REALLY "life and life more abundant" to [be] found in its message of Christ as Savior and Lord?

The obvious person to ask these questions from would [be] an expert in the field—a theologian—but since this is unaccepta[ble] to so many people, let's ask some of our Florida State Univers[ity] Christian faculty members and students.

(Not as an attempt to prove anything in these few words, [but] to hear their personal beliefs as representative of hundreds [of] other Christians.)

WHEN ASKED IF THERE was a place for Christian faith a[nd] beliefs in academic and intellectual spheres, Dean of Stude[nts] R. R. Oglesby, who received his Ph. D. in political science, answe[red] emphaticly. He said, "I would personally like to give an unqu[ali]fied yes to this question.

"I believe that there are other ways of arriving at truth o[ther] than through the scientific methodology. The social scientis[t is] always frustrated by the patent fact that great things in hum[an] relations have been achieved when all of the 'social laws' poin[ted] to its impossibility."

DEAN OF THE SCHOOL of Public Administration and a P[hi] Beta Kappa, Dean Wilson Doyle said that he believed in a perso[nal] God, 'who loves each of us and with whom we can have close co[m]munion and fellowship." He continued, "To describe Him in [...] of His power and glory is beyond human capacity. I believe [...] closest we can come to describing Him is in the character a[nd] life of His Son, Jesus, as revealed in the New Testament."

Students like Joe Westhafer (basketball player, past presid[ent] of Sigma Chi, member of ODK) still believe in the Bible as [...] revealed Word of God. Joe said, "In the Bible we can find [...] answer to every question that we might have. There is no o[ther] book that can serve the same purpose."

WHEN ASKED WHAT CLAIM he felt Christ has on hi[s] [...] he answered, "My life belongs to God. While we fail to live up [to] His standards He has claim on each of us. There is no way to av[...] the judgment promised for every one of us."

Sophomore Marylyn Zibell, president of East Landis, mem[ber] of Alpha Lamba Delta and the Tri Delts, stated, "I believe t[hat] Christ is the only way by which man can come to know God [...] the fullest sense of knowing, although aspects of Truth are fo[und] in various other was as science, etc. Faith being the connect[ion] between God and man."

When asked what claim she considered that Christ had on [her] life, she answered, "Jesus Christ is not only a personal friend a[nd] savior but Lord demanding the whole person."

DEAN OGLESBY ADDED, "Christian faith offers a way [...] some profound truths in human affairs. In my limited knowled[ge] I know of no scientific method by which one could arrive at th[e] same truths. I believe the great scientists like Einstein a[nd] Millikan did not use the 'either or' approach, but felt an inter[...] compatibility between a great religious faith and profound scie[n]tific achievements."

SOUND GOOD! But let's see what Einstein himself had to sa[y]: "The most beautiful and most profound emotion we can [ex]perience is the sensation of the mystical. It is the power of [...] true science . . . To know that what is impenetrable to us rea[lly] exists, manifesting itself as the highest wisdom and the mo[st] radiant beauty which our dull faculties can comprehend only [in] their most primitive forms—this knowledge, this feeling, is at t[he] center of true religiousness."

So don't make the mistake of judging the reality and effecti[ve]ness of Christianity by the shallowness of the once-a-week-I-go-t[o-] church hypocrites—any more than you would measure the wo[rth] of a science by the eight o'clock sleeper in Chemistry 107.

Tribe Splashes By Virginia Tech, 28-0

By FRANK RAMOS
Assistant Sports Editor

Florida State's Seminoles splashed their way past Virginia Tech's Gobblers Saturday, 28-0, to chalk up their fourth win at home in as many games.

The Tribe evened the series with Tech at 2-2 before a rain soaked crowd of 8,000.

It took the Seminoles 11 plays and less than five minutes to take the lead for keeps. Using fullback Fred Pickard on eight of 11 plays, Vic Prinzi directed the attack for the opening score that started on the FSU 26.

A Prinzi pass to sophomore right half Jack Espenship from eight yards out for the touchdown sunk the Gobblers early.

The second FSU touchdown occurred in a flash. Halfback Bobby Renn faked a punt on the Tribe 28 and skirted his own left end for 72 yards to put the Seminoles ahead 13-0. A key block by end Tony Romeo cleared the way for Renn.

FRED PICKARD Florida State's powerful little fullback who was rated the sixth leading rusher in the nation last week. Pickard is a 160-pound junior from Columbia, Tenn.

BAD PASS

A bad pass from center on the extra point try enabled the Tribe to gain a two-point conversion. John Sheppard, usually adroit in the place kicking department took the bad pass and frantically looked for a receiver and then spotted Renn all alone in the end zone. Sheppard threw a wobbly pass which Renn caught for the two-points.

A Virginia Tech fumble that was recovered by end Pete Fleming led to the Tribe's third score. Prinzi passed to Romeo on the first FSU play from 24 yards out for the score to boost the FSU margin to 21-0. Sheppard's kick was good and the Seminoles led 22-0.

With Joe Majors directing the third team, the Seminoles marched for the fourth and final score. Starting on the FSU 44 Majors passed to right half Jim Hooks for 26 yards then Hooks took another Majors pass for another 10 yards.

Jim Calhoun picked up one yard then Majors dove over for the score from three yards out. Sheppard's kick was off and the final score read FSU 28 and VPI 0.

Frosh Lose Second Game To Purple Hurricane, 22-16

Furman's freshman football team took an early lead and never lost it, as it downed the Baby Seminoles of Florida State, 22-16, Friday night in Greenville.

The Purple Hurricane ran up 20 points in the first half as they scored once in the first period and twice in the second. With four minutes remaining in the first half, the FSU yearlings drove for their first score.

FSU SCORE

The drive, which started on FSU's 20, was highlighted by the passing of quarterback Billy Hampton who hit on five of six tosses. Hamilton's payoff pitch came on a six-yarder to halfback James Miller.

FSU came roaring back in the second half as Hampton uncorked a pass to halfback Charley Cannon which covered 54 yards. Fullback Paul Andrews busted for 16 more and a few plays later, Cannon charged over for the score from the six.

Furman's yearlings gained their final two points in the last quarter as they trapped Hampton in the end zone as he attempted to punt out.

Both teams garnered 14 first downs. Hampton completed 11 of 18 passes for 180 yards for the baby Tribe.

It was the second loss of the season for the Baby Seminoles.
